CORINTH—was formed from Hadley, April 20, 1818. A part of Moreau was annexed Jan. 28, 1848. It lies upon the Hudson, in the n.e. part of the co. The Kayaderosseras Mt. Range occupies the central and n. parts, and the Palmertown Mts. the s.e. corner. The declivities of these mountains are steep, rough, and broken, and their summits are rocky and mostly covered with forests. A valley 4 mi. wide separates the two ranges. The principal streams are the Hudson, forming the n.e. border, and Cole Brook, flowing along the s. foot of the mountains. The Great Falls, in the Hudson, are on the border of this town.² Among the mountains in the n. part are several fine lakes, the principal of which are Efnor, Hunt, Jenny, and Black Lakes. The soil is a sandy and clayey loam. Lumbering is extensively carried on, the Hudson River and small streams from the hills furnishing an abundance of water-power. Jessups Landing, (Corinth p.o.) on the Hudson, contains 3 churches and 88 dwellings; and South Corinth (p.v.) 1 church and 30 dwellings. The first settlement was made near S. Corinth, in 1790, by Fred. Parkman, Washington Chapman, Jeremiah Eddy, Jephtha Clark, and Jonathan Dewel.³ The first church (Bap.) was organized June 1, 1822.⁴

DAY—was formed from Edinburgh and Hadley, as "Concord," April 17, 1819. Its name was changed Dec. 3, 1827. It is the n.w. corner town of the co. Its surface is principally occupied by several spurs of the Kayaderosseras Mts. Oak and Bald Mts., the principal peaks, near the center of the town, are 900 feet above the river. The whole mountain region is wild, rugged, and rocky, and scarcely susceptible of cultivation. The Sacondaga River flows in a narrow valley through the s. part. Its course is tortuous, and it is navigable through the town. Paul, Glass House, and Allens Creeks are the other principal streams. Livingston, Sand, and Mud Lakes are small bodies of water in the n. part. The soil is a moderately fertile, sandy and clayey loam. Lumbering is extensively carried on. Huntsville (West Day p.o.) is a hamlet in the s.w. part. Day is a p.o. The first permanent settlers were Phineas Austin, James Thomas, and Dyer Perry, and families named Clay and Bond. The first religious meetings were held in the barn of Peter Van Vleck, in 1801-02. The first church (Bap.) was formed in 1809. The census reports 2 churches; Christian and Ref. Prot. D.

EDINBURGH—was formed from Providence, March 13, 1801, as "Northfield," and its name was changed April 6, 1808. A part of Day was taken off in 1819. It lies upon the w. border of the co., n. of the center. Its surface is principally occupied by two high mountain ridges separated by the valley of the Sacondaga River. The mountain regions are rocky and broken, with a thin, sandy or gravelly soil, and are covered with forests. Beechers Creek is a small mill stream w. of the river. The soil on the river flats is a good quality of clayey and gravelly loam. Lumbering is the chief occupation of the people. Batchelerville, (p.v.) on the e. bank of the Sacondaga, contains 30 houses; and Beechers Hollow, (Edinburgh p.o.) on the w. side of the river, 12. The first settlers came in about 1790 and located in the valley below "Fish House."⁵ The first church (Bap.) was organized in 1798, by Rev. Mr. Munroe, from Galway.⁶ Traces of an ancient Indian burial place are visible on the s. bank of the Sacondaga, near the border of Day.⁷

GALWAY⁸—was formed from Ballston, March 7, 1792. Providence was taken off in 1796. It lies on the w. border of the co., s. of the center. Its n. half is occupied by a group of rounded hills forming the southern continuation of the Kayaderosseras Mts. The surface of the s. half is gently undulating. The principal streams are head branches of Feegowesee and Calderwood Creeks and the Mourning Kil. The soil is generally a heavy clay, intermixed in places with sand and gravel. Galway, (p.v.) near the center of the town, was incorp. April 18, 1838. It contains 3 churches, a female seminary,⁹ and about 45 houses; West Galway, (p.v.) on the border of Fulton co., contains 1 church and 20 houses. Yorks Corners, (E. Galway p.o.) in the n.e.

⁴ There are 3 churches in town; Bap., Presb., M. E.

⁵ In 1791 the following persons were living in the valley, viz.: Moses Crane, Jacobus Filkins, Daniel Washburn, John Sumner, Obadiah Perry, and Saml. Rogers. Daniel Abbott, from Conn., taught the first school, in 1794: — Chatfield kept the first store, in 1796; Isaac Deming built the first gristmill, in 1793; and Palmer Munroe, the first woolen factory, in 1808.

⁶ The census reports 3 churches; 2 M. E., Presb.

part, Mosherville, (p. o.) near the n. border, Whiteside Corners, (p. o.) in the n. w., South Galway (p. o.) and North Galway (p. o.) are hamlets. The first settlers, from Galway, Scotland, located in town in 1774.¹ Rev. Simeon Smith, from Canterhook, came in town in 1778, and located near Yorks Corners.² He formed the first religious society (Bap.) during the following year.³

GREENFIELD—was formed from Saratoga and Milton, March 12, 1793. A part of Hadley was taken off in 1801. It occupies a position a little n. w. of the center of the co. The Palmerstown Mountain Range extends along the e. border, and the Kayaderosseras Range occupies the w. part of the town. A valley 6 mi. wide separates these ranges. The principal streams are the Kayaderosseras and its branches. The soil is generally a gravelly loam intermixed with clay. Sections of the surface are very stony. Iron ore has been found in the e. part. Greenfield Center (p. v.) contains 2 churches. Pop. 85. Jamesville, (Middle Grove p. o.), on the s. border, contains 1 church, 2 paper mills, and 31 houses; Mount Pleasant, (p. v.) in the n. w. corner, a glass factory and 140 inhabitants; and Porters Corners, (p. v.), near the center of the town, 2 churches and 20 houses. West Greenfield, (p. o.), North Greenfield, (p. o.), and Pages Corners are hamlets. — Haggerty and — Root located near Haggerty Hill in 1784.⁴ Rev. Elias Gilbert was the first preacher, in 1792. The census reports 9 churches in town.⁵

HADLEY—was formed from Greenfield and Northumberland, Feb. 27, 1801. Its boundaries were amended Feb. 28, 1808. Corinth was taken off in 1818, and a part of Day in 1819. It lies upon the Hudson, in the n. e. corner of the co. A large share of its surface is occupied by the peaks and ridges of the Kayaderosseras Mts. Mt. Anthony is an isolated peak in the s. e. part.⁶ Sacondaga River flows through the s. part. Its valley is narrow; and below Conklingville its current is rapid and frequently interrupted by falls. The soil generally is a coarse, yellowish, unproductive sand and gravel. Lumbering and tanning are extensively carried on. Conklingville, (West Hadley p. o.) on the Sacondaga, in the w. part of the town, contains 1 church, a large tannery,⁷ and 39 houses. Hadley (p. o.) is a hamlet at the junction of Sacondaga and Hudson Rivers. Richard Hilton commenced the first settlement, just after the close of the Revolution, on the Hudson.⁸ The census reports 2 churches in town; a F. W. Bap. and a Wes. Meth.

HALF MOON⁹—was formed as a district, March 24, 1772, and as a town, March 7, 1788. Its name was changed to "Orange" April 17, 1816, and the original name was restored Jan. 16, 1820. Waterford was taken off in 1816, and Clifton Park in 1828. Its surface is undulating and broken by the narrow ravines of small streams. Hudson River forms the e. boundary, and the Mohawk a portion of the s. The river intervals are about $\frac{1}{2}$ mi. wide, and are bordered by a line of steep, clay bluffs 60 to 100 feet high. The other streams are Anthonys, Dwaas, and Steens Kils. The soil is a clayey and gravelly loam upland, and a fine quality of alluvium in the intervals. Crescent¹⁰ (p. v.) is a canal village near the center of the s. border of the town. Pop. 593. Middletown, (Half Moon p. o.), $1\frac{1}{2}$ mi. e. of Crescent, has a pop. of 230; Mechanicsville, (p. v.), at the mouth of Anthonys Kil, lies mostly in Stillwater. Pop. in Half Moon, 495. Clifton Park (p. v.) is on the w. line. Newtown, Smithtown, and Grays Corners are hamlets. The first settlements are supposed to have been made between 1680 and '90, by Germans, on the Mohawk Flats.¹¹ The first church (Ref. Prot. D.) was organized in 1800.¹²

¹ Among the early settlers were John and James Major, John McClelland, Wm., Robt., and Alex. Kelsey, and John McHarg, who all came over in the same ship, in 1774. The first death was that of James Major, killed by the fall of a tree, Sept. 11, 1776; John McClelland or — Prendergast kept the first store, in 1780; Daniel Campbell built the first gristmill.

³ The census reports 6 churches in town; 2 Bap., Christian, Friends, M. E., and Presb.

⁵ 8 Bap., 2 M. E., 2 Friends, Cong., and Univ.

⁸ Alex. Stewart settled on the Hudson in 1788; Elijah Ellis, on the s. side of the Sacondaga, — Ricard, on the n., and Henry Walker, at Hadley, in 1790. — Wilson taught the first school, in 1791-92. Delane & Hazard built the first sawmill, in 1791; and Alex. Stewart, the first gristmill, in 1803. Jonathan Flanders kept the first inn, and Jeremy Rockwell the first store, in 1807. Col. Gordon Conkling built the tannery at Conklingville and placed the first steam tug on the river.

⁹ Named from the crescent shape of the land between the Hudson and the Mohawk.

¹² The census reports 7 churches in town; 3 M. E., Bap., Wes Meth., Presb., and Friends.

MALTA—was formed from Stillwater, March 3, 1802, and a part of Saratoga was annexed March 28, 1805. It lies upon the w. bank of Saratoga Lake, s. e. of the center of the co. Its surface is chiefly an undulating upland, 60 to 80 feet above Saratoga Lake, and broken by the deep gulleys of small streams. The streams are Kayaderosseras Creek, forming the n. boundary, Ballston Outlet Creek, an inlet, and Anthonys Kil, the outlet of Round Lake, and Drummonds Brook, flowing into Saratoga Lake. Round Lake, in the s. e., is nearly circular, and 1 mi. in diameter. A swampy region covering an area of several hundred acres lies in the n. e. part of the town, at the mouth of the Kayaderosseras. The soil is principally a light, sandy loam, with clay and muck in the lowlands. Dunning Street, (Malta p. o.,) near the center of the town, contains 1 church and 17 houses. Maltaville, (p. o.,) in the s. part, Malta Ridge, in the n., and Halls Corners, are hamlets. The first settlers were two men named Drummond and McKelpin, who came before the Revolution and located w. of the lake.¹ The census reports 5 churches in town.²

MILTON—was formed from Ballston, March 7, 1792, and a part of Greenfield was taken off in 1793. It lies a little s. of the center of the co. Its surface is moderately hilly in the n., and undulating in the s., with a slight inclination toward Kayaderosseras Creek, which flows s. e. through the center of the town. This stream has a rapid fall and furnishes a valuable water-power. Glowegee Creek, from the w., is its principal tributary. In the n. part are limestone ridges, extensively quarried for building stone and lime. The Saratoga mineral spring region extends through the s. e. part. The soil is generally a sandy loam. Ballston Spa, (Ballston p. o.,) the co. seat, was incorp. March 21, 1807. It is situated on Kayaderosseras Creek, in the s. e. corner of the town. It contains the co. buildings, 2 seminaries,³ 5 churches, 2 printing offices, and several manufacturing establishments.⁴ Pop. 2,285, of which 1,941 are in this town. This village has long been celebrated for its mineral springs.⁵ Rock City Mills (p. v.) contains 3 paper mills and 34 houses; West Milton (p. v.) a church, a paper mill, a shingle mill, a hoe factory, and 40 houses; Bloodville a scythe, edge tool, and knitting factories, and 40 houses; and Factory Village 2 paper mills and 22 houses. Milton Center and Cranes Village are hamlets. The first settlement in town was made by David Wood and his sons Stephen, Benj., Elijah, Nathan, and Enoch, who purchased 600 acres and moved into town before the Revolution.⁶ The first church (Bap.) was organized Jan. 22, 1793.⁷

MOREAU⁸—was taken from Northumberland, March 28, 1805. A part was annexed to Corinth in 1848. It lies in the great bend of the Hudson, in the n. e. corner of the co. The w. part of the town is occupied by the rocky and precipitous peaks of the Palmertown Mt. Range. The central and e. portions are undulating and broken by the narrow ravines of small streams. The Hudson River forms the n., the e., and a part of the w. boundary of the town. Upon its course are numerous rapids and waterfalls.⁹ The Snook Kil and its tributaries drain the s. part of the town. The soil is generally a light, yellow, sandy loam, but in the s. and w. are tracts of clay and gravel. South Glens Falls, (p. v.,) on the Hudson, opposite Glens Falls, contains several manufacturing establishments;¹⁰ pop. 513. Fortsville, (p. v.,) in the central part, contains 25 houses. Clarks Corners, Reynolds Corners, and State Dam are hamlets. Moreau Station is a p. o., situated on the R. & W. R. R. Settlements are said to have been made before the Revolution; but their history is only a vague tradition.¹¹ The first church (Bap.) was built in 1795.¹²

¹ These men were suspected of toryism and were driven from the co. Michael Dunning, with 6 sons and 3 daughters, from Conn., came into town in 1777-78. John Rhoades and Timothy Shipman were the first settlers on Malta Ridge; Robt. and John Hunter and Jehial Parks located at Maltaville about the commencement of the Revolution.

² 2 M. E. Cong., Prot. Meth., and Presb.

³ The Ballston Spa Institute, for boys, was established in 1846. The Ballston Spa Academy was opened in 1855.

⁴ In the village are a cotton, oilcloth, edge tool, 2 seamless bag, and 2 knitting factories, a tannery, and 2 gristmills. A mfg. co. was incorp. here March 10, 1810.

water is similar to that of the Saratoga Springs, only less strong. Gas is copiously discharged with these waters.

⁷ The census reports 8 churches in town; 2 Bap., 2 M. E., 2 Presb., Prot. E., and R. C.

⁸ Named from Marshal Moreau, who visited the U. S. in 1804-05.

¹² The census reports 5 churches; Bap., Cong., M. E., Union, and Friends.

NORTHUMBERLAND—was formed from Saratoga, March 16, 1798. A part of Hadley was taken off in 1801, Moreau in 1805, and Wilton in 1818. It lies upon the Hudson, n. of the center of the co. Its surface is level or undulating and broken by deep ravines. A line of clay and slate bluffs, 30 to 100 feet high, extends along the river. Snook Kil and its tributary, Beaver Dam Creek, are the principal streams. The soil is generally a light, sandy loam. This town shares with Fort Edward the Fort Miller Falls.¹ Gansevoort,² (p. v.) on Snook Kil, in the n. part of the town, contains 2 churches and a pop. of 162. It is a station on the S. & W. R. R. Bacon Hill³ (p. o.) and Northumberland, (p. o.) in the s. e. part of the town, are hamlets. Fort Miller was built in this town in 1755, under the direction of Col. Miller. It was located upon the flat, above the rapids, and was enclosed on three sides by the river. A blockhouse was built on the heights that commanded the position on the w. The first settlers probably came in before the Revolution. Among them was a man named Munroe,⁴ who built the first sawmill, at Gansevoort.⁵ There are 4 churches in town.⁶

PROVIDENCE—was formed from Galway, Feb. 5, 1796, and Edinburgh was taken off in 1801. It lies near the center of the w. border of the co. Its surface is mountainous in the n. e. and broken and hilly in the s. w. The high regions along the n. and e. borders are mostly covered with forests. Hagadorns, Hans, Cadmans, and Frenchmans Creeks, small mill streams rising in the mountains and flowing s. w. into Fulton co., are the principal watercourses. The soil is chiefly a coarse, yellow sand or gravel of poor quality. Large tracts are stony and rocky. Wooden ware, leather, and lumber are extensively manufactured. Barkersville (p. o.) and Hagadorns Hollow are hamlets. Providence and W. Providence are p. offices. The first settlement was made previous to the Revolution, but the settlers were driven off during the war. Among the first settlers after the war were Nathaniel Wells and Seth Kellogg.⁷ There are 3 churches in town; Bap., Christian, and M. E.

SARATOGA⁸—was formed as a district, March 24, 1772, and as a town, March 7, 1788. Easton (Washington co.) was taken off in 1789, a part of Greenfield in 1793, Northumberland in 1798, a part of Malta in 1802, and Saratoga Springs in 1819. It lies upon the Hudson, near the center of the e. border of the co. A range of high, rounded, and sometimes terraced hills extends n. and s. through the central and w. parts. These hills rise 450 feet above the Hudson and slope in every direction. Narrow alluvial flats bordered by high clay bluffs extend along the Hudson. Saratoga Lake forms a portion of the w. boundary. Fish Creek, the outlet of the lake, flowing through the n. part of the town, is the principal stream; and upon it are several fine mill sites. The other streams are small brooks. The soil n. of Fish Creek is light and sandy, and in the remaining parts of the town it is a gravelly and clayey loam. Three mineral springs, known as "Quaker Springs," issue from the Hudson River slate, in a ravine a little s. e. of the center of the town.⁹ Schuylerville,¹⁰ (p. v.) incorp. April 16, 1831, is situated on the river, at the mouth of Fish Creek. It contains 4 churches, the Schuylerville Academy, a newspaper office, a bank, cotton factory, and foundery; pop. 1,184. Victory Mills, (p. v.) situated on Fish Creek, contains 1 church, a machine shop, and an extensive cotton factory;¹¹ pop. 729. Quaker Springs, (p. v.), near the center of the town, contains 1 church and 22 houses. Grangerville, (p. o.) on Fish Creek, is a hamlet. Deans Corners (p. o.) and Coveville are hamlets. Settlement was begun in the early part of the last century, upon the Hudson.¹² The first church (Ref. Prot. D.) was formed before the Revolution.¹³ The census reports 7 churches in town.¹⁴

SARATOGA SPRINGS—was formed from Saratoga, April 9, 1819. It occupies a nearly central position in the co. Its surface is rolling or moderately hilly. Kayaderoseras Creek

⁴ Munroe was a tory, and fled to Canada, and his property was confiscated.

⁸ Written "Saraghtoga" until about 1793. Upon the old map of the Kayaderoseras Patent this name is spelled "Saraghtoga."

The name was first applied to a settlement on the Hudson, in the vicinity of the present village of Schuylerville. It is said to signify "swift water," and was applied to the rapids in the river, in contradistinction to still water, just below.

¹¹ There are 466 looms in this factory. In 1887, 3,566,411 yds. of print cloths and silses were manufactured.

and Saratoga Lake, forming the s. boundary, are skirted by a line of low bluffs. The streams are Ellis and Owl Pond Creeks. An extensive tract lying n. of Saratoga Lake and along the course of Owl Pond Creek is low and swampy. The soil is an inferior quality of yellowish, sandy loam. The far famed mineral springs, which give to the town its name, are situated about 3 mi. n.w. of Saratoga Lake. They are near the center of the mineral spring region, which has a radius of nearly 10 mi.¹ Saratoga Springs (p. v.) was incorp. April 17, 1826. It contains 2 female seminaries,² 7 churches, 2 banks, 5 printing offices, 2 public halls, 22 hotels,³ and several sanitary institutions.⁴ Pop. 5,129. The business of the village is principally connected with the entertainment of strangers during the fashionable watering season. The springs are on that part of the Kayaderoseras Patent that fell to the share of Rip Van Dam. Sir Wm. Johnson is said to have been the first white person who ever used the Saratoga waters for medicinal purposes. In 1767 he was brought to the place on a litter, and, after remaining several days, he was able to return on foot. His example was followed, and the visits of invalids soon became of frequent occurrence. In 1773, Derick Scowton made the first clearing and erected a hut. He was followed soon after by George Arnold and Saml. Norton.⁵ In 1783, Gen. Schuyler cut a road through from Fish Creek, and spent several weeks here, living in a tent. The next year he erected a framed house, (the first in town,) and annually afterward until his death he spent a part of the summer here with his family.⁶ Several prominent men have resided in the village.⁷ The census reports 7 churches in town.⁸

¹ High Rock Spring, the first discovered of these, was so named from a pyramidal mound of calcareous tufa 34 feet high and 24 feet in diameter at the base which has been formed around it. An aperture 1 foot in diameter opens from the top of the rock downward, in which the water generally rises 1½ feet above the surface of the ground. It is said that the water once overflowed the top; but at an early day the rock was cracked by the fall of a tree, and the water sunk to its present level. Congress Spring was discovered in 1792, by a hunting party, and named in compliment to John Taylor, one of the number, who had been a member of the Continental Congress. The present spring was obtained by sinking a well in the bed of the stream near the original fountain. The Columbia Spring, a few rods s.w. of the latter, is chalybeate, and constantly boiling from the escape of gas. It was opened in 1806, by G. Putnam. The Hamilton Spring, 50 rods n. e. of Congress, was discovered by G. Putnam, and brought into use by Dr. Clarke. The Pavilion Fountain, opened in 1839, has a smart, pungent taste. The Iodine Spring, situated a few rods n. of High Rock, was opened in 1839. The water contains a large proportion of iodine and very little iron. This spring has sometimes been called the Walton Spring, from Henry Walton, a large proprietor of lands in the vicinity. The Empire Spring, the most northerly in the village, was opened in 1846. It discharges 75 gallons per hour. The Washington Spring, 50 rods s. w. of Congress Spring, was opened in 1804. Putnam Spring is in the immediate vicinity. Flat Rock Spring, 100 rods n. e. from Hamilton, is chalybeate. Red Spring is 90 rods n. e. of High Rock; and Monroe Spring, 15 rods s. of Flat Rock. Ten Springs were discovered in 1814, 1 mi. n. e. of the village. Ellis Spring is situated in a ravine 2 mi. s. w. of Congress. There are several other springs in the immediate vicinity. Baths are connected with most of these springs, and an immense trade has sprung up in the bottling and sale of the water. The temperature of the fountains ranges from 48° to 61°, and it is not sensibly affected by the seasons. The following table gives an analysis of several of these springs. The figures show the number of grains in a gallon of water.

² Temple Grove Female Seminary, a boarding school, established in 1863, (see p. 761.) and The Saratoga Female Seminary.

³ Several of these hotels are among the most extensive in the country. Union Hall was built in 1802, by G. Putnam; The Columbian, in 1808, by Jotham Holmes; Congress Hall, in 1812, by G. Putnam; The Pavilion, in 1819, by Nathan Lewis; and The United States, in 1824, by Elias Benedict. All of these have been enlarged since their erection.

⁶ Alexander Bryan and Henry Livingston were the first settlers after the war. Gideon Putnam came in 1789. Mr. P. built the first sawmill, the first large hotels, and opened several of the springs. Dr. Clement Blakely, the first physician, came with Putnam, and remained 3 years. John and Ziba Taylor opened the first store, in 1794; Robt. Ellis and Geo. Peck built the first gristmill, in 1814; and Ward & Rogers, the first clothing works, in 1815. Henry Walton resided here for several years. He was proprietor of the whole village n. of Congress St. Several of the noted springs were on his estate.

taken off in 1789, and Malta in 1802. It lies upon the Hudson, s. e. of the center of the co. It is uneven in the s. and moderately hilly in the n. The highest point is about 250 feet above the Hudson. A range of clay bluffs 60 to 100 feet high borders upon intervals of the Hudson and Anthonys Kil. The streams are generally small brooks flowing in deep gullies worn in the drift deposits.¹ The n. w. corner borders upon Saratoga Lake. The river intervals are alluvial. West of the river bluffs is a wide belt of heavy clay; and in the s. w. part is a sandy tract interspersed with swamps. Upon the lake shore is a sulphur spring.² Stillwater, (p. v.) incorp. April 17, 1816, is situated on the Hudson. It contains 4 churches, and manufactories of lumber, paper, woolens, and castings. Pop. 552. Mechanicville, (p. v.) incorp. July 16, 1859, situated on the Hudson, at the mouth of Anthonys Kil, on the line of Half Moon, is a station on the Rensselaer & Saratoga R. R. It contains 5 churches, a printing office, and an extensive linen thread manufactory.³ Pop. 1,111,—616 in Stillwater, 495 in Half Moon. Bemis Heights,⁴ (p. o.) on the Champlain Canal, near the Hudson, and Ketchums Corners (p. o.) are hamlets. This town was included in the Saratoga Patent of 1684; and settlement was commenced about 1750.⁵ The first church (Cong.) was established in 1763.⁶ There are 8 churches in town.⁷

WATERFORD⁸—was formed from Half Moon, April 17, 1816. It lies at the junction of the Hudson and Mohawk Rivers, in the s. e. corner of the co. Its area is about 7 sq. mi. Its surface is mostly an upland, 50 to 100 feet above the river. The Mohawk is bordered by an almost perpendicular range of slate bluffs, and the Hudson Valley by a range of clay bluffs. The soil is a sandy, clayey, and alluvial loam of great fertility. The falls in the Mohawk furnish a valuable water-power. Waterford,⁹ (p. v.) incorp. April 6, 1801,¹⁰ situated on the Champlain Canal, near the confluence of the Hudson¹¹ and Mohawk Rivers, is a station on the Rensselaer & Saratoga R. R. and the Albany & Northern R. R. It contains 6 churches, a newspaper office, a bank, and several manufacturing establishments.¹² Pop. 3,083. Settlement was commenced by the Dutch at a very early day. The census reports 7 churches in town.¹³

WILTON—was formed from Northumberland, April 20, 1818. It lies a little n. e. of the center of the co. The Palmertown Mts., with their steep, rocky slopes and broken, forest-covered summits, extend across the n. w. corner. The center and s. w. are gently undulating, or broken by low ridges. The principal streams are Snook Kil and Bog Meadow and Cold Brooks. The soil in the n. and s. e. is a yellow, sandy loam resting on clay, and in some places swampy. At the foot of the Palmertown Mts. is a belt of productive gravel and clay loam. A heavy growth of white and yellow pine originally covered the plains, but little woodland now remains. Near Emersons Corners is a spring of acidulous and carbonated water, and in the s. part of the town is a sulphur spring. Wilton (p. v.) contains 20 houses; and Emersons Corners, in the n. part of the town, is a hamlet. The first settlement was made in 1774 or '75, by Rowland Perry and his sons Samuel, John, Benj., Absalom, Roswell, Artemas, Rowland, and Joseph, from Dutchess co.¹⁴ Near the mill pond on Snook Kil are traces of Indian occupation; pestles, broken pottery, and flint arrow heads have been found in abundance. The census reports 4 churches in town.¹⁵

³ The American Linen Thread Manufacturing Co. was organized in 1852. The number of men employed is 125.

⁵ Among the first settlers were John Thompson, Geo. Palmer, — Benjamin, Dirck Swart, — Ensign, — Burlingame, and — Abel. The first gristmill was built by Geo. Palmer, before the Revolution.

⁶ This church was organized at Litchfield, Conn., in 1752, and in 1763 was removed to Stillwater. Rev. Robt. Campbell was the first pastor.

Banker was employed to lay it out into village lots. July 11, 1841, a destructive fire occurred, which destroyed 180 buildings.

¹⁰ On the 26th of March, 1794, Hezekiah Ketchum, Jacobus Van Schoonhoven, Matthew Gregory, Isaac Keeler, John Pettett, Duncan Oliphant, and Thos. Smith were constituted trustees of Half Moon Point.

¹³ Bap., Cong., M. E., Presb., Prot. E., Ref. Prot. D., and R. C.

¹⁴ John Stiles, Ebenezer King, John Laing, Peter Johnson, and Jas. and Wm. McGregor settled in town in 1776; and John Boyce, Robt. Milligan, John Kendrick, and Enoch M. Place in 1784. John Laing built the first sawmill in 1784-85, and Wm. McGregor the first gristmill, soon after the war. Stephen King kept the first inn, and — Ostrom the first store.

SCHENECTADY COUNTY.

THIS county was formed from Albany, March 7, 1809. It is centrally distant 20 mi. from Albany, and contains 221 sq. mi. The greater part lies between Mohawk River and Schoharie Creek,—one town only lying n. of the Mohawk. The surface consists of the Mohawk Valley and an upland, generally much broken by ridges and isolated hills, 200 to 350 feet above the river. The highlands are the northern continuation of the Helderbergh and Schoharie Mts. The underlying rock is generally the shales of the Hudson River group, which crop out in the valleys and the bottoms of the ravines. In portions of Glenville and Duanesburgh this rock is underlaid by birdseye limestone, from which are obtained both lime and stone for building. The greater part of the surface is covered with a thick deposit of drift, consisting principally of clay in the w. part and sand in the e. The rocks crop out on the banks of the streams and form the declivities of the steeper hills. The soil in the w. part is a tenacious, clayey loam, underlaid by hardpan on the hills, and in the e. a light, unproductive sand. The valley of the Mohawk consists of a deep, rich alluvium, well adapted to tillage, and extensively devoted to the cultivation of broomcorn.¹

The principal streams are Mohawk River, Schoharie Creek, and Normans Kil, and their branches. The valleys of these streams are generally bordered by the steep declivities of the uplands, rising to a height of about 300 feet. Many of the smaller streams have worn deep gullies in the loose drift deposits, giving to the surface a very broken character. These small streams are mostly dry in summer. The fine alluvial flats near Schenectady, extending 5 mi. w. on the s. side of the river, were called by the first settlers the "Bowloland." A tract 2 mi. in extent, n. of the river, was called the "Maalwyck;"² and a tract on both sides, 4 mi. w. of the city, was known as the "Woestina."³ A region immediately about Schenectady was called "Oron-nygh-wurric-gughre;" the hills s. were known as the "Yan-ta-puch-a-berg;"⁴ and those on both sides of the river above the city were called "Tou-ar-ou-ne." The streams of "Woestina" were "Verf Kil,"⁵ "Zantzee Kil," and "Righelbrigh Kil."⁶ The valleys are best adapted to tillage and the hills to pasturage.⁷ Manufactures are chiefly limited to the city of Schenectady.⁸ In Glenville are about a dozen broom factories, employing 450 persons.

The county seat is located at Schenectady City.⁹ The courthouse and clerk's office are both situated on Union St.: the former contains the courtroom, jail, sheriff's and supervisors' rooms,¹⁰ and the latter the clerk's and surrogate's offices. The poorhouse is located on a farm of 116 acres, on the Albany Road, just e. of the city. It has, on an average, about 75 inmates, and the farm yields a revenue of $1,200. There are 5 newspapers published in the co.¹¹

² "Arable Land."

⁷ "See-Sand Creek." ⁸ "Rail-bridge Creek."

¹¹ By the terms of the act making Schenectady the co. seat, the courthouse was to be built at the expense of the city. The first county officers were Gerrit S. Veeder, First Judge; Peter V. Veeder, Clerk; Jas. V. S. Riley, Sheriff; and Wm. J. Teller, Surrogate.

¹² The first courts were held in the City Hall, and afterward in the West College.

The Western Spectator was issued prior to 1807.

The Schenectady Cabinet was commenced in Jan. 1808, by Isaac Riggs. In 1850 it passed into the hands of S. S. Riggs, who continued it until 1887.

The Western Budget was issued a short time in 1809.

The Mohawk Advertiser was pub. in 1810 by S. Schermerhorn. The Floriad, 8vo, mo., was published in 1811.

The Schenectady Gazette was published in 1812, by Ryer Schermerhorn.

The Schenectady County Whip was issued in 1830, by C. G. and A. Palmer, and was continued until 1834.

The Schenectady Standard was published in 1831, by T. J. Sutherland.

The Schenectady Democrat was begun in 1828, by C. G. and A. Palmer. T. W. Flagg became its publisher in 1837, and the same year it was changed to

The Reflector and Schenectady Democrat. It has been successively published by G. Yates, E. H. Knapp, and A. A. Keyser, and is now published by Fred. W. Hoffman.

The Censor was published in 1834, by the students of Union College. The Parthenon, mo., was published in 1840-47 by the college students.

The Mohawk was published in 1838, by Riggs & Norris.

The Protestant Sentinel was commenced in 1836, by Rev. John Maxon, and continued 3 years.

The Wreath was started in 1836, by W. H. Burleigh, and continued 1 year.

Freedom's Sentinel was issued during the campaign of 1840, by Stephen S. Riggs.

The Antiquarian and General Review, mo., was started in 1846, by Rev. W. Arthur, and continued 2 years.

The Scroll, mo., was published a short time in 1849.

The Schenectady Democrat was founded in 1863, by Wm. M. Colborne and W. N. Clark. In 1867 it was sold to A. J. Thompson, and in April, 1868, to C. Thayer.

The great flat upon the Mohawk w. of "Fort Orange," and where the city of Schenectady now stands, was bought of the natives in July, 1661, in the name of Arent Van Corlaer;¹ and settlement was commenced during the same year. It was under the charge of 5 commissioners until Nov. 1, 1684, when Gov. Dongan granted a patent confirming previous rights and extending the territory.² On the night between the 8th and 9th of Feb. 1690, N.S.,³ the settlement—then consisting of about 80 houses—was surprised by a party of about 300 French and Indians, and nearly every house was burned. Sixty-three persons were killed, and 27 were carried to Canada as prisoners. The night was intensely cold, and the nearest place of refuge was Albany, to which a few escaped after much suffering.⁴ In 1702 R. Schermerhorn became sole trustee; and in 1705 a new patent was issued, conferring certain township privileges. On the 23d of Oct. 1765, the place was created a borough, with the rights and immunities incident to these corporations.⁵ From 1726 to the Revolution the township of Schenectady sent a representative to the General Assembly. During the war the village was fortified and garrisoned at the public expense, and many families from the Upper Mohawk sought protection here from the incursions of the Tories and Indians.⁶ For several years after 1779 a large number of friendly Oneida and Tuscarora families, driven from their homes by the hostile tribes, were supported in this vicinity at the expense of the General Government. At the return of peace the settlement shared in the general prosperity. A new impulse was given to business by the improvements effected by the Western Inland Navigation Co., which enabled large boats to make longer voyages.⁷ Upon the completion of the Erie Canal the Mohawk navigation was entirely superseded. For several years after the completion of the r. r. from Albany in 1831, large quantities of merchandise were sent here to be shipped on the canal, saving the delay of the circuitous route and numerous locks on the canal between Schenectady and Troy.⁸ In 1832 a r. r. was built to Saratoga, in 1835, to Utica, and in 1843, to Troy. In 1849 several plank roads were built, which since have been mostly abandoned.

DUANESBURGH⁹—was erected as a township, by patent, March 13, 1765, and it was first recognized as a town March 22, 1788. It lies in the s. w. corner of the co. Its surface consists of an upland, broken by the narrow valleys and gullies of small streams. Schoharie Creek forms a portion of its w. boundary, and Normans Kil flows through the s. part. The hills that border upon these streams are steep, and in some places rocky. The other principal streams are Corrys Brook, Chuctenunda Creek, and Bozen Kil. Maria Pond and Featherstone Lake are 2 small bodies of water in the n. e. part, about 250 feet above the canal. The soil is principally a stiff, clay loam, with a slight intermixture of gravel. It is best adapted to pasturage. Duanesburgh (p. v.) contains about a dozen houses, Quaker Street¹⁰ (p. v.) 30, Mariaville¹¹ (p. v.) 20, and Bramans Corners (p. v.) 18. Eatons Corners is a hamlet. Large tracts in this town were purchased by different parties between 1736 and 1770,¹² but no active measures of settlement were taken till about the time of its organization in 1765. During that year Duane, who had become an extensive proprietor, con-

The Evening Star, da., now published by W. M. Colborne.

³ The Schenectady Daily News was started in April, 1859, by Frederic W. Hoffman, E. F. Loveridge, editor.

⁴ The grantors were 4 Mohawk chiefs, named Cantuque, Sonarvetsie, Aladane, and Sodachdrasse. This grant was confirmed the next year, and the tract was surveyed in 1664. The inhabitants of Fort Orange, wishing to monopolize the Indian trade, presented to the settlers, before the land was received from the surveyor, a written pledge to abstain from trading with the Indians. A remonstrance against this injustice was signed by the following early settlers, viz.: A. Van Corlaer, Philip Hendrickson, Sanders Lendertsen Glen, Simon Volkrartsen, Pieter Soghmaekelyk, Teunis Cornelissen, Marte Cornelise, Willem Teller, Bastiaen De Winter for Catalyn, widow of Arent Andries de Voss, Pieter Jacobse Borsboom, Pieter Danielse Van Olinda, Jan Barentse Wemp, and Jacques Cornelise. Their resistance occasioned several years' delay in the survey of the lands.

⁷ Colden's Five Nations, 3d ed., I. p. 120.

⁸ This and West Chester were the only boroughs in the colony.

⁹ The place was never visited by a hostile army after 1690. The colonial statutes contain frequent provisions for the rebuilding, repairs, and supplies of this fort.

¹⁴ Named from a daughter of James Duane.

tracted with 20 Germans from Penn., of whom 16 came on and made a permanent settlement.¹ The first church (Christ's Ch., Prot. E.) was formed Aug. 3, 1795, and the church edifice was erected by Judge Duane. Rev. David Belden was the first rector.²

GLENVILLE³—was formed from Schenectady, April 14, 1820. It is the only town in the co. n. of the Mohawk. The central and w. parts are occupied by rugged and wooded hills abruptly rising from the valley of the river to a height of 300 feet. The e. part is nearly level. The streams are Crabbs Kil, Chaugh-ta-noon-da, Aalplaats,⁴ and Jan Wempe Creeks, and Verf Kil. The soil among the hills is a stiff clay, underlaid by hardpan, with an occasional outcrop of slate; and in the e. part it is a sandy and gravelly loam. The Mohawk intervalles are very fertile, and are chiefly devoted to the culture of broomcorn. Glenville (p. v.) contains 2 churches and 20 houses, Scotia⁵ (p. v.) 2 churches and 266 inhabitants, Reeseville 12 houses and a broom factory, and High Mills 13 houses, a grist mill, and woolen factory. Hoffmans Ferry⁶ (p. o.) is a hamlet and station upon the N. Y. C. R. R. East Glenville is a p. o. Bridges connect this town with Schenectady and Niskayuna. Settlements were made about 1665, and were among the earliest in the co.⁷ The Sanders House, in this town, was spared by the enemy when Schenectady was destroyed.⁸ There are 5 churches in town.⁹

NISKAYUNA¹⁰—was formed from Watervliet, (Albany co.,) March 7, 1809. A part of Schenectady was annexed in 1853. It lies upon the Mohawk, in the e. part of the co. Its surface is mostly upland, terminating in steep bluffs upon the river valley. The intervalles are very rich and productive. A strip of land about 1 mi. wide, extending back from the summits of the bluffs, has a hard, clay soil, and a considerable portion of it is swampy and unfit for cultivation. Further s. the soil is sandy. Watervliet Center (p. o.) is within the limits of this town. Niskayuna is a hamlet in the s. e. corner. The first settlements were made about 1640.¹¹ The canal crosses the Mohawk into this town upon a magnificent stone aqueduct.¹² There is 1 church (Ref. Prot. D.) in town.

PRINCETOWN¹³—was formed from Schenectady, March 26, 1798. It lies a little w. of the center of the co. Its surface consists of a broken upland, gently descending toward the s. e. The streams are Normans Kil in the s. and Zantzee Kil in the n.¹⁴ The soil is a heavy clay loam, underlaid by hardpan, and is best adapted to grazing. Princetown (p. o.) is a hamlet. The town was chiefly conveyed to Geo. Ingoldsby and Aaron Bradt, in 1737. Wm. Corry afterward became owner, and formed a settlement, which was long known as "Corrysbush." The town was thinly settled at the time of the Revolution. The Princetown Academy, a Presb. institution, was opened here, on an extensive scale, in 1853, and was discontinued in 1856. There are a Presb. and a Ref. Prot. D. church in town.

ROTTERDAM—was formed from Schenectady, April 14, 1820. A part of the city was annexed in 1853. It lies near the center of the co., upon the s. bank of the Mohawk. The surface consists of a broken, hilly region in the n. w., a level intervalle extending from the center toward the s., and a high plain in the e. The soil upon the w. hills is a tough clay, underlaid by shale, which frequently crops out. The central valley or plain, 5 mi. in extent, was called by the Dutch the "Bouwlandt." The soil is a deep alluvium. The e. plateau is sandy and barren. Rotterdam, Mohawkville, and Factoryville are hamlets.¹⁵ Settlements were first made about 1661.¹⁶ The first church was organized Aug. 29, 1800; Rev. Thos. Romeyn was the first pastor.¹⁷

² There are in town 5 other churches: Cameronian, Bap., Univ., Presb., and Quaker. ³ Named from the original patentee.

¹⁰ Said to be a corruption of Nis-ti-gi-loo-ne, or Co-nis-ti-gi-lo-nu, by which it is known on the old maps. The name is said to signify "extensive corn flats." The term was also applied to portions of Watervliet and Half Moon. Upon the advent of the whites this place was occupied by a tribe of Indians known as the "Onistigione."—Barber & How's Hist. Coll. N. Y., p. 608.

¹⁶ At this place is a twine and thread factory.

¹⁷ There are 3 churches in town: 2 Ref. Prot. D. and 1 M. E.

SCHENECTADY CITY—was patented, with certain municipal rights, Nov. 4, 1684; chartered as a borough Oct. 23, 1765; incorp. as a district, March 24, 1772, as a town, March 7, 1788, and as a city, March 26, 1798. Princetown was set off in 1798, Rotterdam and Glenville in 1820, and parts of Niskayuna and Rotterdam in 1853.¹ It is situated on the Mohawk, and on the borders of one of the finest intervals in the State. A considerable amount of trade is carried on in the city by means of the canal and the railroads that center here; but the people are more largely engaged in manufactures.² The engine houses and repair shops of the N. Y. C. R. R. Co. are very extensive; and one of the largest locomotive manufactories in the country is located here.³

This city is especially noted as the seat of Union College. This institution was incorp. by the regents, Feb. 25, 1795, and received its name from the cooperation and union of several religious denominations in its foundation.⁴ A fund was first raised by private subscription to erect the necessary buildings and to defray the expenses of opening the school;⁵ and this was increased by the avails of several lotteries authorized by the legislature,⁶ by grants of land and money from the State, and by private donations. The total amount received from the State, up to 1822, for permanent investment, was $331,612 13. In a will dated Dec. 28, 1855, Dr. Nott, the president of the college, bequeathed to the trustees $555,000 for specific purposes and an additional fund for miscellaneous expenses.⁷ The funds thus bequeathed were derived from the profits of certain investments of college funds, and amounts from other sources, which had been employed for the purpose of creating a fund for the endowment of the institution. The first college building was erected in the city;⁸ but in 1814 a tract of land upon an eminence n. of the city was purchased, and the two principal buildings were erected.⁹ The site commands an extensive view of the city, the river, and the valley. The faculty of the college now consists of a president, 12 professors, 1 lecturer, and 3 tutors. The total number of students is 420, and has not materially varied from this number for a great number of years, the junior and senior classes being invariably larger than those that preceded them. A considerable number of students derive aid from the State fund, which is extended to students of limited means without reference to the profession they intend to follow. The college has received from E. C. Delavan, Esq., a magnificent donation of minerals and shells, known as the "Wheatley Collection," which was purchased for this purpose at a cost of $10,000. Departments of Civil Engineering and Analytical Chemistry have been organized, and the facilities which they afford are of the most ample kind.

The Public Schools are under 8 commissioners, elected once in 2 years. There were, in 1857, 9 school districts, employing 3 male and 22 female teachers. The number of children between 4 and 21, was 3065, of whom 1729, or 56 per cent., attended the public schools.¹⁰

The first settlement was made in 1661, as already noticed.¹¹ As this was an advance frontier settlement, the compact part, at an early period, was enclosed by palisades. In 1690 the enclosure

⁴ Rev. Wm. Andreas opened the first grammar school, in 1771; and before the close of the year he proposed to change it to an academy. The Consistory of the Ref. Prot. D. church erected a small academy in 1785. The Schenectady Academy was incorp. Jan. 29, 1793, and was merged in the college in 1796. Rev. John Blair Smith was the first President. He was succeeded in June, 1799, by Rev. Jonathan Edwards, who remained until his death in Aug. 1801. Rev. Jonathan Maxcy was next elected president, and continued till 1804, when he resigned, and was succeeded by Rev. Eliphalet Nott, the present venerable president of the College.

⁵ In 1779, the inhabitants of the northern part of the State petitioned for the incorp. of a college, but without success. The petition was renewed in 1791, but did not succeed. In 1794 another effort was made, and a subscription of $7035 was raised from 99 persons in Albany, and of $3425 from 231 persons in Schenectady, for an endowment. This sum was afterward largely increased by subscription. The location was fixed at Schenectady, it is said, chiefly through the influence of Gen. Schuyler, and because of its then central location.

⁷ The items of this bequest are as follows:—

$225,000 for 9 professorships, with a salary of $1500 each.
$60,000 for 6 assistant professorships, at $800 each.
$60,000 for an astronomical observatory.
$20,000 for 60 auxiliary scholarships, of $10 and $12 per term.
$60,000 for 60 prize scholarships for undergraduates, of $15 and $18 per term; in certain cases to be increased to $24.
$45,000 for 9 scholarships for graduates or fellows, of $300 each.
$20,000 for a cemetery.
$10,000 for apparatus.
$5,000 for textbooks.
$30,000 for an eclectic library.
$5,000 for a geological and mineralogical cabinet.
$5,000 for a historical cabinet.
$10,000 for a lecture fund.

The miscellaneous fund was left discretionary with the trustees to fill deficiencies and extend the operation of any of the foregoing objects. At the time of this gift the greater part of the funds were invested in real estate in Greenpoint village, opposite N. York City.

⁸ This building, formerly known as "West College," was sold to the city, and, with an adjoining building, accommodates the 10 departments of the public schools of the city.

¹⁰ Total receipts, $14,428 06; total expenses, $14,423 06. Volumes in district libraries, 3046.

was in form of an oblong rectangle, with gates at the ends. The people, however, felt so secure that the gates were habitually left open, and no guard was kept; and hence it was easily entered by the enemy on the memorable 9th of Feb. 1690, N. S. The lives of 60 old persons and children were spared from the massacre. The settlement recovered slowly from the disaster, and not until the close of King William's War did it receive any considerable accessions. A new fort was built in May, 1690, which was garrisoned for many years. Another fort was built in 1735, and another in 1780.¹ The old fort stood at the intersection of Ferry and Front Sts. The first church (Ref. Prot. D.) was organized in 1684, and the building was erected on the s. end of Church St. in 1685. It was burned in 1690;² and a new building was erected, about 1702, on the site of the present church, corner of Union and Church Sts.³ St. George's Church (Prot. E.) was organized, in 1735, by Rev. H. Barclay, incorp. in 1766, and an edifice erected in 1768.⁴ The first mail was brought to the town April 3, 1763.⁵ The first English school was opened, under the care of Rev. Henry Barclay, in 1710.⁶ The Vale Cemetery Association was formed Feb. 25, 1858.⁷ The population of the city has slowly and steadily increased, although, from the setting off of portions of its territory, the census reports for some periods show an apparent decrease.⁸

² Rev. Peter Taschemaker, the pastor and first teacher, was killed, and all his papers were destroyed.

⁸ In 1699, 70 men took the test oath.

In 1710 there were 16 English and 100 Dutch families.

In 1714 the census reported 591 persons.

In 1790 there were s. of the Mohawk (in Schenectady, Princetown, Rotterdam, and a part of Niskayuna) 3472 persons. The following table shows the progress of population since 1820:—

SCHOHARIE COUNTY.

THIS county was formed from Albany and Otsego, April 6, 1795.¹ A small part of Greene was annexed in 1836. It is an interior co., lying s. e. of the center of the State, is centrally distant 35 mi. from Albany, and contains 675 sq. mi. Its surface is an upland, broken by mountains in the s. and by hills in the center and n. A northerly branch of the Catskill Mts. lies along the s. border, the highest summits of which are 3,000 ft. above tide. From them irregular spurs extend northward, occupying the greater part of the co. Many of the summits along the n. and w. borders are 800 to 1,000 ft. above the valleys and about 2,000 ft. above tide. In the n. the hills are generally rounded and are arable to their summits; but in the center and s. the declivities are steep and in many places precipitous. The high ridge along the e. border, and extending into Albany co., is known as the Hellebark Mts.

The hills derive their general features from the rocks that underlie them. The extreme n. part of the co. is terraced like the limestone region farther w. Toward the s. the hills become more steep; and in the shaly region they are broken by deep, irregular ravines. In many places the hills bordering upon the streams are 1,000 ft. high and in places very steep. Schoharie Creek flows n. e. through the co., a little e. of the center. It receives as tributaries Foxes Creek, Stony Brook, Little Schoharie Creek, Keyzers, Platter, and Manor Kils from the e., and Cripplebush, Cobles, Line, Panther, West, and Mine Kils from the w. West and Punch Kils are tributaries of Cobles Kil. Charlotte River, a branch of the Susquehanna, takes its rise in the w. part, and Catskill Creek in the s. e. part, having its source in a marsh called the Vlaie. Utayanthis² and Summit Lakes, two small ponds, are the only bodies of water in the co. The former is 1,900 ft. and the latter 2,150 ft. above tide.

The rocks in the co., commencing upon the n. border and appearing successively toward the s., are those belonging to the Hudson River group, Clinton group, Onondaga salt group, Helderbergh series, Hamilton group, Portage and Chemung group, and the Catskill group. The limestones are cavernous; and the minerals which they afford are particularly interesting to mineralogists.³ Drift is scattered over the co. to a limited extent. Waterlime is found, but is not now manufactured.

The soils are principally derived from the disintegration of the underlying rocks. In the n. the soil is a productive, clay loam, and in the center and s. it is a clay and sandy loam, the latter predominating upon the s. hills. The alluvial flats along Schoharie Creek are unusually fertile.

The co. is eminently an agricultural region. Spring grains are largely produced. Hops are cultivated in the w. part, and broomcorn upon the Schoharie Flats. Dairying is the principal business in the s. part. Very little manufacturing is done, except such as is customary in an agricultural region.

The county seat is located at the village of Schoharie.⁴ The courthouse is a fine edifice built of blue limestone, located near the center of the village. The jail is a stone building, situated in rear of the courthouse. The clerk's office is a small, fireproof building, upon the courthouse lot, nearly in front. The poorhouse is located upon a farm of 160 acres in Middleburgh, 5 mi. s. w. of the courthouse. The average number of inmates is 60, supported at a weekly cost of 75 cents each. This institution seems to be well managed and much above the average of similar institutions in the State.

The Albany & Susquehanna R. R. is located along the valleys of Schoharie Creek and Cobles

The original Indian name was To-wos-scho'her; and it has been written Shoary, Skohary, Schughhorre, &c.

² Utayanthis was the n. e. corner of the Hardenburgh Patent, and a distinguished landmark in early records.

Kil, through Esperance, Schoharie, Cobleskill, and Richmondville.¹ Several turnpikes and lines of plank road extend across the co.²

About thirty years previous to the advent of the whites, a number of Indians belonging to the Mohawks, Mohicans, Delawares, Tuscaroras, and Oneidas united together, formed the Schoharie tribe, and took up their abode along Schoharie Creek.³ Their principal chief was Ka-righ-on-don-tee, who had been a prisoner of the French in Canada and had married a Mohawk woman. This tribe was subordinate to the Six Nations. They could bring into the field about 600 warriors, and in the wars that ensued they steadily espoused the cause of the British. At an early period, with the aid of the Colonial Government, they erected several strongholds to protect themselves from the attacks of the Canada Indians. A band of 200 Indians remained in the valley, at peace with the settlers, until the commencement of the Revolution. Efforts were made to induce them to remain neutral during the war; but the offers of the British were so tempting that at last they took up arms against their neighbors. Previous to this a pestilence had swept off the greater part of the tribe, though the whites were not in the least affected by it.

The first white settlement was made by a colony of German Palatinates, in 1711. These people had previously settled at East and West Camp, on the Hudson. Their number is estimated at 600 to 700. They settled in 7 clusters, or villages, each under a leader or head man, from whom the dorf, or village, was usually named.⁴ The Dutch soon after began a settlement at "Vroomansland," on the w. side of the creek, 2 or 3 mi. above the German settlement.⁵ The Palatinates at first did not secure a patent for the lands they occupied, and a short time after their settlement Nicholas Bayard appeared as agent of the British Government, and offered to give the settlers deeds for their lands; but he was assailed by a mob and was obliged to flee for his life. Upon reaching Schenectady he sent back word that for an ear of corn each he would give a clear title to the lands occupied by each; but this offer was rejected. He returned to Albany and sold the tract to 5 persons at that place.⁶ A sheriff, named Adams, was sent to arrest some of the trespassers; but no sooner was his business known than he was assailed by a mob and ridden upon a rail. For a considerable time after this outrage none of the German settlers dared visit Albany; but after a time they ventured to do so, and were at once arrested and thrown into jail. They were at length released on making a written acknowledgment of the outrage they had perpetrated.⁷ The settlers at length sent an embassy, consisting of Conrad Weiser, — Casselman, and another, to England to petition the king for redress. The ship that took them out carried also a statement of the outrages, and the ambassadors were at once imprisoned; but after a time they were set at liberty and permitted to return. Weiser was so chagrined at the result of the controversy that soon after, with about 60 families, he emigrated to Tulpehocken, Berks co., Penn. Other families removed to German Flats and others to Stone Arabia.⁸ Peter Vrooman, with several Dutch families,⁹ perma-

² The principal turnpikes in the co. in early times were the Great Western, extending to Cherry Valley, built in 1802; and the Charlotte River Turnpike, built in 1809. The latter formed the great thoroughfare to the settlements in Delaware co. and adjacent regions. The plank road project was pretty thoroughly tried, and has been abandoned after a sacrifice of nearly all the capital invested.

⁵ Adam Vrooman, from Schenectady, obtained a patent for 1,100 acres, Aug. 26, 1714. His tract was afterward found to contain 1,400 acres. It embraced the flats along the creek in the present town of Fulton, except Wilder Hook, at which place was an Indian castle and settlement. His son Peter, for whom it was bought, built a house, planted corn, and the first winter left the premises in charge of a man named Truax, and a negro man and his wife. Truax was murdered, and the negro and his wife were arrested, tried at Albany, and burned alive; but years after, one Moore, a resident of "Weisers Dorf," confessed that he and the negro man committed the deed, and that the woman was innocent.—Simms's Schoharie, p. 56.

⁷ After this time a large number of settlers took leases of the proprietors, thus abandoning their claims to the lands.

⁸ Among those who removed to the Mohawk was Elias Garlock, the first and long the only magistrate in Schoharie.

nently located upon his patent in 1727. The German and Dutch races long remained distinct. The Dutch were generally wealthier than the more hardy and laborious Germans, and preferred to contract marriages with those of their own class in the older Dutch settlements. They often kept slaves, while the Germans seldom had further assistance than such as their own households, of both sexes, might afford. The Germans, by intermarriage, became a "family of cousins;" and they were united by many ties of common interest. Industry and frugality gradually brought them to a level, and long acquaintance has almost entirely obliterated these hereditary distinctions of society. Upon the approach of the Revolution, a part of the people espoused the cause of the British; but the majority were ardent patriots. In many cases members of the same family were engaged on opposite sides, and the struggle assumed all the horrors of a civil war, aggravated by Indian barbarities. A Council of Safety was organized in 1774, of which Johannes Ball was chairman. During the war several conflicts took place within the limits of the co., and the people were continually exposed to the attacks of small scalping parties of the Indians.¹

At the close of the war a large number of families removed to Canada, and their property was confiscated.² Several Tories and Indians who had been active during the war returned at its close and were waylaid and shot. Others, warned by these examples, fled the country.³ Since that period little of especial interest has occurred in the history of the co. In 1845 and '46, in common with the surrounding regions, this co. partook largely in the anti-rent excitement,—though no actual violence took place within its limits.⁴ Within the last ten years, a mania for building large seminaries, far beyond the wants of the people, has spread through the co. The speculation has proved a ruinous one, and the entire amount of capital invested in the enterprises has been sunk.⁵

Three weekly newspapers are now published in the co.⁶

1776. Col. James Huston enlisted Tories at Loonenburgh.
1777. Schoharie militia called into service under Captain Hager. Col. Huston and 20 others were arrested, and Huston was hung.
" Aug. 10.—Engagement between an American force under Col. John Harper and the Tories under Capt. McDonald at Breakabow. The Tories were defeated and fled. Capt. Geo. Mann, one of their number, remained secreted in the vicinity until the succeeding spring, when he delivered himself up to the authorities. He never afterward joined the enemy, and his property was not confiscated.
" In the autumn of this year the middle fort was built, and the upper and lower forts were begun. The lower fort is the old stone church, lately changed to an arsenal.
1778, May 8.—Battle of Cobles Kill, in which Captain Patrick and 22 men were killed.
" July.—Lieut. Col. Wm. Butler, with 3 companies of Morgan's Riflemen, was stationed at Schoharie. Several Tories recruiting for the British were shot.
1779, Aug.—Col. Butler joined Sullivan's expedition against the Western Indians.
1780, Aug. 9.—A party of 73 Indians and 3 Tories made an attack upon the settlements at Vroomansland, killed 5, and took 30 prisoners.
" Oct. 16.—Sir John Johnson, with 500 troops and a large body of Tories and Indians, invaded the Schoharie settlements from the S. The upper fort was garrisoned by 100 men, under Capt. Jacob Hager and Joseph Harper; the middle fort by 850 men, under Maj. Woolsey; and the lower fort by 150 men, under Maj. Becker. The middle fort was attacked, and the commander, Major Woolsey, being an ardent coward, wished to surrender it; but a soldier, named Murphy, fired upon the flag which was sent with a summons to surrender; and, after an ineffectual attack, Sir John abandoned the attempt. The dwellings, barns, stacks, and all the property of the inhabitants were destroyed, though but few persons lost their lives.
1781. Early in the year blockhouses were built at "Kneiskerns Dorf," "Hartmans Dorf," and Cobleskill.
1781, July 9.—An engagement took place in Sharon, 2 mi. S. of the springs, between a party of Tories and Indians under Dextader, and an American force under Col. Willett, in which the former were defeated, with a loss of 40 killed.

1781, July.—Several persons at Middleburgh were surprised and taken prisoners while harvesting. One escaped, and the others were carried prisoners to Canada.

" Oct.—Three men at Christian Myndert's house, in Sharon, were taken prisoners by a small party of Indians, and carried to Canada.

" Oct. 24.—A party of 60 or 70 Indians, under Brant, entered Vroomansland and commenced their work of plunder. Isaac Vrooman was murdered. A party of Americans, under Capt. Hager, rallied to their assistance, and the Indians retreated. A sharp skirmish took place at Utzvanthis Lake; but a part of the American force, under Capt. Hale, fled at the commencement, and the remainder were obliged to retreat. Hale was arrested in his retreat by the threat of being shot; but the enemy had escaped.

1782, July 26.—Several Tories and 22 Indians made an incursion into Foxes Creek Valley for the purpose of capturing Maj. Becker; but the Maj. and family defended the house with such vigor that the Indians retreated. Several persons were murdered by the Indians, and several of the latter were shot.

1784, Dec. 16.—Many persons who had been taken to Canada were released on Lake Champlain, and returned to their homes.

² In Canada, opposite St. Lawrence co., are many families who claim relationship to inhabitants of this co. They were refugees to whom grants of land were made by the British Government.

⁵ Of 9 academies built in this co., 3 have been burned, 3 are "to let," and 3 are still open.

The True American was commenced at Schoharie in Dec. 1808, by T. M. Tillman. It was discontinued in 1812 or 1813.

The Schoharie Budget was commenced in June, 1817, by Derick Van Veghten. In 1820 its name was changed to BLLENHEIM¹—was formed from Schoharie, March 17, 1797. Jefferson was taken off in 1803, and a part of Gilboa in 1848. It is an interior town, lying s. w. of the center of the co. Its surface is a hilly upland, broken by the deep ravines of the streams. Schoharie Creek flows n. through the e. part, receiving West Kil and several smaller streams from the w. A wide alluvial flat extends along its course. The streams generally are bordered by steep hills rising to a height of 300 to 500 ft. The soil is principally a clayey loam. Patchin Hollow,² (North Blenheim p. o.) upon Schoharie Creek, contains 2 churches, a tannery, and 44 houses. The first settlements were made by Dutch and Palatinates, before 1761; but the settlers were driven out during the Revolution. The present race of settlers came mostly from New England, soon after the close of the war. Rev. Stephen Fenn was the first preacher.³

BROOME⁴—was formed March 17, 1797, as "Bristol." Its name was changed April 6, 1806. A part of Conesville was taken off in 1836, a part of Gilboa in 1848, and parts of Middleburgh were annexed Feb. 9 and Oct. 5, 1849. It lies upon the e. border of the co., s. of the center. Its surface is a hilly upland, broken by the deep ravines of the streams. The highest summits are 350 to 500 ft. above the valleys. Catskill Creek takes its rise in the n. part, and several branches of Schoharie Creek drain the n. and w. portions.⁵ The soil is a gravelly and clayey loam. Livingstonville, (p. v.) in the e. part, s. of the center, contains 2 churches, a sawmill, gristmill, and sash factory. Pop. 150.⁶ Franklinton, (p. v.) in the n. part, contains a church and 100 inhabitants. Smithton is a hamlet, near the s. line. The first settlements were made before the Revolution.⁷ There are 6 churches in town.⁸

CARLISLE—was formed from Cobleskill and Sharon, March 31, 1807.⁹ It is the central town upon the n. border of the co. Its surface consists principally of an immense ridge lying between the valleys of the Mohawk and Cobles Kil, the summit of which is 800 to 1,000 ft. above the former stream.¹⁰ This ridge descends to the n. by a series of terraces formed by the different geological strata, and on the s. by gradual slopes following the general dip of the rocks. The streams are small brooks. The soil is principally a clay loam. Hops are extensively cultivated.

The Schoharie Republican. It soon after passed into the hands of Peter Keyser. Lemuel Cuthbert, A. A. Keyser, Wm. H. Underwood, Wm. H. Gallup, P. D. Lawyer, and — Rositter have since been interested in its publication. It is now published by J. B. Hall.

The Observer was commenced at Schoharie in Oct. 1818. In 1819 it passed into the hands of Solomon Baker, in 1820 to Baker & Fish, and in 1822 it was again in the hands of Mr. Baker, and was soon after discontinued.

The Ecological Luminary was commenced at Schoharie Jan. 1, 1824, by Rev. Geo. A. Lintner and L. Cuthbert. It was continued about 1 year.

The Lutheran Magazine, mo., was commenced in Feb. 1827, by the Western Conference of Lutheran Ministers, L. Cuthbert, printer, and was published for some years.

The Schoharie Free Press was commenced June 9, 1830, by Duncan McDonald. In 1832 it was removed to Esperance and its name changed to

The Esperance Sentinel and Schoharie and Montgomery Reporter. It was discontinued in 1836 or '36.

The Gem was published a short time in 1837.

The Schoharie Patriot was commenced Feb. 13, 1838, by Peter Mix. It is now published by him and his son, S. H. Mix.

The Star was commenced in April, 1838, by S. H. Mix, then a schoolboy.

The Sun was commenced as an opposition paper in May, 1838, by D. L. Underwood, another lad of about the same age. These papers were about 3 by 4 inches. Early in 1839 they were enlarged. On the issue of No. 5 of the Sun it went down never to rise again; and the Star ceased to twinkle after the 12th number.

The Huge Fur, a campaign paper, was published from Aug. 12 1840, to Nov. 11 following, by Wm. H. Gallup.

The Helderbergh Advocate was commenced in 1841 by Wm. H. Gallup. Its name was changed in 1843 to

The Guardian of the Soil, and it was discontinued in 1 year.

The American Christian was commenced at Leesville Jan. 7, 1847, by J. D. Lawyer. It was soon after discontinued.

The Schoharie County Sentinel was commenced at Cobleskill Jan. 22, 1852, by Hiram C. Page. It was published a short time by Chas. Cleveland, and by Wadhams & Knistern, and was soon after purchased by J. B. Hall, who merged it with the Schoharie Republican.

The Charlotteville Journal was commenced at Charlotteville in 1854 by Furman & Brown. In 1855 John Brown became sole proprietor, and removed it to Cobleskill and changed the name to

The Cobleskill Journal. It has since been discontinued.

The Oasis, semi-mo., was commenced at Schoharie by the students of the academy in 1854. It was soon discontinued.

The Schoharie County Jeffersonian was commenced at Cobleskill in 1859 by Matthew Freeman, and is still published.

¹ Named from the Blenheim Patent, a portion of which lies in the n. part of this town.

² Hendrick Mattice, the pioneer, built a mill on West Kil, at Patchin Hollow. He became a loyalist and went to Canada. Henry Effner, Lambert Sternberg, Wm. Freeck, Isaac Smith, Banks Morehouse, George Martin, and Henry Hager were early settlers. Freegift Patchin settled in 1798, built the second mill, and gave name to the village. Gen. Patchin had been taken prisoner by the Indians, and suffered extremely at their hands. The first inn was kept by H. Effner; the first store, by Tobias Cuyler, in 1803; and the first tannery was built in 1825, by Jones & Lathrop. Jacob Sutherland, afterward Judge of the U. S. Supreme Court, resided several years at North Blenheim.

³ There are 4 churches in town; 3 M. E., and Ref. Prot. D.

⁴ Named from John Broome, Lieut. Gov. of the State at the time of the formation of the town. Scott's Patent of 37,840 acres, granted Jan. 2, 1770, and a part of Isaac Le Roy's Patent, are within the limits of this town.

⁷ Derick Van Dyck settled before the Revolution. John Rob bins, — Guillem, a half-breed, Allen Leet, Joshua and Ann Bushnell, Geo. and Ezekiah Watson, Ebenezer Wickham, Geo. Bartwick, Timothy Kelsey, Joseph Gillet, and Ezra Chapman settled previous to 1796. The first known birth was that of Francis Kelsey, in April, 1794; and the first death, that of Ezra Chapman, Aug. 1794. Griswold, Carden & Wells began the erection of a sawmill in 1794, and a gristmill the next season.

¹⁰ A conical elevation near the s. line, early known as O-were-socore, is one of the highest points in the co., and may be seen from Hamilton co., 60 mi. n.

Several caves are found in the limestone regions in various parts of the town.¹ Argusville, (p. v.) in the n. w. corner, upon the line of Sharon, contains 3 churches, a sawmill, gristmill, tannery, and 35 houses. Carlisle, (p. v.) upon the Western Turnpike, in the n. part, contains a church, boarding school,² and foundery. Pop. 107. Grovenors Corners, (p. o.) in the s. e. corner, contains a church and 10 houses. The first settlement was made in the s. w. part, about 1760.⁴ The first church was formed by Dr. Simon Hosack, of Johnstown, in 1803 or '04.⁵

COBLESKILL⁶—was formed from Schoharie, March 17, 1797. The line of Sharon was changed March 15, 1799. A part of Carlisle was taken off in 1807, a part of Summit in 1819, and Richmondville in 1845. It is an interior town, lying n. of the center of the co. Its surface is principally a hilly upland, broken by the deep valley of Cobles Kil, which extends e. and w. through the center. The highest points, on the n. and s. borders, are 600 to 900 ft. above the valley. The soil upon the hills is a sandy loam, and in the valley an alluvium. Cobleskill, (p. v.) in the w. part, contains 3 churches, a sawmill, gristmill, planing mill, and tannery. Pop. 364. Cobleskill Center (p. v.) contains a church, sawmill, and 20 dwellings. Lawyersville, (p. v.) in the n. w. corner, contains 3 churches, 2 sawmills, and 25 dwellings. East Cobleskill, (p. v.) in the s. e. corner, contains 2 churches and 21 dwellings. Barnerville, (p. v.) near the center, contains a church, gristmill, clothing works, and 16 dwellings. The first settlement was made about 1750.⁹ The first land grants were made about 1730. During the Revolution the people mostly espoused the cause of the colonists, and in consequence were subjected to constant incursions from the Indians. A regular engagement took place between a company of militia and a large Indian force under Brant, May 31, 1778. The Americans were defeated, and about one-half of their number were killed.¹⁰ Howe's Cave, near the e. line, is a place of considerable interest.¹¹ The census reports 7 churches in town.¹²

CONESVILLE¹³—was formed from Broome and Durham, (Greene co.) March 3, 1836. It is the s. e. corner town of the co. Its surface is generally a hilly upland, mountainous along the e. border. The highest summits are 1,600 to 2,000 ft. above the valleys. Schoharie Creek forms a small portion of the w. boundary; and Manor Kil flows w. through near the center. Upon the latter stream, near its mouth, is a cascade of 60 ft. The valleys of these streams are bordered by high and often nearly precipitous hills. Strykersville, (West Conesville p. o.) upon Manor Kil near its mouth, contains a church, tannery, and 20 houses; and Stone Bridge, (Conesville p. o.) near the center, a church and 10 houses. Manorkill (p. o.) is a hamlet. The first settlement was made by Ury Richtmeyer, in 1764.¹⁴ There are 3 churches in town; 2 M. E. and Ref. Prot. D.

ESPERANCE¹⁵—was formed from Schoharie, April 4, 1846. A small portion was re-annexed to Schoharie in 1850. It is the e. town on the n. border of the co. Its surface consists of two ridges, extending e. and w. across the town, separated by the valley of Schoharie Creek. The

² Named from the Albany Argus, at the time the principal paper taken in town. Formerly known as "Molicks Mills."

⁴ Andrew Loucks, Coenradt Engle, Philip Hooker, and Peter Young were among the first that located in town. The late Judge Brown, author of a small local history, settled at an early period. John C. McNeill, Wm. Caldwell, John Sweetman, Aaron Howard, Teunis Van Camp, Mathias Case, and Lodowick Primer were also early settlers.

⁵ There are now 6 churches in town; Bap., Evan. Luth., Presb., Univ., and Union.

⁶ Named from — Cobel, who built a mill near Central Bridge at an early period. Cobles Kil was called by the Indians Otagaragee.

⁷ Named from Lawrence Lawyer, said to have been the first settler in town. ⁸ Locally known as "Punchkill."

ing in the flames. The delay occasioned by the resistance made at this house gave the remainder of the fugitives and the inhabitants time to escape. The whole number of Americans killed was 22; and it is supposed that the Indians lost about an equal number. Fort Du Bois, a strong blockhouse, stood in this town during the war.

¹² 4 M. E., 2 Ref. Prot. D., and Evan. Luth.

highest parts are 600 to 800 ft. above the valley. The soil is principally a clayey loam. Esperance, (p. v.) upon the x. line, was incorp. April 21, 1832. It contains 2 churches, a paper mill, gristmill, sawmill, and foundery. Pop. 322. Sloansville,¹ (p. v.) near the center, contains 2 churches, 3 sawmills, and 2 gristmills. Pop. 252. The first settlements were made by Palatinates, about 1711.² There are 4 churches in town; 2 Bap., Presb., and M. E.

FULTON³—was formed from Middleburgh, April 15, 1828. It is the central town in the co. Its surface is a hilly upland, broken by the ravines of the streams. Schoharie Creek⁴ flows n. through the x. part, receiving Panther Creek from the w. The highest summits are 1,000 ft. above the valleys. The hills next to the creek are conical and often precipitous; but farther w. they assume a rounded form and are bounded by more gradual slopes. The soil is a gravelly and clayey loam. Breakabeen,⁵ (p. v.) upon Schoharie Creek, in the s. part, contains a church, gristmill, foundery, 2 sawmills, and 200 inhabitants. Fultonham, (p. v.) near the x. line contains a church, gristmill, 2 sawmills, and 25 dwellings; and West Fulton (p. v.) a church, sawmill, gristmill, and 16 dwellings. Watsonville is a small village, in the x. part; and Petersburgh a hamlet, in the n. part. The first settlements were made by Dutch and Palatinates, about 1711. The upper fort of the Schoharie during the Revolution was situated upon the present site of Fultonham. The census reports 5 churches in town.⁶ Gov. Wm. C. Bouck was born in this town Jan. 7, 1786, and died here in April, 1859.

GILBOA—was formed from Blenheim and Broome, March 16, 1848. It is the central town upon the s. border of the co. Its surface is a mountainous upland, broken by deep ravines. Schoharie Creek⁷ flows n. through the center, receiving Platter Kil from the x. and Mine Kil from the w. The streams are bordered by steep hillsides rising to a height of 2,000 to 3,000 ft. above tide. The soil is a gravelly and clayey loam. Gilboa, (p. v.) upon Schoharie Creek, contains 2 churches, a private seminary, cotton factory,⁸ gristmill, tannery, and 566 inhabitants. South Gilboa, (p. v.) in the w. part, contains a church and 20 dwellings. West Gilboa, (p. o.) in the n. w. part, is a hamlet. Mackeys Corners, (Broome Center p. o.), in the x. part, contains a church and 15 dwellings. Mine Kil Falls is a p. o. Settlement was commenced in 1764, by Matthew and Jacob Dise.⁹ The first preacher was Rev. Joel Peebles, settled in 1808.¹⁰

JEFFERSON—was formed from Blenheim, Feb. 12, 1803. A part of Summit was taken off in 1819. It is on the s. line of the co., near the s. w. corner. Its surface is a hilly upland, the principal summits being about 1,000 ft. above the valleys and 2,000 ft. above tide. Mine Hill, in the extreme s. part, is estimated to be 3,200 ft. above tide. A high ridge extending n. x. and s. w. through near the center forms the watershed between Delaware and Mohawk Rivers. Utsyanthis Lake is a small sheet of water on the s. line.¹¹ The soil is a gravelly and clayey loam. Jefferson, (p. v.) near the center, contains 2 churches and 25 houses. Morseville, in the ¹ Named from John R. Sloan, an early settler. Many years since, near this place, by the side of a path leading to Fort Hunter, was a stone heap thrown up by the Indians, who, from a superstition among them, never failed to add a stone to the pile whenever they passed it. The Rev. Gideon Hawley, who passed it in 1763, relates (1 Miss. Chh. IV) that this heap had been accumulating for ages, and that his native guide could give no other reason for the observance than that his father practiced it and enjoined it upon him. He did not like to talk about it; and the missionary believed that the custom was a religious offering to the unknown God. Others state that a tradition fixes this as the spot where a murder was committed. The heap gave name to the "Stone Heap Patent," granted to John Bowen and others Sept. 15, 1770. The heap was 4 rods long, 1 or 2 wide, and 10 to 15 ft. high, and consisted of small, flat stones. The covetous owner many years since built the material into a stone wall; and no trace of this curious monument of Indian superstition now remains. Similar stone heaps have been noticed in other sections of the State. The path that led by this pile was that taken by Sir John Johnson and his army from Schoharie to the Mohawk in Oct. 1780.—Sims's Schoharie, p. 632.

13, 1770; Hendrick Hager's, 900 acres, Dec. 1, 1768; part of John Butler's, of 100 acres, and of Isaac Levy's tract of 4,333 acres, surveyed in July, 1770. Vrooman's Land Indian deeds are still extant, one of which is dated Aug. 23, 1711. Among the early settlers were Peter, son of Adam Vrooman, the patentee; Cornelius and Bartholomew Vrooman, Nicholas Feock, Adam Brown, Teunis Vrooman, Michael Brown, — Kriesler, Frere Becker, and Stephen Young, on the w.; and William Bouck, the patentee, with his sons Johannes F., Christian, and William, Nicholas York, and Henry Hager, on the x.

⁶ 3 Union, Evan. Luth., and Ref. Prot. D.

⁷ A fall in the creek at the village was called by the Indians De-was-e-go.

⁸ The Gilboa Cotton Mills Co. has a capital of $50,000, and runs 100 looms.

¹⁰ The census reports 8 churches; 4 Bap., 2 M. E., Ref. Prot. D., and Christian.

n. part, is a p. o. The first settlements were made, in different parts of the town, in 1794.¹ The first preacher was Rev. Stephen Fenn.²

MIDDLEBURGH—was formed from Schoharie, March 17, 1797, as "Middletown." Its name was changed in 1801. A part was re-annexed to Schoharie March 26, 1798. Fulton was taken off in 1828, and parts were annexed to Broome in 1849. It is the central town upon the border of the co. Its surface is a hilly upland, divided into two ridges by the valley of Schoharie Creek, which extends n. and s. through the town. The highest summits are 600 to 800 ft. above the valley.³ Schoharie Creek receives Little Schoharie Creek from the e. and Line Kil from the w. The hills bordering upon the streams are usually steep and in many places precipitous. The soil is a clayey loam upon the hills, and a sandy loam in the valleys. Hops and broomcorn are extensively cultivated. Middleburgh, (p. v.) upon Schoharie Creek, contains 4 churches, a private seminary, 2 steam paper mills, a steam gristmill, a foundry, and 110 dwellings. Hunters Land, (p. v.) near the s. e. corner, contains 2 churches, a sawmill, gristmill, foundry, and 101 inhabitants. Mill Valley, on the line of Fulton, contains 2 large tanneries, a gristmill, and 25 dwellings. The first settlements were made by Palatinates, in 1711.⁴ The middle fort of Schoharie stood a little below the present site of Middleburgh Village during the Revolution. The census reports 5 churches in town.⁵

RICHMONDVILLE—was formed from Cobleskill, April 11, 1845. It lies upon the w. border of the co., a little s. of the center. The surface is a hilly upland, separated into two distinct parts by the valley of Cobles Kil, which extends e. and w. through the center. The highest summits are 500 to 700 ft. above the valley. The soil is generally a clayey loam. Hops are extensively cultivated. Richmondville,⁶ (p. v.) near the center, contains 3 churches, a foundry, sawmill, gristmill, and 370 inhabitants. Warnerville,⁷ (p. v.) upon Cobles Kil, at the mouth of West Kil, contains 2 churches, a boarding seminary,⁸ 2 tanneries, and 44 dwellings. West Richmondville is a p. o. The first settlement was made before the Revolution, by George Warner and his sons Nicholas, George, and Daniel, from Schoharie.⁹ The census reports 5 churches in town.¹⁰

SCHOHARIE—was formed as a district March 24, 1772, and as a town March 7, 1788. Sharon, Cobleskill, Middleburgh, and Blenheim were taken off in 1797, and Esperance and Wright in 1846. A part of Middleburgh was re-annexed in 1798, and a part of Esperance in 1850. It lies in the n. e. part of the co., its n. e. corner bordering on Schenectady co. Its surface is a hilly upland, broken by the deep valleys of the streams. The declivities of the hills are generally gradual slopes, and their summits are 400 to 500 ft. above the valleys.¹¹ Schoharie Creek flows e. through near the center, receiving Foxes Creek from the e. and Cobles Kil from the w. In the limestone region in this town are numerous caverns.¹² The soil upon the hills is a clayey loam, and in the valleys a gravelly loam and alluvium. Hops and broom corn are largely cultivated. Schoharie, (p. v.) the county seat, is situated upon Schoharie Creek, s. of the center of the town. Besides the co. buildings, it contains 3 churches, the Schoharie Academy, 2 newspaper offices, an arsenal, and a bank. Pop. 806. Central Bridge, (p. v.) at the mouth of Cobles Kil, contains a church, sawmill, gristmill, machine shop, and 12 dwellings. Barton Hill is a p. o., near the n. e. corner. The first settlement was made in 1711, by a colony of German Palati-

¹ Amos and Caleb Northrop settled in the n. part; Samuel and Noah Judson, near Utzanytha Lake; Henry Sheldrline and James McKenzie, on West Kil; Stephen Marvin, Erasmus Judd, and Aaron Jones, near the village. These were mostly from New England. The first marriage was that of Marvin Judd and Lois Gibbs, Aug. 1800; and the first death, that of Elsie Judd, in June, 1799. Heman Hickok taught the first school, in 1799. Canfield Coe kept the first inn, in 1794; and Rodman Lewis the first store, in 1800. Stephen Judd built the first sawmill, in 1796; and Heman Hickok the first gristmill, in 1799. Eli Jones built the first tannery, in 1810.

² The census reports 6 churches; 4 M. E. and 2 Bap.

⁶ Richmondville Union Seminary and Female Collegiate Institute was built by a joint stock company in 1832, at a cost of $24,000, including grounds, buildings, and furniture. It was burned Dec. 13, 1853, and was immediately rebuilt at a cost of $34,000, but was again burned June 30, 1854.

⁷ Named from Capt. Geo. Warner, the first settler.

⁸ Warnerville Seminary was built in 1851, at a cost of about $25,000, grounds and furniture being $3,000 additional. It has accommodations for 200 boarding students. A school was in operation about 3 years, when it was closed and has not since been opened.

⁹ Geo. Mann, John and Henry Shafer, Andrew Michael, Eljah Hadsell, John Lick, and John Dingman settled soon after the Revolution. The first school (German) was taught by — Skinsky. The first inn was kept by — Bohall; the first store by Geo. Skilmans; the first sawmill was built by a company of settlers; and the first gristmill by David Lawyer, on Cobles Kil. The town is comprised in the Skinner and portions of the Franklin, John F. Bouck, and B. Glazier Patents. Bouck's Patent, of 3,000 acres, was granted March 10, 1784, and Glazier's, of 3,000 acres, July 23, 1772.

nates, who had previously located upon the Hudson.¹ The first church (German) was established soon after the first settlement;² Rev. Peter Nicholas Sommer was the first clergyman.

SEWARD³—was formed from Sharon, Feb. 11, 1840. It lies on the w. border of the co., n. of the center. Its surface is a hilly and broken upland, the highest summits being 300 to 500 ft. above the valleys.⁴ West Kil, the principal stream, flows s. e. through the center. The soil is a clayey loam. Hops are largely cultivated. Hyndsville, (p. v.,) upon West Kil, in the s. part, contains a sawmill, gristmill, tannery, and 143 inhabitants. Seward Valley,⁵ (Seward p. o.,) in the n. w. part, contains a gristmill, sawmill, and 16 houses. Gardnerville (p. v.) contains a church and 84 inhabitants. Clove is a hamlet. The first settlements were made in the n. part of the town, by a colony of Germans, in 1754.⁶ Their settlement was known as "New Dorlach." The census reports 8 churches in town.⁷

SHARON⁸—was formed from Schoharie, March 17, 1797, as "Dorlach." Its name was changed March 17, 1797. Seward was taken off in 1840. It is the n. w. corner town of the co. Its surface is a rolling and hilly upland. The highest summits, in the s. w. corner, are about 500 ft. above the valleys. West Kil, flowing s. through the w. part, is the principal stream. The soil is a gravelly loam. In the underlying limestone are numerous caves. Hops are largely produced. Sharon Springs, (p. v.,) a little n. w. of the center, is celebrated for its sulphur and chalybeate springs.⁹ It contains 5 large hotels for the accommodation of the visitors to the springs, and 2 churches. Pop. 230. Rockville, upon the turnpike, about a quarter of a mi. above the springs, contains 3 churches and 20 dwellings. Sharon Center (p. v.) contains 20 dwellings. Sharon Hill, (Sharon p. o.,) in the s. e. part, contains a gristmill, sawmill, foundery, and 20 dwellings; Leesville, (p. v.,) in the n. w. part, 2 churches and 20 dwellings. Engellville, (p. o.,) near the w. line, and Beekmans Corners, near the s. line, are hamlets. Col. Calvin Rich, from New England, is said to have been the first settler.¹⁰ July 9, 1781, the tory Dextader, with a party of 300 Indians, made a descent upon Currytown, Montgomery co.; and on his return, with his plunder and prisoners, he was overtaken by an American force, under Col. Willett. An engagement ensued, in which about 40 Indians were killed, and the remainder fled. The battle ground is about 2 mi. e. of Sharon Springs. The census reports 5 churches in town.¹¹

SUMMIT—was formed from Jefferson and Cobleskill, April 13, 1819. It is the s. w. corner town of the co., lying principally on the w. border. Its surface is a broken and hilly upland. The central ridge forms a portion of the watershed between Susquehanna and Mohawk Rivers, the highest summits being 2,000 to 2,300 ft. above tide. Charlotte River, the principal stream, flows s. w. through the w. part. The soil is a gravelly and clayey loam. Summit, (p. v.,) upon the ridge, near the center, contains 2 churches and 28 dwellings. It is 2,200 ft. above tide. Charlotteville, (p. v.,) upon Charlotte River, in the s. w. part, contains a church, the N. Y. Conference Seminary and Collegiate Institute,¹² 2 sawmills, a gristmill and clothing works, and about 40

⁶ The first settlers were Sebastian Franco, Michael Merckley, Henry Hynde, and Ernest Frets. Among the other early settlers were Caleb Cropsot, Wm. Ernest Spornhyer, and Conrad Brown, who located near the Luth. church; and Wm. Ripsonah, Henry Franco, Henry Hanes, Geronimus Chrysler, and John, Peter, and Martin, sons of Rev. Peter Nicholas Sommer, the first Schoharie pastor. The first German school was taught by — Phanghwer; the first inn was kept by Thos. Almy; the first store by Wm. E. Spornhyer. Wm. Hynde built the first sawmill, and Henry Hanes the first gristmill. The first birth was that of a son of — Franco.

Sulphuretted hydrogen gas,—1 cubic inch.

The waters flowing over vegetable substances incrust them with white and flocculent sulphur. The gas from the sulphur spring quickly tarnishes silver, even in the pocket. In the neighborhood is a chalybeate spring. The vicinity derives interest from caves containing stalactites and beautiful crystals of sulphate of lime. A quarter of a mile below the spring is a fine cascade. A copious spring of common water gushes from the rocks a short distance above, in volume sufficient to turn a mill.—Geol. Ist. Dist., p. 89; Beck's Mineralogy of N. Y., p. 148; Simms's Schoharie, p. 643.

¹⁰ Col. R. was afterward at Sackett's Harbor as a Col. of drafted militia in Gen. Richard Dodge's brigade. Calvin Pike, William Vanderwerker, Conrad Fritche, Abraham and John Merceus, John Malick, and Peter Courment were early settlers, and were obliged to flee to Schoharie or Fort Hunter for safety during the war. Wm. Beekman kept the first store; John Hutt built the first sawmill, Oneco Lagrange the first gristmill, John Hutt the first clothing works, and Frederick & Crouck the first tannery. The town comprises a part of Frederick Young's Patent of 20,000 acres, granted Oct. 11, 1762; a tract granted to Bradt & Livingston, of 8,000 acres; a part of Johan D. Gross' Tract; a tract granted to Johannes Lawyer, Jr., Jacob Boist, and others, of 1,000 acres, Aug. 14, 1761; and a small part of the New Dorlach Patent. The first owners of New Dorlach Patent were Michael, Johannes, Johannes Jost, and Jacob B. Boist, Johan Braun, Wm. Bauch, Michael Helksinger, Henrick Hanes, Johannes Shaffer, Johannes and Jacob Lawyer, Christian Zeh, Mathias Baumann, Lambert Sternberg, Berent Keyser, and Peter Nicholas Sommer. The patent provided that any differences that might arise were to be settled by arbitration.

WRIGHT³—was formed from Schoharie, April 4, 1846. It is the n. town on the e. border of the co. Its surface is a hilly upland. The highest summits, along the s. line, are 600 to 800 ft. above the valleys. The principal stream is Foxes Creek, flowing n. w. through the center. The soil is a clay and gravelly loam. Gallupville, (p. v.), near the center, contains 3 churches, a sawmill, tannery, carding machine, and 40 houses. Shutters Corners, (p. o.) in the w. part, contains a sawmill, gristmill, and 10 houses. Waldensville is a p. o., near the e. line. The town comprises the whole of several patents and parts of several others, principally granted from 1760 to 1770. The first settlement was made by Jacob Zimmer, near Gallupville, several years prior to the Revolution.⁴ A stone house built by Johannes Becker, an early settler, was used as a fort during the war.⁵ There are 5 churches in town.⁶

¹ Clement Davis, Samuel Allen, Martin Van Buren, Morris Kiff, Robert and Abraham Van Duser, A. M. Frydenburgh, Joseph L. Barnett, Amos Baldwin, Jonathan Hughes, Baltus Prosper, and James Brown were early settlers. The first birth was that of — Frydenburgh, and the first marriage that of Clement Davis and Lovina Allen, in 1797. Daniel Harris taught the first school, in 1798. Benj. Rider kept the first inn, James Burns the first store, and — Van Buren the first sawmill. The town comprises a part of the Straesburgh, Charlotte River, Stephen Skinner, and Walter Franklin Patents.

SCHUYLER COUNTY.

THIS county¹ was formed from Steuben, Chemung, and Tompkins, April 17, 1854. It lies upon both sides of the s. extremity of Seneca Lake; is centrally distant 160 mi. from Albany, and contains 352 sq. mi. Its surface is mostly an undulating and hilly upland, divided into two distinct ridges by the deep valley of Seneca Lake and its inlet. The highest summits are 600 to 1,000 ft. above Seneca Lake and 1,200 to 1,600 ft. above tide. A bluff 100 to 300 ft. high extends along the shores of the lake, too steep for profitable cultivation; but farther inland the hills are bordered by long and gradual slopes and are generally arable to their very summits. The extreme s. part of the co. assumes a more hilly and broken character. Catharines Creek, flowing into the head of Seneca Lake, is the principal stream. Its course is through a deep, narrow, and winding valley bordered by steep hillsides 400 to 600 ft. high. Upon it are numerous falls, affording abundance of water-power; and near its mouth is a marshy region of considerable extent. Meads Creek, a tributary of Chemung River, drains the s. w. corner, and Cayuta Creek the s. e. corner. The other streams are small creeks and brooks, mostly discharging their waters into Seneca Lake. A few streams take their rise along the n. n. border and flow into Cayuga Lake. Little and Mud Lakes, two smaller sheets of water along the w. border, discharge their waters through Mud Creek into Conhocton River. Cayuta Lake is a fine sheet of water, in the e. part of the co. Hector Falls, upon a small stream flowing into Seneca Lake from the e., is one of the finest cascades in the State. The rocks of this co. mostly belong to the Portage and Chemung groups,—the former occupying the n. and the latter the s. part of the co. In the deep valley along the shore of Seneca Lake, in the extreme n. part of the co., are found outcrops of Genesee slate. The only good building stone in the co. is the thin-bedded sandstone separating the thick beds of shale. In many places these rocks are covered deeply with drift deposits. The soil upon the highlands is clayey and gravelly, principally derived from the disintegration of the shales; and in many places this is underlaid by hardpan. In the valleys the soil is a gravelly loam intermixed with alluvium.

Agriculture forms the leading and almost the sole occupation of the people. Spring grains are extensively grown, and stock and wool growing and dairying are largely carried on. The climate and soil are both better adapted to pasturage than to tillage. Fruit is becoming an important article of culture, and all kinds adapted to the climate succeed well. A limited amount of manufacturing is carried on at Watkins and Havana.

In 1854, commissioners appointed to locate the co. buildings fixed upon Havana as the county seat.² The action of the commissioners was resisted by the Board of Supervisors, and by them the county seat was located at Watkins, at the head of Seneca Lake. A courthouse was erected at each village; subsequently the courts decided against the action of the commissioners, and, April 13, 1857, an act was passed by the legislature confirming the location of the county seat at Havana. At their annual meetings in the fall of 1857 and 1858 the Board of Supervisors passed resolutions changing the location to Watkins, and at this place the co. offices are at present located. The buildings erected at each place for a courthouse, and for a clerk's office and jail at Havana, are fine buildings, embodying nearly all modern improvements. The buildings at Havana were erected at a cost of $15,000. No poorhouse has yet been established.

The public works in the co. are the Chemung Canal, extending from the head of Seneca Lake s. through the valley of Catharines Creek, uniting with Chemung River at Elmira; the Elmira, Jefferson & Canandaigua R. R., extending along the w. shore of Seneca Lake to Watkins; and the Chemung R. R., extending s. from Watkins along Catharines Creek to Elmira. These roads are both leased to the N. Y. & E. R. R. Co.

In 1779, Sullivan's army marched through the defiles along Catharines Creek, closely pursuing the Indians, who were flying from the fatal battle of "Newtown," (now Elmira.) So great was the terror of the Indians that they neglected to defend the passes, and the American army marched unmolested through the only place where successful resistance was practicable. Upon the conclusion of peace, many of the soldiers belonging to the army returned to this region and located upon land which had been first brought to their notice during their march against the Indians. The first settlements in the co. were made on Catharines Creek, near the present site of Havana, in 1788, and on the shores of Seneca Lake, in 1790. The town of Hector belonged to the Military Tract; the towns of Catharines, Dix, and Reading, to the Watkins and Flint Purchase; and Tyrone and Orange, to the Phelps and Gorham Purchase.

² These commissioners were Delos De Wolf, of Oswego, Edward Dodd, of Washington, and Vivus W. Smith, of Onondaga.

Two weekly newspapers are now published in the co.¹

CATHARINES²—was formed from "Newtown," (now Elmira, Chemung co.,) March 14, 1798. Catlin and Veteran (Chemung co.) were taken off in 1823. A part of Newfield (Tompkins co.) was annexed June 4, 1853, and a part was added to Cayuta, April 17, 1854. It lies upon the s. border of the co., z. of the center. Its surface is a hilly upland, broken by the deep valleys of the streams. Catharines Creek, along the w. border, flows in a deep ravine 300 to 700 feet below the summits of the hills. Cayuta Lake lies in the n. z. part; and its outlet, Cayuta Creek, flows s. into the Susquehanna. The soil is principally a gravelly loam mixed with clay. Havana, (p. v.,) upon Catharines Creek, on the line of Dix, 3 mi. from Seneca Lake, was incorp. May 13, 1836. It contains a courthouse, jail, clerk's office, the People's College,³ 3 churches, a newspaper office, 3 flouring mills, and several manufacturing establishments.⁴ It is a canal village and a station upon the Chemung R. R. Pop. 1,290. Odessa, (p. v.,) near the center of the town, contains 2 churches, a gristmill, several sawmills, and 40 dwellings; and Catharines, (p. v.,) in the s. part, 2 churches and 25 dwellings. Alpine, (p. v.,) on the s. z. border, is partly in this town. The first settlement in town was made at Havana, in 1788, by Silas Wolcott and — Wilson.⁵ The first religious meeting was held at the house of Mr. P. Bowers, by a Presbyterian minister, in 1794.⁶

CAYUTA—was formed from Spencer, (Tioga co.,) March 20, 1824. Parts of Catharine and Erin (Chemung co.) were annexed in 1854. The town was transferred from Tioga to Tompkins co. March 22, 1822. It is the s. z. corner town in the co. Its surface is a hilly upland. Cayuta Creek flows s. z. through the town, in a narrow valley bordered by steep hillsides 300 to 600 ft. high. The soil is a clayey and gravelly loam. Cayuta (West Cayuta p. o.) contains 15 dwellings; Alpine, (p. v.,) on the n. line of the town, a flouring mill, sawmill, chair factory, and 25 dwellings. The first settlement was made in the valley of the Cayuta, near West Cayuta, in 1801, by Capt. Gabriel Ogden, Rev. David Janes, and Jos. Thomas,—the first two from Tioga co., and the last from Athens, Penn.⁷ The first religious services were held by Rev. Mr. Janes, (Bap.,) at his own house, in 1802. No churches are reported.

¹ The Tioga Patriot was started at Havana in June, 1828, by L. B. and S. Butler, and was continued a short time. The Havana Observer was started in 1830 by F. W. Ritter, and was soon discontinued.

The Havana Republican was commenced in 1835 by Nelson Colgrove. It was issued successively by G. Barlow Nye, T. I. Taylor, and W. H. Ongly until 1849, when it was changed to Life in The Country and Havana Republican. It was discontinued in 1850.

The Chemung Democrat was removed from Horseheads to Havana in 1840, and to "Jefferson" (now Watkins) in 1842. Its name was soon after changed to

The Democratic Citizen, and it was issued by J. L. Hendrix until 1850.

The Independent Freeman was started at Watkins, June 15, 1850, by W. R. Blawson & Co.; in 1851 it was changed to The Jefferson Eagle, and was continued a few months.

The Corona Borealis, a literary paper, was published at "Jefferson" about the same time.

The Havana Journal was commenced April 16, 1853, by John B. Look, and its publication is still continued.

The Watkins Republican was established in June, 1854, by S. M. Taylor. It passed into the hands of J. K. Averill, and afterward into those of M. Ellis, by whom it is still published.

The Schuyler County Democrat, commenced at Havana, April 25, 1855, by Averill & Baxter, was soon after discontinued.

² Named from Catharine Montour, a French woman who married an Indian, was adopted into the Seneca tribe, and exerted a controlling influence among the Indians. She received a small salary from the English Colonial Government, for many years, on account of her influence among the Indians. She resided on the present site of Havana, and was known as Queen Catharina. This town as first formed embraced the n. part of Tps.

1 and 4 and all of Tps. 2 and 3 of John W. Watkins's Tract.

³ This institution was incorp. April 13, 1854, and was located at Havana Jan. 8, 1857. The college edifice—the erection of which has been commenced—is to be 320 by 52 feet, 4 stories high, with a basement. At either end is a wing, 206 by 52 ft., 4 stories high; and a wing will project rearward from the center, 68 by 64 ft., 3 stories high. Above the basement the walls are to be erected of brick; the whole at an estimated cost of $175,000. The institution is to afford instruction in some departments of mechanics and manufactures, and students are to be paid for their services. The trustees have resolved to establish 19 professorships.

⁵ Geo. Mills, Wm. McClure, Phineas Bowers, John King, and 2 families by the name of Stevens, settled in the valley at and near Havana in 1789-90. Anthony Broderick kept the first school, in a house owned by Phineas Bowers, in 1792-93. Silas Wolcott kept the first inn, soon after his settlement, and Isaac Baldwin and George Mills the first store, in 1805, at Havana. Phineas Bowers erected the first grist and saw mills, at or near the village.

⁶ The census reports 7 churches; 2 Prot. E., 2 Presb., 2 M. A., and Bap.

DIX—was formed from Catlin, (Chemung co.,) April 17, 1835. It lies upon the w. side of Catharines Creek, and extends from the head of Seneca Lake to the s. bounds of the co. The surface is mostly a rolling and hilly upland, the summits being 400 to 700 ft. above the lake. It is drained by Catharines Creek and several smaller streams. The soil is principally a fine quality of gravelly loam. A little s. w. from the head of the lake is a deep glen in the hills, bordered by perpendicular rocks 200 ft. high. A small stream runs through it, forming a series of beautiful cascades. Watkins,¹ (p. v.,) upon the line of Reading, at the head of Seneca Lake, was incorp., as "Jefferson," April 11, 1842, and its name was changed April 8, 1852. It contains a courthouse, 5 churches, a newspaper office, and several manufacturing establishments. It is a lake, canal, and r. r. station; a daily steamboat plies upon Seneca Lake between this place and Geneva. Pop. 1,084. Beaver Dams, (p. v.,) in the s. w. corner, contains 2 churches, several manufactories, and 28 dwellings; Townsend, (p. v.,) near the w. line, contains 1 church, several mills, and 36 dwellings; Crawford Settlement, (Moreland p. o.,) near the s. line, contains 2 churches and 26 dwellings. The first settlements were made near the head of the lake and along the valley of Catharines Creek, about the commencement of the present century.² The first church edifice (Bap.) was erected in 1833, at Townsend.⁴

HECTOR—was formed from Ovid, (Seneca co.,) March 30, 1802. It is the s. w. corner township of the Military Tract and the n. e. corner town of the co. Its surface is a rolling upland, its highest summits being 500 to 700 ft. above Seneca Lake. The bluffs bordering upon the lake are 100 to 300 ft. high, and nearly perpendicular. It is drained by a large number of small creeks flowing into Seneca and Cayuga Lakes. Hector Falls, upon a small creek in the s. w. part of the town, is a cascade made by the stream flowing down the bluff which borders upon the lake. The soil is a clay, sandy, and gravelly loam, in some places underlaid by hardpan. Perry City, (p. v.,) upon the e. line of the town, contains a Friends' meeting house and 120 inhabitants; Mecklenburgh, (p. v.,) situated 2 mi. s. w. of Perry City, contains 3 churches, 2 sawmills, a flouring mill, and 338 inhabitants; Reynoldsville, (p. v.,) near the center of the town, contains a church and 117 inhabitants; Bennetsburgh, (p. v.,) in the s. part, contains a church, 4 saw and shingle mills, 1 gristmill, tannery, and 25 dwellings; Burdett, (p. v.,) in the s. w. part, contains 3 churches, a woolen factory, agricultural implement factory, iron foundry, gristmill, sawmill, tannery, and 360 inhabitants; Peach Orchard, (Hector p. o.,) in the n. w. part, contains 3 churches and 34 dwellings; Folkville, (p. v.,) in the n. w. part, contains a church and 16 dwellings; Searsburgh (p. o.) contains 2 churches and 10 dwellings. North Hector and Cayutaville are p. offices; and Steamburgh is a hamlet. John Livingston and Wm. Wickham settled in 1791, in the n. w. part of the town, on the bank of the lake.⁵ The first church (Presb.) was formed by Rev. Mr. Stewart, at Peach Orchard, in 1809.⁶

ORANGE—was formed from Wayne, (Steuben co.,) Feb. 12, 1813, as "Jersey." Its name was changed Feb. 20, 1836. A part of Hornby (Steuben co.) was annexed April 11, 1842, and a part of Bradford, (Steuben co.,) April 17, 1854. It is the s. w. corner town in the co., and is bounded on the e. by the pre-emption line. Its surface is a rolling and hilly upland, broken by the deep and irregular valleys of the streams. Meads Creek, flowing s. w., forms the principal drainage. The soil is chiefly a gravelly loam. Monterey (Orange p. o.) contains 3 churches, a gristmill, and 301 inhabitants. Sugar Hill is a p. o. in the n. e. part. The first settlements were made in 1799, by Abraham Rozenback and Samuel Scomp, n. e. of Monterey.⁷ The first church (M. E.) was formed by Rev. Peregrine Hallett, the first preacher.⁸

⁴ The census reports 10 churches; 3 Bap., 3 M. E., 2 Presb., Prot. E., and Univ.

⁵ Reuben Smith and his sons Reuben, Jabez, Sam'l, Harvey, Caleb, and Chauncey W., from Canaan, Conn., settled on Military Lots 30 and 21, in 1794; Richard Ely and Grover Smith, a little w. of Peach Orchard, and Daniel Everts, s. of the same place, in 1796,—all from Salisbury, Conn. The first child born was Polly Everts; the first marriage, that of Stephen Pratt and Betsy Livingston; and the first death, that of Wm. Wickham. The first school was taught at Peach Orchard, by John Livingston. Wm. Wickham kept the first inn, near Peach Orchard, and John B. Seeley the first store, at Hector Falls. The first gristmill and carding machine were put in operation at the same place, by Sam'l B. Seeley.

⁶ The census reports 20 churches in town; 7 M. E., 8 Presb., 3 Bap., 2 Wes. Meth., 2 Friends, O. S. Bap., Prot. E., and Chris. Cong.

⁷ Henry Switzer, from N. J., settled on Switzer Hill, in 1802, and D. Hewitt, from Rensselaer co., N. Y., was the first settler at Monterey, in 1811. Abner and Thos. Hurd, and Brigham Young, the Mormon leader, were early settlers in the n. e. part of the town. — Chapman, Wm. Wilkins, Wm. De Witt, Andrew Foot, Danl. Curtis, and Jedediah Miller settled on Meads Creek in 1811. Elsie Switzer was the first child born. The first school was taught by Dan'l McDougall, in 1819, near Monterey. Thos. Hurd kept the first inn, in 1816, at Monterey, and Walter Hurd the first store, s. w. of the same place.

⁸ The census reports 4 churches in town; 2 Bap., Presb., and M. E.

READING—was formed from "Frederickstown," (now Wayne, Steuben co.,) Feb. 17, 1806. It lies upon the w. bank of Seneca Lake, and is the central town upon the n. border of the co. Its surface is a rolling upland 400 to 500 ft. above the lake. The bluffs upon the shore are very steep and in many places precipitous. Its streams are small brooks and creeks. The soil is mostly a clay loam. Reading Center (p. v.) contains 2 churches and 24 dwellings; Irelandville (Reading p. o.) contains 11 dwellings. North Reading is a p. o. The Elmira, Jefferson & Canandaigua R. R. traverses the town upon the w. shore of the lake. A settlement was made at Reading Center, by Judge John Dow, from Conn., in 1790.¹ The first church (Bap.) was formed by Elder John Goff, in 1810, at Reading Center.²

TYRONE—was formed from Wayne, (Steuben co.,) April 16, 1822. It is the n. w. corner town in the co. Its surface is an elevated upland divided into several ridges by the valleys of streams. Its principal stream is Mud Creek, flowing s. w. Little Lake, upon the w. border, is 3 mi. long and about 1 wide; and Mud Lake, in the s. w. corner, is 1½ mi. long and about one-half mi. wide. These lakes lie in deep valleys, and are bordered by nearly precipitous hills which rise 300 to 400 ft. above them. The soil is a clay loam. Tyrone, (p. v.,) a little n. of Mud Lake, contains 2 churches, 1 gristmill, 2 sawmills, 2 tanneries, several manufactories, and 160 inhabitants; Weston, (p. v.,) ¼ mi. n. w. of Tyrone, contains 2 churches and 177 inhabitants; Altay, (p. v.,) a little n. of the center, contains a church, tannery, 2 sawmills, a steam flouring mill, and 144 inhabitants; Pine Grove (p. o.) contains a church and 6 houses. The first settlement was made in 1800, by Gen. Wm. Kernan, on a tract of 4,000 acres, purchased by Thos. O'Conner.³ The first church edifice (Union) was erected by the Presb. and Bap.; Rev. Joseph Crawford (Presb.) and Rev. Van Rensselaer Wall (Bap.) were the first preachers.⁴

² The census reports 3 churches; Bap., M. E., and R. C.

³ Mr. O'Conner was among the early settlers, and resided for a time in a log house on the shore of Little Lake. He was accompanied by a son and daughter,—the former of whom is Hon.

Charles O'Conner, the eminent New York lawyer. Abraham Fleet, sr., from N. J., and Capt. John Seabring, were among the first settlers near Tyrone Village, in 1800; Thaddæus, Gersham, and Abraham Bennett settled about 1801. Simon Fleet was the first child born in town. The first school was taught at Tyrone Village, by Hugh Jameson; the first inn was kept by Capt. Williams, and the first store by Thos. O'Conner, near the n. w. corner of the town. The first mill and factory were erected at Tyrone Village by Ralph Opdyke.

⁴ The census reports 7 churches; 3 Bap., 2 Presb., and 2 M. E.

SENECA COUNTY.

THIS county was formed from Cayuga, March 29, 1804. A part of Tompkins was taken off in 1817, and a part of Wayne in 1823. It lies w. of the center of the State, centrally distant 156 mi. from Albany, and contains 420 sq. mi. It occupies the greater part of the land which lies between Seneca and Cayuga Lakes, and extends several mi. n. of Seneca Lake Outlet. A high ridge enters the co. from Tompkins and occupies nearly one-fourth of its surface. The summit of the extreme s. portion of this ridge in this co. is 700 to 800 feet above Seneca Lake and 1,100 to 1,250 feet above tide. Toward the n. it gradually declines to the level of Seneca Lake. The ridge is bordered in some places by steep declivities and in others by gradual slopes, and in the s. part of the co. generally terminates in high bluffs on the shores of the lakes. At the foot of Seneca Lake the bluffs, on an average, are about 20 feet high; but toward the s. they gradually rise to an elevation of 100 to 150 feet. At the foot of Cayuga Lake the shore is low and shelving; but in Romulus a bluff shore commences, which gradually increases in height until on the s. border of the co. it attains an elevation of 150 to 200 feet. From the summits of the bluffs to the central summit of the ridge the land generally rises in beautiful, smooth, gradual slopes, broken in a few places by sharp declivities of a terrace-like formation. From Ovid toward the n. the land abruptly descends about 200 feet, and then by gradual slopes to the level of Seneca River. The region immediately n. of Seneca Lake Outlet and w. of the Cayuga Lake Outlet is level, and some of it is marshy. In the n. w. corner of the co. is a great number of alluvial ridges, composed principally of gravel. These ridges extend in a n. and s. direction and are 30 to 50 feet high. Their declivities are generally very abrupt toward the n., e., and w., but more gradual toward the s.

The geological formation of the co. is very simple. The rocks overlie each other in parallel layers slightly dipping toward the s. The lowest rocks that crop out in the co. are those of the Onondaga salt group, including both the red shales and gypsum. They are found along Seneca River, where the gypsum is extensively quarried. Next above these are heavy, compact masses of the corniferous limestone, occupying a belt of country 2 to 3 mi. wide s. of Seneca River. The intermediate waterlime and Onondaga limestone strata are developed in this co. only in very thin and scarcely noticeable layers. The corniferous limestone furnishes a building stone of great excellence and is extensively quarried. Next in order come the Marcellus and Hamilton shales, occupying a broad belt through the co. and extending nearly to the summits of the ridges; the Tully limestone, a layer of only a few feet in thickness, but valuable from the quantity and quality of lime manufactured from it; and the Genesee slate, a dark, shaly rock which crowns the summits of the southern hills. These rocks throughout the co. are covered with a deep deposit of drift, consisting of clay, sand, gravel, and hardpan, and crop out only along the shores of the lakes, the narrow ravines of the streams, and the steep declivities of the ridges. In the n. w. corner of the co. this drift is arranged in ridges with narrow valleys scooped out between them.¹

The principal stream is Seneca River, forming the outlet of Seneca Lake. It has a course of about 14 mi. between the two lakes, and in that distance falls 60 feet. The falls are principally at Waterloo and Seneca Falls, furnishing an excellent water-power at each place, but much the greater at the latter. From Cayuga Lake, Seneca River flows n. e. through a marshy region and forms a portion of the e. boundary of the co. Clyde River, a tributary of the Seneca, flows through a portion of the marshy region in the n. e. corner. The other streams are all small brooks and creeks, and for the most part are rapid torrents flowing in deep gulfs worn in the shaly rocks. They are frequently interrupted by waterfalls, are nearly dry in summer, and are subject to severe freshets.

Seneca Lake, the w. border of which forms the greater part of the w. boundary of the co., is 35 mi. long and 1 to 4 mi. broad. It is 216 feet above Lake Ontario and 447 feet above tide. It occupies a deep valley between the hills, and it varies in depth from 300 to 630 feet. Its shores are generally bold; and from their summits the land slopes gently and gracefully upward to a height of 200 to 700 feet above its surface, furnishing some of the most quiet and beautiful scenery in the State. This lake is never entirely frozen over. Cayuga Lake occupies a parallel valley on the e. border of the co., and is 38 mi. long and 1 to 3½ mi. wide. It is 60 feet below Seneca, and its greatest depth is 346 feet. Near the foot the lake is very shallow, and a large extent of land, immediately adjoining and lying along the course of its outlet, is swampy.¹ Further e. the shores are bluff and the country is of the same general character as that bordering upon Seneca Lake.

The soil is generally of a very excellent quality. The sandy and gravelly loam of the drift deposits is well adapted to either grain raising or grazing. The lower portions of the ridges are enriched by the disintegration of the rocks above, making the soil very productive. The lowlands bordering upon Seneca River are clayey and in many places mixed with disintegrated gypsum and limestone. North of the river have been found extensive marl deposits of great agricultural value. North of the foot of Seneca Lake is a sandy region once considered worthless; but upon trial the soil has been found susceptible of being made productive at little expense. The marshy regions w. of Cayuga Outlet are covered with thick deposits of marl and muck. Measures have been instituted to drain these marshes; if successful a new and exceedingly fertile region will be added to the productive lands of the State.

The co. is a half-shire, the co. seats being located respectively at Ovid and Waterloo.² The courthouse and clerk's office at Ovid are brick buildings, situated in the e. part of the village. The combined courthouse and jail at Waterloo is a brick building, situated near the e. e., fronting the public square, in the w. part of the village. The co. poorhouse is located upon a farm of 126 acres, upon the line between Seneca Falls and Fayette, 4 mi. s. e. of Waterloo.³

Four weekly newspapers are now published in the co.⁴

The public works of the co. are the N. Y. Central R. R., extending through Seneca Falls and Waterloo, and the Seneca Canal, extending along Seneca River through the same towns.⁵ Above the falls at Waterloo the canal is formed by slackwater navigation upon the river.

The lands in this co. were first brought to the notice of the whites by the expedition of Sullivan, which passed along the banks of Seneca Lake in 1779. Portions of the land at that time had been cleared and were under cultivation. The Indians had a tradition that this whole region had once been occupied by a race that pursued agriculture, but which had long ago disappeared. Many of Sullivan's soldiers, attracted by the beauty and fertility of the lands, after the war settled in various parts of the co. The first settler, Job Smith, who located at Seneca Falls in 1787, and the second, Andrew Dunlap, who located at Ovid in 1789, came in by way of Chemung River. The third settler, Lawrence Van Clief, who settled at Seneca Falls in 1789, came in by way of Onondaga Lake and Seneca River.⁶ After 1790 settlement progressed rapidly, and the most fertile lands

² The county seat was located at Ovid upon the erection of the co. in 1804. The courthouse was built in 1806. While a part of Onondaga co., in 1790, courts were held at the barn of Andrew Dunlap. In 1817, upon the erection of Tompkins co., the co. seat was removed to Waterloo; but in 1822 the co. was divided into two jury districts, and the courts have since then been held alternately at Ovid and Waterloo. The first co. officers were Cornelius Humphrey, First Judge; Silas Halsey, Clerk; William Smith, Sheriff; and Jared Sandford, Surrogate.

⁴ The Seneca Patriot, the first paper published in the co., was started at Ovid in 1815 by Geo. Lewis. In 1816 it was changed to

The Ovid Gazette. Upon the change of the co. seat in 1817, it was removed to Waterloo and changed to The Waterloo Gazette, and was continued several years by the original proprietor.

The Seneca Farmer was started at Waterloo in 1822 by Wm. Child. In 1832 it was removed to Seneca Falls and united with the Seneca Falls Journal.

The Waterloo Republican was issued a short time in 1822.

The Waterloo Observer was started in 1824 by Charles Sentell.

It was soon after issued a short time as

The Observer and Union, and was subsequently changed to

The Seneca Observer, under which title it is still issued by the original proprietor.

The Wrath and Ladies' Literary Repository was issued from the Observer office in 1831.

The Seneca Republican was established at Ovid in 1827 by Michael Hayes.

In 1830 it was changed to

The Ovid Gazette and Seneca County Register, and was issued a short time by John Duffy.

The Seneca Falls Journal was commenced in 1829 by O. B. Clark. In 1831 it passed into the hands of Wm. N. Brown, and in 1832 it was united with the Seneca Farmer and changed to

The Seneca Farmer and Seneca Falls Advertiser, and was issued by Wm. Child until 1835.

The Western Times was published at Waterloo in 1830 by Ebenezer P. Mason.

The Ovid Emporium was published in 1832 by Bishop Owsler.

The Seneca County Courier was commenced at Seneca Falls in 1837 by Isaac Fuller & Co. It was successively published by Fuller & Bloomer, Mills & Bloomer, Mills & Davis, John J. Davis, N. J. Milliken, Milliken & Fuller, Milliken & Mumford, Foster & Judd, Fuller & Judd, until 1850, when it passed into the hands of Isaac Fuller, its present publisher.

The Ovid Bee was started in 1838 by David Fairchild & Son. At the end of one year it passed into the hands of the son, Corydon Fairchild, its present publisher.

The Seneca Falls Democrat was commenced in 1839 by Josiah T. Miller, and was continued 10 years.

The Seneca Democrat, semi-w., was issued a short time from the same office.

The Seneca Falls Register was commenced in 1835 by J. E. Brown, and was continued 2 years.

The Memorial was commenced at Seneca Falls in 1840 by Ansel Bascom, and was continued until 1844.

The Water Bucket was published at Seneca Falls by an association of Washingtonians in 1841.

The Free-Soil Union was commenced at Seneca Falls in Aug. 1848, by N. J. Milliken, and continued about 1 year.

The Lily was commenced at Seneca Falls in 1849 by Mrs. Amelia Bloomer, and was continued until 1854, when it was removed to Ohio.

The American Revueille was commenced at Seneca Falls in Jan. 1856, by Wilcoxon, Sherman & Baker. In 1856 it was purchased by G. Wilcoxon, and was continued by him until Jan. 1860, when it passed into the hands of Holly & Stowell, the present publishers.

⁵ The first locks on this river were made by the Seneca River Navigation Company, in 1815.

⁶ Mr. Van Clief was one of the 100 men dispatched by Sullivan under Col. Gansevoort, directly e. from the head of Seneca Lake, were speedily occupied. In 1791 the State Road, known as the "Geneva Road," was built from Whitestown to Geneva; and this soon became the great highway for immigration. This co. formed the extreme w. portion of the Military Tract; and many of the early settlers were old soldiers who had drawn their portion of public land here.

COVERT—was formed from Ovid, April 7, 1817. Lodi was taken off in 1826. It lies upon the w. shore of Cayuga Lake, in the s. e. corner of the co. Its surface is an upland descending from its w. border and terminating in a steep and almost precipitous bluff upon the shore of the lake. This bluff rises 100 to 200 feet above the water, and the summit of the slope is about 400 feet higher. The town is watered by Trumansburg Creek and many smaller streams, flowing into Cayuga Lake. These streams have worn ravines in the slate and shales to the depth of 20 to 40 feet, the sides being nearly precipitous. In summer they are nearly dry, but during heavy rains they become fierce mountain torrents, bounding and seething in their confined channels and leaping from high precipices to mingle with the calm and peaceful waters of the lake. The soil is a gravelly and clayey loam. The whole surface is arable, except the steep declivities of the lake bluffs. Farmerville, (Farmer p. o.,) in the n. part, contains 3 churches, a steam sawmill, foundry, and machine shop. Pop. 350. Covert, (p. o.,) in the s. e. part, Halls Corners, near the center, and Kelleys Corners, in the n. w., are hamlets. Port Deposit (Trumansburg Landing p. o.) is a steamboat landing near the s. e. corner. The first settler was Philip Tremaine, who located at Goodwins Point before 1793.¹ The first religious services were held at the house of Mr. King, by Elder Thomas; the first church (Bap.) was organized in 1805.²

FAYETTE—was formed from Romulus, as "Washington," March 14, 1800. Its name was changed April 6, 1808. Junius was taken off in 1803. It lies on the s. bank of Seneca River and extends from Seneca to Cayuga Lake. Its surface is rolling and inclined toward the n. From Seneca Lake the land beautifully slopes upward, forming some of the most delightful situations for residences in the co. Upon Cayuga Lake the shores are lower and in some places are marshy. The highest point in town is about 200 feet above Seneca Lake. The streams are mostly small brooks flowing with rapid currents, and at a few places furnishing limited water-power. In some parts the corniferous limestone is extensively quarried, both for lime and for building purposes. The soil is a deep, rich loam, composed of clay, gravel, and sand. Near Canoga Village is an immense spring in a basin 14 feet in diameter, and from it flows sufficient water to form a large and valuable water-power. The spring also emits nitrogen gas. Canoga,³ (p. v.,) in the n. e. part, on Cayuga Lake, contains 2 churches, a gristmill, 2 sawmills, and 197 inhabitants. South Waterloo, a suburb of Waterloo, on the s. bank of Seneca River, contains 1 church and 597 inhabitants. Bearytown, (Fayette p. o.,) on the line of Varick, is partly in this town. West Fayette, in the s. w. corner, and Rose Hill, in the w. part, are p. offices. The first settlement was made by James Bennett, from Penn., who located upon the shore of Cayuga Lake in 1789.⁴ Red Jacket, the Seneca chief and orator, was born near Canoga Spring. There are 8 churches in town.⁵

JUNIUS—was formed from "Washington," (now Fayette,) Feb. 12, 1803; Wolcott (Wayne co.) was taken off in 1807, Galen (Wayne co.) in 1812, and Seneca Falls, Tyre, and Waterloo in 1829. It is the n. w. corner town of the co. In this town are numerous small, isolated gravel and clay ridges 30 to 75 ft. high, all extending in a general n. and s. direction. The numerous small streams that drain the town flow n. into Clyde River. Among the narrow valleys in the e. part is a limited amount of swamp land. The soil is a good quality of gravelly loam. Dublin, (Junius p. o.,) n. w. of the center, contains 1 church and 25 dwellings. West Junius is a p. o. near the s. w. corner. Thorntons Corners is a hamlet. The first settlements were made by Thos. Bedell and Jesse, Sam'l, and David Southwick, about 1795.⁶ The first church (Cong.) was formed in 1811; three years after it was changed to a Presb. There are also 2 M. E. churches in town.

LODI—was formed from Covert, Jan. 27, 1826. It borders upon Seneca Lake, and is the s. w. to lay waste the lands of the Cayugas, Onondagas, and Oneidas that had previously escaped destruction.

² This was the first church formed in the co. The census reports 4 churches; 2 Bap., Univ., and Ref. Prot. D.

⁵ 2 Presb., 2 M. E., 2 Lutheran, 2 Ref. Prot. D.

⁶ Among the other early settlers were families named Sherman, Chapman, Brownwell, Fisk, Moore, French, Maynard, Thorn, and Hart,—mostly from New England. The first death was that of Mrs. Submit Southwick, wife of Samuel Southwick, in 1802. Joseph Moody kept the first store, at Dublin. He was an Irishman; and hence the name of the village.

corner town in the co. Its surface is mostly inclined toward the w. and n., a small portion only lying e. of the summit. The bluff bordering upon Seneca Lake is 150 to 250 ft. above the surface of the water; and the highest part of the central ridge is 500 ft. higher and about 1,200 ft. above tide. The principal streams are Mill Creek, flowing n. w. through near the center, and Sheldrake Creek, in the n. w. corner. Mill Creek separates the highlands into two distinct ridges, the declivities being very abrupt. Upon this stream are several fine cascades. Lodi Falls, where the creek leaps down the precipitous bluff which borders upon the lake, are 125 ft. high. The water has worn a deep and irregular channel in the shale rocks one mi. back from the face of the bluff. The soil is principally a gravelly loam mixed with the disintegrated rocks. Lodi, (p. v.,) in the e. part, contains 2 churches, a gristmill, and 380 inhabitants; Townsendville, (p. v.,) in the s. e. part, a church and 20 dwellings. Lodi Center (p. o.) is a hamlet. Lodi Landing is on Seneca Lake, at the mouth of Mill Creek. The first settlement was made by Geo. Faussett, from Penn., who settled in the s. w. part in 1789.¹ There are 5 churches in town.²

OVID—was formed March 5, 1794. Hector (Schuyler co.) was taken off in 1802, and Covert in 1817. It lies s. of the center of the co., and extends from Seneca to Cayuga Lake. Its surface consists of an arable ridge, 600 ft. above Seneca Lake and about 1,100 ft. above tide, descending from w. of the center toward the lakes. The bluffs upon the lakes are 20 to 50 ft. high, and nearly perpendicular. A great number of small streams flow into both Cayuga and Seneca Lakes, the principal of which are Sheldrake, Osborn, Groves, and Barnum Creeks on the e., and Sixteen Falls Creek on the w. These streams have all worn deep, ragged ravines in the yielding shales. They are frequently interrupted by cascades, and in summer are nearly dry. The soil consists principally of clay and gravel intermixed with sand and the disintegrated rocks. Ovid, (p. v.,) near the n. line, contains a courthouse, co. clerk's office, 3 churches, the Ovid Academy,³ a steam mill, and a factory, and about 650 inhabitants. Ovid Landing is just over the town line in Romulus. Sheldrake Point, (Sheldrake p. o.,) a steamboat landing upon Cayuga Lake, contains a church, steam sawmill, boat yard, and 168 inhabitants. Ovid Center contains 20 houses. Kidders Ferry, (p. o.,) near the s. e. corner, and Scotts Corners, near the center, are hamlets. The first settlement was made in May, 1789, by Andrew Dunlap, from Penn., who located on Lot 8, in the n. w. part of the town.⁴ The first religious services were held at the house of Abraham Covert, in 1794. The first settled preacher (Ref. Prot. D.) was John Lindale, in 1800.⁵ The New York State Agricultural College and farm are located on the n. line of this town, w. of the village.⁶ In the s. part of the town are the remains of an ancient fortification.⁷

ROMULUS—was formed March 5, 1794. Fayette was taken off in 1800, and Varick in 1830. It lies s. of the center of the co., and extends from Seneca to Cayuga Lake. Its surface is rolling or moderately hilly and has a general northerly inclination. The high bluff from Ovid extends into the s. border of the town, where it drops down abruptly about 200 ft. The land slopes from the center downward to the e. and w. The streams are small and generally flow in deep channels. The surface is smooth, except along the courses of the streams, and is nearly all arable. The soil is a fertile, gravelly and clayey loam. Romulus, (p. v.,) on the line of Varick, contains a church, steam sawmill, female seminary, and 36 dwellings. Hyatts Corners, in the s. e., contains 20 dwellings. Romulus Center is a p. o. Whitneys Landing is a station upon Cayuga Lake; and Cooleys and Freleighs Points and Ovid Landing are stations upon Seneca Lake. The first settlement was made by David Wisner, in 1789. There is but one church (Bap.) in town.

¹ Mr. Faussett brought in his family in 1790. Jas. Jackson, from Penn., settled in the n. w. part in 1789; Silas Halsey, from L. I., near Lodi, in 1792. The next year his sons and sons-in-law and their families, numbering 18 persons, came in. The first child born was a daughter of Geo. Faussett. Peter Smith kept the first inn, and Silas Halsey built the first gristmill, in 1794.

² 3 M. E., Bap., and Ref. Prot. D.

³ In 1855 the name of this institution was changed to the Seneca Collegiate Institute.

⁴ The first settlers, mostly from Penn. and N. J., followed the trail of Sullivan's army and located in the w. part of the town. Among them were Wm. Dunlap and Joseph Wilson, from Penn.; Peter Smith, from N. J.; and Henry Wharton, in 1789; Abraham Covert and his son Abraham A., from N. J., in 1790; Elijah Kinne, from Dutchess co., and John Seely, from Saratoga co., in 1792; Nicholas and Richard Huff, Peter Hughes, Abraham De Mott and his son James, in 1793; and William and Robert Dunlap and Teunis Covert, in 1794. In the summer of 1795, Jonas C. Baldwin settled on Lot 11, where he remained until 1801, when he sold out and removed to Lyander, Onondaga co., and laid the foundation of Baldwinsville. The first child born was David, son of Andrew Dunlap, Feb. 2, 1793; and the first death was that of George Dunlap, brother of Andrew, Sept. 24, 1791. A triple marriage in 1793 was the first in town. The parties were Joseph Wilson and Anna Wyckoff; Abraham A. Covert and Catherine Covert; and Enoch Stewart and Jane Covert. They were obliged to cross Seneca Lake to find a justice authorized to perform the ceremony. Benj. Munger taught the first school, in 1795; John McMath kept the first store, in 1797, and the first inn, in 1800; and B. Boardman erected the first mill, in 1793, on Lot 2.

⁵ There are now in town 7 churches; 2 Presb., 2 M. E., Ref. Prot. D., Bap., and R. C.

⁷ On Lot 29, within ¼ mi. of the s. line of the town, and exactly on the dividing ridge between the two lakes, once existed a mound or fortification of an irregular, elliptical form, inclosing about 3 acres, and surrounded by an embankment of earth, which in 1801 was about 3 feet in height, with a base 5 to 8 feet in width. The present proprietor, George Bo Dine, with his father, removed here in 1802, and built a house within the inclosed space, where he has since resided until within a few

SENECA FALLS—was formed from Junius, March 26, 1829. It lies upon the w. bank of Cayuga Lake, n. of the center of the co. The surface is nearly flat, and it is elevated 30 to 50 ft. above Cayuga Lake. The shores of the lake are low and shelving, and the n. portion is swampy. Seneca River flows e. and w. through the center of the town, its valley dividing the town into two distinct parts. The river flows over a series of ledges into a deep chasm apparently worn by its waters. Just e. and s. w. of the village are extensive gypsum quarries. The soil is a stiff, hard clay in the s. and e., a sandy loam in the n. w., and a heavy vegetable muck in the n. e. Seneca Falls, (p. v.,)¹ upon Seneca River, near the center of the town, was incorp. April 22, 1831. It is a station upon the N. Y. C. R. R. and the Seneca Canal. The total fall is 51 feet, and furnishes an abundance of water-power, which is largely improved. It contains 7 churches, the Seneca Falls Academy, a union school, 2 newspaper offices, extensive manufactories of fire engines, pumps, machinery, iron, and woolen goods, and a great variety of other articles.² Pop. about 4,000. The first settlement was made by Job Smith, from Ulster co., upon the present site of the village in 1787; he left in 1793. The first permanent settler was Lawrence Van Clief, in 1789.³ The first religious services were held by M. E. missionaries, about 1797; and the first regular minister was Rev. Matthew Stewart, (Presb.,) in 1804.⁴

TYRE—was formed from Junius, March 26, 1829. It is the n. e. corner town of the co. The e. half is a swamp, being the s. termination of the Montezuma Marshes. The w. half is occupied by peculiar drift ridges similar to those already described in Junius. These ridges are 30 to 50 feet high, and generally have very steep declivities upon all sides except the s. One of the longest of these, in the w. part of the town, extends nearly two-thirds of the distance from the s. line to the n. Its summit is nearly level; and the road which is located upon it appears as though built upon an artificial embankment. The soil is clay and muck in the e. and a gravelly loam in the w. Tyre City, (Tyre p. o.,) near the center, contains 2 churches and 20 dwellings. Cruso is a p. o. on the n. line. The first settlement was made by Ezekiel Crane, from N. J., who came in 1794.⁵ The first church (Bap.) was formed in 1805. Elder Don Ralph was the first preacher.⁶

VARICK—was formed from Romulus, Feb. 6, 1830. It extends from Seneca to Cayuga Lake, across the center of the co. Its surface is slightly inclined toward the n. The slopes of the ridges are years. The work was evidently of great antiquity,—the timber on the inside being of the same size and apparent age of that in the surrounding forest. Upon the bank and in the ditch large oak trees—the growth of centuries—were standing. In the embankment were several openings a few feet in width, which were once probably used for gates or entrances. In making an excavation for a cellar, on the s. side, 6 skeletons were found at the depth of about 2 feet. This was in 1867. Several had been found previously; and, though all the softer parts of the bones had long since disappeared, the teeth and a few of the larger bones still remained. Inside of the embankment may still be found pieces of a coarse kind of pottery, ornamental pipes, &c. De Witt Clinton visited this place in 1810; and his theory is that this was one of a number of similar works of defense found occupying the most commanding positions in Western New York, and in the valleys of the Ohio and Mississippi, erected by a race more civilized than the Indians, and that they preceded the latter in the occupation of this country: their origin and end are alike a mystery; their annals defy the ken of human research, and their history will remain a sealed book perhaps forever. The Indians were never able to give any account of this fortification, as it was older than their traditions.

² Downs & Co.'s manufacturing establishment, commenced in 1840, has a capital, including real estate and machinery, of about $200,000. They are largely engaged in the manufacture of pumps and a great variety of other articles, use annually 3,800 tons of iron, 1,500 tons of coal, and employ 230 hands. Their yearly sales amount to about $400,000. They also manufacture Goff's Patent Knitting Machine, and are largely engaged in the manufacture of hose, turning out 800 pairs per day; 70 persons are employed in this department. The Island Works of Silsby, Mynderse & Co., commenced in 1848, is engaged in the manufacture of steam fire engines, portable steam engines, and a variety of other machinery. It employs 150 persons, and turns out work to the amount of $200,000 per year. Cowing & Co.'s works commenced about 1840. They are engaged in the manufacture of fire engines, pumps, and various other articles,—employ 140 men, and turn out work yearly to the amount of $125,000. The Phoenix Woolen Mills gives employment to 90 persons, and manufactures goods to the amount of $150,000 per annum. Besides these, there are in the place several flouring mills, having in the aggregate 32 runs of stone, 2 distilleries, a brewery, 2 planing mills, 5 founderies and machine shops, a scythe and fork factory, a woolen factory, and several minor manufactories. About 50 tons of iron are used daily in the several manufactories.—American Revueille, Seneca Falls, 1860.

³ Mr. Smith was the first white settler upon the Military Tract. Mr. Van Clief was a Revolutionary soldier, having been in the battles of White Plains, with Washington at Valley Forge and with Sullivan in his campaign against the Indians. He settled on the river, and engaged in piloting boats over the rapids until the locks were built in 1815. Among the other early settlers were James Bennett, Col. John Harris, and ——— Parker. The first child born was a daughter of Lawrence Van Clief, Nov. 29, 1790; the first marriage, that of ——— Ely and Pamela Parkhurst, in 1796; and the first death, that of Mrs. Job Smith, in 1792. The first school was taught by ——— Leonard, in 1797. Lawrence Van Clief kept the first inn, in 1794; and Col. Wilhelmus Mynderse kept the first store, in 1796, and built the first saw and grist mill, about the same time. In 1794, Robert Trout, Nicholas Gouverneur, Stephen N. Bayard, and Ekanah Watson, under the title of the Bayard Company, bought of the State 100 acres of land on the n. side of the river, embracing the greater part of the water-power upon that side. In 1798 they purchased 250 acres on the s. side, and in 1809, 650 acres more on the same side, the two purchases embracing all the water-power upon that side of the river. In 1816 they bought 450 acres more on the n. side, completing the purchase of the water-power. In 1796 the company sold a one-fifth interest in their purchase to Col. Mynderse, and constituted him their agent. In 1798 the "Upper Red Mills" were erected under his direction; and in 1807 the "Lower Red Mills" were erected. The Co. refused to sell their land, neglected to improve the immense water-power that they owned, and in 1826 broke down, and the property was sold for about one-fifth of its cost. In 1829–30 the manufacturing interests of the place began to increase. About that time a paper mill was erected by Chauncey Marshall, G. V. Sackett, and Ansel Bascom; a cotton factory, by Judge Sackett; a machine shop, by McClary & Halliday; and a clock factory, by Marshall & Adams. Until the locks were built, in 1815, the most important business of the place was that of transporting goods and boats around the rapids. The "dress reform" movement was commenced in this town by Mrs. Amella Bloomer, who adopted the dress known as the Bloomer Dress in 1840.

⁴ The census reports 7 churches in town; Bap., M. E., Wes. Meth., Prot. E., Presb., Ref. Prot. D., and R. C.

⁵ Asher Halsey, from N. J., came in 1798. Among the other early settlers were Stephen Crane, Peter and Ezra Degarm, Robert Gould, Thos. Sisson, Lewis Winans, and Thos. W. Roosevelt. The first child born was Danl. Crane; the first marriage, that of James Cook and Betsey Woodworth; and the first death, that of Ezekiel Crane. Nancy Osman taught the first school, in 1804. Stephen Crane kept the first inn, in 1806; Nicholas Traver built the first sawmill, in 1807, and Noah Davis the first gristmill, in 1817.

⁶ There are 4 churches in town; Disciples, Bap., M. E., and Ref. Prot. D.

so gradual that nearly every part is arable. The streams are all small. Near the center of the town is a cranberry swamp, occupying about 800 acres. The soil is a gravelly loam intermixed with clay. Bearytown, (Fayette p. o.), upon the line of Fayette, in the n. e. part, contains 3 churches, a steam sawmill, stove factory, and 128 inhabitants, of whom 51 are in this town. Romulus (p. v.) lies on the s. border. East Varick (p. o.) is a landing upon Cayuga Lake. McDuffie Town is a hamlet in the s. e. corner. Varick is a p. o. The first settlement was made by James McKnight, in 1789.¹ There are 3 churches in town; Bap., Presb., and M. E.

WATERLOO—was formed from Junius, March 26, 1829. It lies on the n. bank of Seneca River, n. w. of the center of the co. The surface is almost one unbroken flat. A marsh extends s. and w. through the town s. of the center, and another occupies the n. e. corner.² The bed of Seneca River, on the s. boundary, is almost level with the general surface. The soil is muck and clay in the n. and e., gravel along the n. border, and a sandy loam in the center and w. Waterloo, (p. v.), on Seneca River, near the e. border of the town, was incorp. April 9, 1824. It is a station upon the N. Y. C. R. R. and upon the Seneca Canal. A fall of 24½ feet in Seneca River furnishes an excellent water-power, which is mostly improved. It is a half-shire of the co., and contains the courthouse, 6 churches, the Waterloo Union School, a bank, a large shawl factory,³ 3 distilleries, 2 malt houses, 3 flouring mills, 5 sawmills, 2 founderies and machine shops, 2 oil mills, and numerous other manufactories.⁴ Seneca River above the falls, being seldom frozen, is navigable throughout the year. This village is an important depôt of lumber from the s. w. co., and of coal from the Susquehanna and Blossburg Mines. Pop. 3,050. South Waterloo, formerly called "Schayn," is on the opposite side of Seneca River, in Fayette. Settlement was commenced by John Green, from R. I., in 1789.⁵ The first religious services were held about 1816.⁶

² The waters of Black Brook which flow through the central swampy region are impregnated with earthy and vegetable matter, which gives to them the peculiar quality of clearing the inside of steam boilers of the incrustations of sulphate and carbonate of lime resulting from the use of hard water.

⁶ The census reports 6 churches in town; Presb., Prot. E., Ref. Prot. D., M. E., Disciples, and Friends.

STEUBEN COUNTY.

THIS county was formed from Ontario, March 18, 1796, and named in honor of Baron Steuben. The 7th Range of Townships was annexed to Allegany co. March 11, 1808, the part in the fork of Crooked Lake to Ontario co. Feb. 25, 1814, a part of Dansville to Livingston co. Feb. 15, 1822, and a part to Schuyler co. April 7 1854. It lies upon the s. border of the State, considerably w. of the center, is centrally distant 188 mi. from Albany, and contains 1425 sq. mi. Its surface mostly consists of ridges and high, rolling uplands, forming the northern continuation of the Alleghany Mts. The watershed between Lake Ontario and Susquehanna River extends from Allegany co. eastward across the n. part of the co. The deep valley of Crooked Lake breaks the continuity of the highlands and extends 17 mi. s. w. from the head of the lake, connecting with the Conhocton Valley at Bath, and forming one of the numerous natural passes between the southern valleys and the basin of Lake Ontario. The highlands occupying the s. w. corner of the co. also form a portion of the watershed, being drained by branches of Canistota River on the e. and of Genesee River on the w. The highest summits in the co. are about 2,500 feet above tide.¹

The upland region has nearly a uniform elevation, with a slight inclination toward the n. It is intersected by numerous deep valleys, which have evidently been excavated by the action of water.² The formation of the steep hillsides which border upon these valleys is such as to prove conclusively that they were once united, and that a wide, rolling plateau spread over the region now so irregular and broken. The principal of these valleys are those of Canistota and Conhocton Rivers, extending nearly n. w. and s. e. through the co. From these valleys numerous others diverge at nearly right angles and branch off into countless deep, crooked ravines, intersecting the plateau in every direction. The hills that border upon these valleys are usually steep and 300 to 600 feet high.

Conhocton River flows s. e. through near the center of the co. In high water it was once navigable for arks 14 mi. above Bath. It receives from the s. w. Neils, Bennetts, Campbells, Stockton, Michigan, and Stephens Creeks, and from the n. e. Twelve Mile, Ten Mile, Five Mile, (or Kanona,) Mud,³ and Meads Creeks. Canistota River flows through a valley s. w. of the Conhocton and nearly parallel to it. In freshets it rises 6 to 8 feet, and is then navigable for boats and arks about 40 mi. Its chief tributaries are Canacadea, Crosby, Purdy, Bennetts, Col. Bills, and Tuscarora Creeks, all from the s. w. Tioga River rises in Penn., flows n. through a deep, wild mountain valley, and unites with the Canistota at Erwin, and with the Conhocton at Painted Post, from the latter place the combined stream taking the name of Chemung River.⁴ Canaseraga Creek, flowing n., drains the n. w. corner of the co.; and several small streams rising in the s. w. corner form branches of Genesee River. Crooked Lake lies along the n. e. border, in a deep valley nearly surrounded by steep hills 500 to 800 feet high. Little Lake lies in a shallow valley along the e. border of the town of Wayne. It discharges its waters s. into Mud Lake, and through Mud Creek into Conhocton River. Loon Lake, in Wayland, lies in a valley which is the southern continuation of the valley of Hemlock Lake in Livingston co. Still further s., in the same valley, is Mud Lake, a small sheet of water, the outlet of which flows s. and empties into the Conhocton.

The shales and sandstones of the Portage group outcrop in all the deep ravines in the n. part of the co. and in the w. bank of Crooked Lake. Elsewhere, the Chemung group composes most of the surface rocks. Near the State Line the highest hills are capped with a coarse, silicious conglomerate, which forms the floor of the coal measures.⁵ A feeble brine spring is found at La Grange,

² These valleys must have been excavated by more powerful currents of water than now flow through them; and their formation belongs to the drift period of geology.

³ Mud Creek is the outlet of Mud Lake, in Schuyler co. At the first settlement of the co. this stream was navigable, and arks were floated from Mud Lake down the creek and the Conhocton to the Susquehanna, and thence to the Baltimore market. Since the clearing of the forests, this stream has entirely failed for purposes of navigation, and now, in summer, it is almost dry.

and sulphur springs in Campbell, Jasper, and Urbana. The soil in general is composed of detritus of the adjacent rocks, and is better adapted to grazing than tillage. Upon the intervals along the larger streams the soil is a fertile alluvium. The extensive flats upon the Chemung are among the finest agricultural lands in the State. Agriculture forms the chief occupation of the people. Grain is largely produced on the alluvial lands, and stock is extensively raised on the upland. Stock and wool growing and dairying are the principal branches of agriculture pursued. Lumbering is still extensively carried on,—though it is gradually decreasing. The manufactures are principally confined to lumber, articles of wood, and the heavier and coarser products necessary to an agricultural region.

The co. is divided into the northern and southern Jury Districts, the co. buildings being respectively situated at Bath and Corning.¹ The courthouse at Bath is a commodious brick building, erected in 1828.² The jail is built of wood and closely surrounded by other buildings. The cells for prisoners are in the basement, and are not provided with any means of ventilation. Its arrangements show a culpable neglect and an entire disregard of the general sentiments of the co. and of the age. The co. clerk's office is permanently located at Bath. The courthouse at Corning is a fine brick edifice, erected in 1853-54 at a cost of $14,000. The jail at Corning was erected at the same time. The courts are held alternately at Bath and Corning. The co. poorhouse is located upon a farm of 214 acres about 2 mi. n. e. of Bath Village.³ The average number of inmates is 75; and they are supported at an average weekly cost of $1.00 each. The farm yields a revenue of about $2,000. No instruction is afforded; but the children of proper age are bound out.

The New York & Erie R. R. enters the co. from Chemung and extends along the valleys of the Chemung, Tioga, and Canisteo Rivers to Hornellsville, and the Canacadea to the w. border of the co. It passes through Corning, Erwin, Addison, Rathbone, Cameron, Canisteo, and Hornellsville.⁴ The Buffalo, N. Y. & E. R. R. extends n. w. from Corning up the Conhocton Valley, through Erwin, Campbell, Bath, Avoca, Cohocton, and Wayland, to the n. border of the co. This road intersects the Genesee Valley R. R. at Avon, the N. Y. Central at Batavia, the Buffalo & New York City at Attica, and the N. Y. & Erie at Corning. The Hornellsville Division of the Buffalo, New York & Erie R. R. extends n. w. up the valley of the Canisteo from Hornellsville, passing through that town and the s. w. corner of Dansville. The Blossburg & Corning R. R. extends from Corning, through Erwin and Lindley, s. along the Tioga Valley to the Blossburg coal region. Crooked Lake is navigated by steam and canal boats, and forms a link in the chain of the internal water communication of the State. It is united with the Erie Canal at Montezuma by Crooked Lake Canal, Seneca Lake, and the Cayuga and Seneca Canals. The Chemung Canal navigable feeder extends from Corning e. to Horseheads, in Chemung co. Considerable lumber is floated down the rivers and finds a market at Philadelphia and Baltimore. These various works of internal improvement afford ample facilities for the transportation of goods and passengers, and bring the farm products of the co. into close proximity to the Eastern markets.

Six newspapers are published in the co.⁵

² The first co. officers were William Kersey, First Judge; Abraham Bradley and Eleazar Lindley, Associate Judges; Geo. D. Cooper, Co. Clerk; William Dunn, Sheriff; and Stephen Ross, Surrogate.

⁴ This road was opened to Corning, Jan. 1, 1860, and to Hornellsville, Sept. 3 of the same year.

⁵ The Bath Gazette and Genesee Advertiser, the first paper published in Western New York, was established at Bath by Wm. Kersey and James Eddie in 1796, and was continued several years. In 6 months from its first issue its circulation had reached 1000 copies.

The Steuben and Allegany Patriot was started at Bath in 1816 by Benj. Smead, and was continued until 1822. It was then changed to

The Farmers' Advocate and Steuben Advertiser. In 1849 it passed into the hands of William C. Rhoades, and in 1867 into those of P. S. Donahoe, by whom it is now published as

The Steuben Farmers' Advocate.

The Farmers' Gazette was commenced at Bath in 1816 by David Rumsey.

The Steuben Messenger was started at Bath, April 17, 1825, by David Rumsey, and was published by him, Saml. M. Eddie, Wm. P. Agnel, and Chas. Adams successively until 1834, when its name was changed to

The Constitutionalist, and its publication was continued successively by R. L. Underhill, Whitmore & Van Valkenburgh, and Dowe & Richards, and by the last named firm as

The Steuben Democrat, until 1844. The paper was then suspended. In 1848 it was renewed by L. J. Beach, and in 1849 it was transferred to Geo. H. Bidewell, by whom the publication was continued until 1852.

The Steuben Whig was published at Bath during the political campaign of 1824, by William M. Swain.

The Steuben Courier was established at Bath in 1843 by Hull & Whitmore. It is now published by H. H. Hull.

The Temperance Gem was published at Bath in 1854, by Jenny and Caroline Rumsey.

The Addison Record was published in Addison by Isaac D. Booth from 1840 to 1842, and in 1849 by Dryden & Peck.

The Addison Advocate was published by H. D. Dyer in 1848-49.

The Voice of the Nation was commenced at Addison by R. Denton in 1862. In 1865 the paper passed to Anthony L. Underhill, by whom it was published until 1866, when it was removed to Bath and its name changed to The Steuben American, and its publication continued until May, 1867.

The Canisteo Express was published at Addison in 1860 by T. Messenger.

Steuben co. was all included in the Phelps and Gorham Purchase. It was sold by Phelps and Gorham to Robert Morris, who conveyed it to Sir Wm. Pulteney and others, in London. The territory was surveyed into townships and lots by Wm. Bull, for the Pulteney estate, in 1792-93. Sales were made by townships, at 18 and 20 cts. per acre. The first settlements were made in 1787-90, by immigrants from Wyoming, Penn., who located upon Chemung River, in the s. e. part of the co. These early settlers were originally from Conn. About 1790, settlements commenced in the w. part, adjoining Yates co. In 1792-93, Capt. Chas. Williamson,¹ agent of the Pulteney estate, commenced a settlement at Bath. He was accompanied by a large number of Scotch and German immigrants; and under his energetic and liberal policy the settlement progressed with great rapidity. The greater part of the early settlers came from Penn. by way of Susquehanna and Chemung Rivers. Subsequently large numbers came from Eastern New York, New England, and New Jersey.² The co. was divided by the Court of General Sessions, in 1796, into 6 towns, viz.: Bath, Canisteo, Dansville, Fredericton, Middletown, and Painted Post, comprising the territory now forming 31 towns of this co. and parts of Allegany, Yates, Livingston, and Schuyler cos. In 1790 the population was 168; in 1800 it was 1,788; and in 1855, 62,965. In extent of territory and in agricultural wealth it now ranks among the first cos. in the State.³

ADDISON⁴—was formed, as "Middletown," in March, 1796. Its name was changed April 6, 1808. A part of Troupsburgh was taken off in 1808, Cameron in 1822, a part of Woodhull in 1828, and a part of Rathbone in 1856. It lies upon the s. border of the co., just e. of the center. The surface is mostly a hilly upland, broken by the valley of the Canisteo and its branches. The principal valley is about 1½ mi. wide and is bordered by steep hillsides 300 to 400 feet high. The principal streams are Canisteo River, and the Tuscarora, Elks Lick, and Goodhue Creeks. Goodhue Lake, covering an area of about 500 acres, lies in the n. w. corner of the town. The soil is principally a clay loam, with strips of gravel and alluvium upon the streams. Addison, (p. v.) situated on Canisteo River, contains 3 churches, a bank, several mills and manufacturing establishments. Pop. about 1,300. South Addison (p. v.) contains 18 dwellings. Addison Hill is a p. o.

The Addison Journal was started in 1851 by R. Denton, and was removed to Allegany co. in 1852.

The Addison Democrat was commenced by Chas. L. Phelps in 1853, and was merged in The Voice of the Nation in 1864.

The Addison Advertiser, established in 1853 by E. M. Johnson & Henry Baldwin, is still published.

The Corning and Blossburg Advocate was commenced at Corning in 1840 by Chas. Adams. In 1841 it passed into the hands of Henry H. Hull, by whom it was merged, in 1843, in the Steuben Courier, at Bath.

The Corning Journal was commenced by Thomas Messenger in May, 1847. In 1851 it passed to A. W. McDowell and G. W. Pratt, and in 1853 to Dr. Pratt, its present publisher.

The Corning Sun was started in 1853 by M. M. Pomeroy and P. C. Van Gelder. In 1854 Rev. Ira Brown became the publisher, and changed its name to

The Elmira Southern Tier Farmer and Corning Sun, and continued it until 1856.

The United States Farmer was published at Corning in the spring of 1856.

The Corning Democrat was established in 1857 by Chas. T. Huston. It is now published by Frank E. Brown.

The Painted Post Gazette was started by — Fairchild in 1846, and continued 1 year.

The Painted Post Herald was published by Hawley & Bennett from 1848 to 1860.

The Hornellsville Tribune was commenced in Nov. 1851, by Edwin Hough. It is now published by E. Hough & Son.

The National American was established at Hornellsville in 1856 by C. M. Harmon. In Nov. 1858, it was sold to Chas. A. Kinney, and its name changed to the Canisteo Valley Journal.

A paper was published for a time at Hammondsport, on Crooked Lake.

¹ Capt. Williamson was a Scotchman, and an officer in the British 94th regiment of infantry during the period of the Revolution; but he did not serve in the war, in consequence of having been made a prisoner by the French while crossing the Atlantic.

² "A large proportion of the first settlers upon the Canisteo were from Penn., and had within them a goodly infusion of that boisterous spirit and love of rough play for which the free and manly sons of the backwoods are everywhere famous. On the Susquehanna frontier, before the Revolution, had arisen an athletic, scuffling, wrestling race, lovers of hard blows, sharp shooters, and runners, who delighted in nothing more than in those ancient sports by which the backs and limbs of all stout hearted youths have been tested since the days of Hercules. The eating of bears, the drinking of grog, the devouring of hominy, venison, and all the invigorating diet of the frontiers, the hewing down of forests, the paddling of canoes, the fighting of savages, all combined to form a generation of yeomen and foresters, daring, rude, and free. Canisteo was a sprout from this stout stock, and on the generous river flats flourished with amazing vigor. Every thing that could eat, drink, and wrestle was welcome,—Turk or Tuscarora, Anak or Anthropophagus, Blue Beard or Blunderbore. A 'back hold' with a Ghoul would not have been declined, nor a drinking match with a Berserkir. Since the Centaurs never has there been better specimen of a 'half horse' tribe. To many of the settlers in other parts of the country, who emigrated from the decorous civilization of the East and South, these boisterous foreigners were objects of astonishment. When 'Canisteo' went abroad, the public soon found it out. On the Conchocton they were known to some as the Six Nations, and, to the amusement and wonder of young Europeans, would sometimes visit at Bath, being of a social disposition, and sit all day, 'singing, telling stories, and drinking grog, and never get drunk, nayther.' To the staid and devout they were Arabs,—cannibals. Intercourse between the scattered settlements of the colony was, of course, limited mainly to visits of necessity; but rumor took the fair fame of Canisteo in hand, and gave the settlement a notoriety through all the land which few 'rising villages,' even of the present day, enjoy. It was pretty well understood over all the country that beyond the mountains of Steuben, in the midst of the most rugged district of the wilderness, lay a corn growing valley, which had been taken possession of by some vociferous tribe, whether of Mamelukes or Tartars no one could precisely say, whose whooping and obstreperous laughter was heard far and wide, surprising the solitudes."—McMaster's Hist. Steuben co., pp. 66-7-8.

³ This co. sympathized to some extent in the hostile feeling that prevailed throughout the Holland Land Company's Purchase toward its European proprietors a few years since; but in no instance were the processes of the courts seriously impeded or effectually resisted, and juries have never refused to render for the proprietors as the facts warranted. There was doubtless little interest felt by the foreign owners in this estate beyond the 'of realising the greatest sum possible from their lands; and the heavy burden of debts, interest, assignments, and back payments, perhaps not always borne with patience, have been gradually discharged, until but a comparatively small amount remains.

The first settlement was made by Samuel Rice, in 1791.¹ The first church (M. E.) was organized in 1827, at East Hill.²

AVOCA³—was formed from Bath, Cohocton, Howard, and Wheeler, April 12, 1843. It is an interior town, lying n. w. of the center of the co. The surface is mostly a broken upland, divided into two ridges by the valley of the Conhocton. The declivities of the hills are steep, and their summits are about 400 feet above the river. The streams are Conhocton River and its tributaries Twelve Mile and Ten Mile Creeks from the n., and Bennetts and Neils Creeks from the s. w. The valley of the river is about 1½ mile wide. The soil is a clayey and gravelly loam. Avoca, (p. v.), situated in the valley of the Conhocton, is a station on the B., N. Y. & E. R. R. It contains 2 churches, an iron foundery, and a flouring mill. Pop. 301. Wallace (p. o.) is a station on the B., N. Y. & E. R. R. The first settlement was made in 1800, by Michael Buchanan.⁴ There are 2 churches in town; Bap. and M. E.

BATH⁵—was formed March 18, 1796. Pulteney was taken off in 1808, a part of Howard and Cohocton in 1812, a part of Wheeler in 1820, Urbana in 1822, a part of Avoca in 1843, and a part of Cohocton in 1852. A part of Urbana was annexed April 26, 1839. It lies a little n. e. of the center of the co. Its surface is broken and hilly. The Conhocton Valley, extending s. e. through the center, divides the town into two nearly equal parts. The s. half is a hilly upland, and the n. half consists of a series of wide valleys broken by several steep and isolated hills. The streams are Conhocton River and its tributaries Five Mile and Mud Creeks from the n., and Campbells and Stocktons Creeks from the s. The Crooked Lake Valley extends n. w., and opens into the Conhocton Valley at the village of Bath, 340 feet above the lake. The soil is chiefly a gravelly and clayey loam, with a deep alluvium in the valleys. Bath, (p. v.), incorp. April 12, 1816, is situated upon the n. bank of the Conhocton. It is a half-shire of the co. It commands the trade of a rich agricultural district and has a manufacturing business of considerable importance. It contains the co. buildings, 6 churches, 2 banks, and 2 newspaper offices. Pop. 2,012. Kanona,⁶ (p. v.) n. w. of Bath, a station on the B., N. Y. & E. R. R., contains 2 churches and 40 houses; and Savona,⁷ (p. v.), s. e. of Bath, a station on the same r. r., contains 2 churches and 232 inhabitants; Somora (p. v.) contains 1 church and 20 houses. The first settlement was made at Bath Village, in 1793, by Charles Williamson, land agent for the Pulteney estate, with 15 families, mostly Scotch and Germans.⁸ The first settled minister was Rev. John Niles, who moved to the town in 1807.⁹

BRADFORD¹⁰—was formed from "Jersey," (now Orange, Schuyler co.,) April 20, 1836. A part was annexed to Orange, April 17, 1854. It lies near the center of the e. border of the co. Its surface is a hilly upland, broken by the valley of Mud Creek. Mud Lake, near the e. border, in Schuyler co., is 1,100 feet above tide, and the summits of the hills are about 600 feet above the lake. The soil is generally a gravelly and clayey loam and best adapted to pasturage. Bradford, (p. v.) on the outlet of Mud Lake, in the n. e. part of the town, contains 1 church and a gristmill and has a pop. of 260. South Bradford (p. v.) contains 1 church and 20 houses.

¹ Among the first settlers were Elisha Gilbert, Saml. and Reuben Searis, John and Isaac Martin, Wm. Wombough, Wm. B. Jones, Israel Chaucey, Jesse Rowley, Amos Carr, and Amos Towseley. The first birth was that of Stephen Rice; the first marriage, that of Brown Gillespie and Miss Gilbert; and the first death, that of James Martin. Wm. Wombough built the first sawmill, in 1805, and the first gristmill, in 1806. The first store was kept by Samuel Smith, and the first inn by Reuben Searis.

² The census reports 8 churches in town; 3 M. E., Bap., F. W. Bap., Prot. E., Presb., and R. C.

³ Probably named from Tom Moore's "Sweet Vale of Avoca." The early settlers called the place "Buchanan," or the "Eight Mile Tree."

⁴ James Moore, Joel Collier, Asa Phillips, James McWhorter, Finley McClure, Daniel McKensie, Abraham Towner, Jonathan Tilton, James Babcock, John Donabe, Richard and John Van Buskirk, Eleazar Tucker, — Moody, Henry and Allen Smith, James Davis, and Samuel W. Burnham were among the first settlers. Michael Buchanan 2d was born in 1809; Michael Buchanan died in 1811; and James McWhorter and widow Buchanan were married in 1812. Eleazar Tucker built the first sawmill, and Jonathan Tilton the first gristmill, in 1826. Joel Collier kept the first inn, in 1808, and Alonso Simmons the first store, in 1830.

⁵ Named from Lady Bath, only child and heiress of Sir Wm. Pulteney, of London. She was succeeded July 16, 1806, by Sir John L. Johnstone, of Scotland, who appointed Robert Troup agent. Its Indian name was Tanighnaguanda.—McMaster's Hist. Steuben, pp. 111, 148.

⁸ Dugald and Charles Cameron, Thos. Metcalf, Hector McKenzie, Andrew Smith, Geo. McClure, James McDonald, Henry McElwee, James Reese, Robert Campbell, and William Dunn settled in the town in 1793; and Wm. Kersey, John Wilson, Geo. B. Cooper, Daniel McKenzie, and Gustavus and Brown Gillespie soon after. Charles Williamson Dunn, born in 1795, was the first male child born in town. The first saw and grist mills were built in 1793, by Charles Williamson; and the first inn was kept the same year, by John Metcalf.

The proprietors of the Pulteney estate indulged in visions of boundless wealth to result from the settlement of their lands. They supposed that the natural avenue to market from the rich "Genesee country" was down the Susquehanna, and that a city might be founded upon some of the headwaters of that stream which would command the entire trade of the West. After a survey of the region, the present site of Bath was selected as the location of the future city. Every inducement was held out to lure settlers; and for several years the markets of Bath proved a mine of wealth to the few who raised more grain than enough for their own use. Williamson erected a theater within a few years after the first settlement, in anticipation of the future metropolitan character of the place. A race course was also established, which for many years attracted sportsmen from all parts of the country. The golden visions of civic grandeur were never realized.

⁹ The census reports 9 churches in town; 3 Presb., 2 Bap., 3 M. E., Prot. E., and R. C. ¹⁰ Named from Gen. Bradford.

The first settlement was made in 1793, by Frederick Bartles and John Hervey, from New Jersey.¹ Rev. E. Sanford was the first preacher in town; and Rev. Mr. Laselle, (Bap.,) who settled in town in 1816, was the first settled minister. There are 2 churches in town; Bap. and M. E.

CAMERON²—was formed from Addison, April 16, 1822. Thurston was taken off in 1844, and a part of Rathbone in 1856. It lies a little s. of the center of the co. Its surface is a high, rolling upland, broken by the deep valley of Canisteo River, which flows s. e. through near the center of the town. The soil is a clayey and gravelly loam. Cameron, (p. v.,) on the Canisteo, is a station on the Erie R. R. and contains 2 churches and 35 houses; West Cameron (p. v.) contains 1 church and 15 houses. North Cameron is a p. o. CATON—was formed from "Painted Post," (now Corning,) as "Wormly," March 28, 1839, and its name was changed April 3, 1840. It is the s. e. corner town of the co. Its surface is a rolling upland, more nearly level than most towns in the co. A considerable portion is yet covered with forests. The streams are small brooks, flowing northward. The soil is a clayey and shaly loam. Lumber is extensively manufactured. Caton, (p. v.,) near the center of the town, contains 3 churches and 34 houses. A temporary settlement was made in town in 1814, by Joseph and Charles Wolcott; but the first permanent settlement was made in 1819, by Isaac Rowley, from Bradford co., Penn.⁹ The first church (Presb.) was organized in 1832; and the Rev. Benj. Harron was the first settled pastor.¹⁰

¹ Among the first settlers were John Hamlet, Saml. S. Camp, Abram Rosenburg, Henry Switzer, John Schinner, Thomas Rolis, Michael Scott, Daniel Bartholomew, Henry Axtelle, Ezekiel Sackett, and — Smith. The first birth was that of a daughter of John Hervey, in 1799; and the first death, that of Mrs. Thos. Rolis, in Aug. 1803. Frederick Bartles built the first saw and grist mill, about 1795; and Frederick and Charles Bartles opened the first store, about 1800, and the first inn, in 1806. The first school was taught by — Smith, in 1810.

⁴ S. M. E., Presb., and Christian.

⁵ Named from the Campbell family, who were early and prominent settlers.

built the first sawmill, and Campbell & Knox the first gristmill. Robert Campbell kept the first inn, and Frederick Stewart the first store.

⁷ Col. John Stevens, Benj. Crosby, Arthur Erwin, Solomon Bennett, Joel Thomas, Uriah Stevens, Jr., Jedediah Stephens, Wm. Baker, James Hadley, Joshua Stephens, W. S. COHOCTON—was formed from Bath and Dansville, June 18, 1812. A part of Avoca was taken off in 1843, and a part of Wayland in 1848. It lies on the n. border of the co., w. of the center. The surface is mostly a hilly upland, separated into ridges by deep and narrow valleys. The principal streams are Conhocton River, flowing southerly through the center, and its tributaries. The soil is generally a slaty and gravelly loam. Liberty, (Cohocton p. o.,) on the Conhocton, is a station on the B., N. Y. & E. R. R. and contains 2 churches. Pop. 200. North Cohocton (p. v.) contains 1 church and 30 houses. Bloods,¹ a hamlet, is a station on the n. r., 1 mi. from North Cohocton. The first settlement was made in 1796, by Richard Hooker and Joseph Bivin.¹ Rev. Elisha Brownson, (Bap.,) the first settled minister, removed to the town in 1811. The census reports 4 churches in town; 3 M. E. and Presb.

CORNING²—was formed, as "Painted Post,"³ March 18, 1796. Its name was changed March 31, 1852. Erwin and Hornby were taken off in 1826, and "Wormly" (now Caton) in 1839. A part was annexed to Erwin in 1856. It lies on the n. border of the co., s. of the center. The wide valley of Chemung River, extending n. w. and s. e. through the center of the town, and several lateral valleys, divide the uplands into rounded hills and narrow ridges. Its streams are Borden, Post, Narrows, Clump Foot, and Winfield Creeks, tributaries of Chemung River. The soil upon the hills is a heavy, slaty loam, and in the valleys a fine quality of sandy and gravelly loam, occasionally intermixed with clay. Corning, (p. v.,) incorp. Sept. 6, 1848, is situated on the s. bank of Chemung River, in the w. part of the town. It is a half-shire of the co. The Chemung Canal, the Blossburg & Corning R. R., and the B., N. Y. & E. R. R. terminate here; and the village is an important station on the N. Y. & Erie R. R. It contains 5 churches, 2 newspaper establishments, 2 banks, a State arsenal, and several mills and manufacturing establishments, and commands an extensive and constantly increasing trade.⁴ Pop. 3,626. Knoxville,⁵ opposite Corning, contains 2 churches and a pop. of 628. Gibson lies on the n. bank of the Chemung, 1 mi. n. of Corning. Pop. 428. Centerville contains 25 houses. East Painted Post is a p. o. The first settlement was made near the village of Corning, in 1788, by Frederick Calkins and Benj. Eaton.⁷ The first religious services were conducted by John Warren, in 1793. There are 7 churches in town.⁸

DANSVILLE⁹—was formed in March, 1796. Parts of Cohocton and Howard were taken off in 1812, a part of Wayland in 1848, and of Fremont in 1854. A part was annexed to Sparta in 1822, and a part of Cohocton was re-annexed April 26, 1834. It is the n. town upon the w. border of the co. The surface is mostly an upland, divided into ridges by the narrow valleys of small streams. The declivities of the hills are steep and their summits are 300 to 400 feet above the valleys. The streams are head branches of Canaseraga Creek, flowing n., and of Canisteo River, flowing s. The soil is a sandy and gravelly loam in the n. and n., and gravel underlaid by hardpan in the s. w.

² James and Aruna Woodward settled in the town not long after; Joseph Chamberlain, in 1805; and Saml. Chamberlain, Capt. Jonas Cleland, Joseph Shattuck, Horace Fowler, and — Eddy, in 1806. Timothy Sherman, James Bernard, Saml. Rhoades, Jesse Atwood, Isaac Morehouse, and Chas. Burlingame were also early settlers. The first marriage was that of Jos. Bivin and Sarah Hooker, in 1798; and the first birth, that of Bethiah Hooker, their child, in 1800. The first death was that of Richard Hooker, Feb. 10, 1801. Jonas Cleland built the first saw and grist mills, in 1808; and Jos. Shattuck kept the first inn, in 1809. Sophia Trumbull taught the first school, in 1810.

³ Named from Hon. Erastus Corning, of Albany.

⁴ In the summer of 1779, a party of Tories and Indians, under the command of a loyalist named McDonald, returned from an incursion into the Susquehanna settlements, bringing with them many of their number wounded. At the confluence of Tioga and Conhocton Rivers, Captain Montour, son of the famous Queen Catharine, a chief of great promise, died of his wounds. "His comrades buried him by the riverside, and planted above his grave a post on which were painted various symbols and rude devices. This monument was known throughout the Genesee Forests as 'The Painted Post.' It was a landmark well known to all the Six Nations, and was often visited by their braves and chieftains." This account of the origin of the Painted Post was given to Benj. Patterson, the hunter, by a man named Taggart, who was carried to Fort Niagara a prisoner by McDonald's party, and was a witness of the burial of Capt. Montour, or at least was in the encampment at the mouth of the Tioga at the time of his death. Col. Harper, of Harpersfield, the well known officer of the frontier militia of New York in the Revolution, informed Judge Knox, of Knoxville, in this co., that the Painted Post was erected over the grave of a chief who was wounded at the battle of the "Hog-Back" and brought in a canoe to the head of the Chemung, where he died. It was well understood by the early settlers that this monument was erected in memory of some distinguished warrior who had been wounded in one of the border battles of the Revolution and afterward died at this place. The post stood for many years after the settlement of the co.; and the story goes that it rotted down at the butt, and was preserved in the bar-room of a tavern till about the year 1810 and then mysteriously disappeared. It is also said to have been swept away in a freshet.—McMaster's Hist. of Steuben. Sims's Hist. Schoharie, p. 333.

⁶ Named from Judge John Knox, of this town.

⁷ Benj. and Peleg Gorton, Jr., Ephraim Patterson and his sons Ichabod and Stephen, Bradford Eggleston, Justus Wolcott, Elias William, and Henry McCormick, Heskiah Thurber, Jonathan Cook, Samuel Colgrove, and Eli and Eldad Mead settled in the town in 1790-91-92; Jonathan and Warren Rowley in 1794; James Turner and Caleb Wolcott in 1796; George McCulloch and Benj. Patterson in 1796; and Nehemiah Hubbell in 1798. The first birth was that of James Calkins, Nov. 24, 1790; the first marriage, that of Benj. Gorton and Rachel Wolcott, in 1794; and the first death, that of Ichabod Patterson, in Aug. 1794. Ichabod Patterson built the first sawmill, and Jas. Henderson the first gristmill, both in 1793; Benj. Eaton kept the first store, in 1791, and Benj. Patterson the first inn, in 1798. The first school was taught by Samuel Colgrove, in 1793.

The first birth was that of William Stephens, in Dec. 1792; the first marriage, that of Reuben Crosby and Jenny McQueen, in 1799; and the first death, that of a child of Judge Hornell. Judge Hornell built the first saw and grist mills, and kept the first store and inn. The first school was taught by Abigail Hurlbut, in 1796.

⁷ 2 Presb., Prot. E. Bap., M. E., and R. C.

⁸ Reuben and Abraham Smith, Abel Bullard, Jacob and Thos. Bennett, Charles McConnell, Simeon McMurry, and — Colgrove settled in the town in 1808; Samuel Baker, Joel Bullard, Benj. Bennett, Ephraim Rumsey, Wm. Allen, Daniel N. Bennett, Jonas and Seth Rice, and Nathan Cory in 1810-11; and Shalom Bacon, Wm. Goff, Israel Baldwin, and Rufus Halsey in 1812. Arthurs Bullard was born in 1809, and Mrs. Rowley died the same year,—the first birth and death in town. Henry Kennedy built the first sawmill, in 1809; James Vaughn, the first gristmill, in 1810; and Benj. Bennett kept the first inn, in 1816.

⁹ 2 Bap., and 1 each Presb., M. E., and Ref. Presb.

¹⁰ Named from Sergeant Jasper, noted for his courage at the battle of Fort Moultrie, S. C., June 28, 1776.

¹² Bap., Presb., Christian, M. E., and Wes. Meth.

¹³ Named in honor of Col. Eleazer Lindley.

ings. Erwin Center is a r. r. station and hamlet upon the river, near the n. border of the town. The first settlement was made in 1790, by Col. Eleazar Lindley, from N. J., the original proprietor of the town, who located upon the Tioga Flats.¹

PRATTSBURGH²—was formed from Pulteney, April 12, 1813, and a part of Wheeler was taken off in 1820. It is centrally situated upon the n. border of the co. Its surface is a hilly upland, broken by the valleys of several small streams flowing in a general s. w. direction. The principal streams are Five Mile, Ten Mile, and Twelve Mile Creeks. The valley at Prattsburgh Village is 1,400 feet above tide, and the hills are 300 to 400 feet higher. The soil is a gravelly and clay loam. Prattsburgh (p. v.) was incorp. Dec. 7, 1848. It contains the Franklin Academy,³ 2 churches, and several manufacturing establishments.⁴ Pop. about 600. Rikers Hollow (p. o.) is a hamlet. The first settler was Jared Pratt, who came in 1801 and for 2½ years was the only inhabitant.⁵ The first religious services were held at the house of Jared Pratt, by Rev. John Niles, in the fall of 1803.⁶

PULTENEY⁷—was formed from Bath, Feb. 12, 1808. Prattsburgh was taken off in 1813, and a part of Urbana in 1848. It lies upon the w. shore of Crooked Lake, and is the n. e. corner town of the co. The surface is a rolling upland, 700 to 900 feet above the level of the lake. The declivities along the lake shore are broken by numerous narrow ravines formed by small streams. The soil is chiefly a shaly and gravelly loam, and in some parts near the lake it is clayey. Harmonyville (Pulteney p. o.) contains 2 churches and 20 houses; and Bluffport (South Pulteney p. o.) 20 houses. Peltonville (p. o.) is a hamlet. Gullicksville, a landing on the lake, has a storehouse and 8 houses. Settlement commenced in 1802.⁸ Rev. Ephraim Eggleston, the first settled preacher, removed to the town in 1805. The census reports 6 churches.⁹

RATHBONE¹⁰—was formed from Addison, Cameron, and Woodhull, March 28, 1856. It is an interior town, lying s. of the center of the co. Its surface consists of a high, rolling upland, broken by the valleys of Canistota River and a branch of Tuscarora Creek. The upland is 300 to 400 feet above the valleys. Naked and precipitous ledges of rock crop out on the hillsides along the valleys. The soil is a clayey and shaly loam, and in the valleys alluvium. Rathboneville, (p. v.) on Canistota River, is a station on the Erie R. R. and contains 1 church, a flouring mill, and 33 houses. West Addison (p. o.) and Cameron Mills (p. o.) are hamlets. The first settlements were made in 1793–95.¹¹ There are 2 M. E. churches in town.

THURSTON¹²—was formed from Cameron, Feb. 28, 1844. It is an interior town, lying just s. e. of the center of the co. Its surface is mostly a high, broken upland, forming a portion of the dividing ridge between Conhocton and Canistota Rivers. The summits of the hills are 500 to 600 feet above the river valleys. The streams are Stockton Creek, in the n. w., and Michigan Creek, in the s., flowing in deep, narrow ravines bordered by steep hillsides. The soil is a shaly and gravelly loam. Merchantville, in the e., Bonny Hill, (p. o.), in the n. e., and Risingville, (p. o.), in the w., are hamlets. Thurston and South Thurston are p. offices. The first settlers were William Smith, Luke Bonny, and Anderson Carpenter, at Bonny Hill, in ¹ Col. Lindley served with the Jersey Blues during the Revolutionary War. In his migration to his new home he was accompanied by his two sons Saml. and Eleazar, his son-in-law Ezekiel Mulford and John Seelye, and a man named David Cook. The first child born was Eliza Mulford, Aug. 10, 1792; the first marriage, that of David Cook, jr. and Elizabeth Cady; and the first death, that of Col. Eleazar Lindley, in June, 1794. Joseph Miller taught the first school, near the Penn. line, in 1793; the widow of Col. Lindley kept the first inn, on the w. bank of the river; and John P. Ryers, the first store. The first sawmill was erected by Col. Lindley. There is no church, no hotel, nor place where liquor is sold in the town.

⁴ A foundery, a tannery and a flouring mill.

⁵ Rev. John Niles, David Buell, Saml. Tutthill, and Capt. Joel Pratt came into town in 1803; William P. Curtis, Pomeroy Hull, and Salisbury Burton in 1804; Noah Niles, Cyril Ward, Aaron Bull, Enoch Niles, Harmon Fowler, Rufus Blodgett, and Stephen Hall, in 1806. They were all originally from New England. The first child born was Mariette Pratt, in 1802; the first death, a daughter of Wm. P. Curtis, drowned, in 1804; and the first marriage, that of Isaac Pardee and Patty Waldo, in 1806. The first school was taught in a church by Horace Bull, in 1806–07; the first inn was kept by Aaron Bull, the same year; the first mill was erected on Five Mile Creek, by Robert Porter. Capt. Joel Pratt was a large proprietor of the town; and the first settlement was conducted wholly under his encouragement, advice, and direction.

⁶ The census reports 6 churches; 2 Bap., 2 M. E., Cong., and Christian.

⁷ Named from Sir Wm. Pulteney, former owner of the Pulteney Tract.

⁸ The first settlers were Saml. Miller, John Van Camp, G. F. Fitzsimmons, and John Block. James and George Simms, Henry Hoffman, Abraham Bennett, and Shadrach Norris settled in the town in 1805; and Saml. and Nathaniel Wallis, John Ella, Wm. White, James Dally, Erastus Glass, Harmon Emmons, and Seth Pierce in 1806. The first marriage was that of Christopher Tomer and Jane Miller, in 1809; and the first death, that of a child of Jas. Dally, in 1806. Melchior Waggoner built the first sawmill, in 1810, and the first gristmill, in 1814. Shadrach Norris kept the first inn, in 1807; and Augustus Tyler, the first store, in 1808. The first school was taught by Polly Wentworth, in 1806.

⁹ 2 Bap., 2 M. E., Cong., and Presb.

¹¹ James Hadley and Wm. Benham were the first settlers. Among the early settlers were Isaac and Jonathan Tracy, Martin Young, Wm. Morey, Moses Powers, Zephaniah Townsend, Thos. Maybury, and Saml. Colgrove. Isaac Tracy built the first sawmill, in 1806; Lemuel Benham kept the first inn, in 1804, and Gen. Rathbone the first store, in 1842.

¹² Named from Wm. R. Thurston, a landholder residing in N. Y. or vicinity.

1813.¹ The first religious association (M. E.) was formed in 1814; Rev. Parker Buell was the first preacher.²

TROUBSBURGH³—was formed from "Middletown" (now Addison) and Canisteo, Feb. 12, 1808. Parts of Greenwood and Jasper were taken off in 1827, and a part of Woodhull in 1828. A part of Canisteo was annexed April 4, 1818. It lies on the s. border of the co., w. of the center. Its surface is principally a hilly upland, broken by the deep valleys of small streams. The highest summits are 2,500 feet above tide and are the highest points in the co. Troups Creek, flowing s., is the principal stream. The soil is a slaty and clayey loam. Troupsburgh Center, (Troupsburgh p. o.), on Troups Creek, near the center of the town, contains an academy⁴ and 20 dwellings; South Troupsburgh (p. v.) contains 16 dwellings. East Troupsburgh, (p. o.), West Troupsburgh, (p. o.), and Young Hickory (p. o.) are hamlets. The pioneer settler was Samuel B. Rice, from Conn., who located s. of the center of the town in 1805.⁵ The first religious association (M. E.) was formed at the house of Samuel Cady, by Rev. Parker Buell, first preacher. The census reports 5 churches.⁶

URBANA—was formed from Bath, April 17, 1822. A part was annexed to Bath in 1839; a part of Wheeler was annexed May 3, 1839, and a part of Pulteney April 12, 1848. It lies at the head of Crooked Lake, n. e. of the center of the co. Its surface is divided by Pleasant Valley (a continuation of Crooked Lake Valley) into two series of highlands, rising 800 to 1,000 feet above the lake. Cold Spring Creek takes its rise in this valley and flows n. e. to the lake. The soil in the valleys is alluvial, and on the hilltops a heavy, gravelly loam. From their sheltered situation, the slopes of the hills descending to the s. and e. are finely adapted to the culture of the grape.⁷ The town is noted for the production of a superior quality of fine wool. Hammondsport, (Urbana p. o.), at the head of Crooked Lake, was incorp. June 16, 1856. It contains 2 churches and several manufacturing establishments. A daily line of steamboats plies between this place and Penn Yan. Pop. 560. North Urbana, (p. v.), in the n. e. part of the town, contains 2 churches and 20 houses. Cold Spring is a hamlet; and Mount Washington, in the s. e., is a p. o. William Aulls and his son Ephraim, from Penn., settled at Pleasant Valley in 1793.⁸ Elder Ephraim Sanford (Bap.) preached the first sermon, at the house of Mr. Baker, in 1795.⁹

WAYLAND¹⁰—was formed from Cohocton and Dansville, April 12, 1848. A part of Fremont was taken off in 1854. It is the most western town upon the n. border of the co. Its surface is an upland, rolling in the n. and moderately hilly in the s. It forms a portion of the watershed between Susquehanna River and Lake Ontario; and its highest summits are 1,600 to 1,800 feet above tide. The streams are small creeks and brooks. Loon and Mud Lakes are situated in a valley in the s. part of the town, and their waters flow in opposite directions. The outlet of the former is subterranean for half a mi.; and where it comes to the surface it is in sufficient volume to form a valuable mill stream. The soil in the n. is gravel and muck, and in the s. a shaly loam. Wayland, (Wayland Depot p. o.), in the n. e. part of the town, contains 40 dwellings. It is a station on the B., N. Y. & E. R. R. Perkinsville, 2 mi. s. w. of Wayland, contains 2 churches and 30 dwellings. Patchins Mills is a hamlet. Loon Lake is a p. o. The first settlement was made in 1806-07, by Thos. Bowles and John H. Miller.¹¹ The census reports 3 churches.¹²

⁴ This institution has an average attendance of about 60 pupils.

⁷ In 1867, 30 acres were devoted to vineyards; and the success of the experiment was so great that the number of acres was doubled in 1868. There are about 2,000 acres in town with the s. and e. inclination adapted to this purpose.

⁸ Samuel Baker, Eli Read, and William Barney settled in Pleasant Valley in 1794; and Capt. Amos Stone, Capt. John Shether, James Shether, and Richard Daniels in 1795. These settlers were from New England, most of them from Conn. They had served through the Revolutionary War, some of them with distinction as officers; and all were inured to the privations and dangers incident to pioneer settlement. The first child born was Saml. Baker, Jr.; the first marriage, that of Jonathan Barney and Polly Aulls, in 1794; and the first death, that of John Phillips, in Sept. of the same year. Eliphalet Norris taught the first school, in 1795, at Pleasant Valley; Caleb Chapman kept the first inn, at N. Urbana; Henry A. Townsend the first store, at Cold Spring, in 1815. John Shether built the first sawmill, in Pleasant Valley, in 1795; and Gen. Geo. McClure the first gristmill, at Cold Spring, in 1802.

⁹ The census reports 6 churches; 2 Bap., and 1 each Presb., M. E., Prot. E., and R. C.

¹⁰ Named from Rev. Dr. Francis Wayland, of R. I.

¹¹ Among the early settlers were Adam Zimmerman, David Brown, — Kaiser, Stephen Hicks, Thos. Begole, Solomon, James, and Elisha Brownson, Isaac Willie, Walter and Dr. Warren Patchin, Dennis Hees, Benj. Perkins, and Samuel Draper. The first sawmill was built by Benj. Perkins; and the first gristmill, by Dugald Cameron and Abijah Fowler, in 1816. Saml. Taggart kept the first inn, in 1827; and James L. Monier, the first store, in 1830. The first school was taught by Thos. Wilbur, in 1811.

¹² Evang. Luth., Union, and R. C.

WAYNE¹—named in honor of Gen. Anthony Wayne—was formed, as "Frederickstown," March 18, 1796. Its name was changed April 6, 1808. Reading (Schuyler co.) was taken off in 1806, Orange (Schuyler co.) in 1813, and Barrington (Yates co.) and Tyrone (Schuyler co.) in 1822. A part was annexed to Tyrone April 17, 1854. It is situated upon Crooked Lake, on the e. border of the co. Its surface is a rolling upland, 400 to 600 feet high, descending abruptly to the lake. Little Lake is a beautiful sheet of water lying along the e. border. The soil is a gravelly and slaty loam underlaid by hardpan. Wayne,² (p. v.) on the line of Tyrone, (Schuyler co.,) contains 3 churches and 40 houses. Wayne Four Corners is a p. o. The first settlement was made in 1791, by Zephaniah Hoff, Henry Mapes, Widow Jennings, and Solomon Wixson.³ Rev. Ephraim Sanford (Bap.) was one of the first settlers, and for many years the only clergyman in town. There are 2 churches in town; M. E. and Union.

WEST UNION—was formed from Greenwood, April 25, 1845. It is the s. w. corner town of the co. Its surface is a broken and hilly upland, the highest summits being 2,000 to 2,400 feet above tide. A large part of the town is yet covered with forests. Bennetts Creek is the principal stream. The soil is a heavy, slaty loam. Lumbering is extensively pursued. Rexville (p. o.) and Wileysville (p. o.) are hamlets. West Union is a p. o. The first settler was Abraham V. Olmsted, who located at Rexville in 1822.⁴ The first church (M. E.) was formed at Rexville in 1831. There are 2 churches in town; Bap. and M. E.

WHEELER⁵—was formed from Bath and Prattsburgh, Feb. 25, 1820. A part of Avoca was taken off in 1843, and a part of Urbana in 1839. It is an interior town, lying n. e. of the center of the co. Its surface is a high, rolling upland, broken by the valleys of Five Mile and Ten Mile Creeks and of several small lateral streams. The soil is a shaly and clayey loam, well adapted to both grazing and tillage. Mitchellville (p. v.) contains 20 houses; and Wheeler Center (Wheeler p. o.) 1 church and 15 houses. The first settlement was made in 1799, by Capt. Silas Wheeler, from Albany co.⁶ Rev. Ephraim Eggleston (Bap.) conducted the first religious services, in 1802. There are 2 churches in town; Presb. and M. E.

WOODHULL⁷—was formed from Troupsburgh and Addison, Feb. 18, 1828. A part of Rathbone was taken off in 1856. It is the central town upon the s. border of the co. Its surface is a hilly upland, a considerable portion of which is yet covered with forests. Tuscarora Creek, flowing e. through the northerly part of the town, is the principal stream. The soil is a clayey and gravelly loam. Lumbering is carried on to some extent. Newville, (Woodhull p. o.,) on Tuscarora Creek, contains 3 churches and several manufacturing establishments. Pop. 215. Hedgesville contains 10 houses. The first settlement was made in 1805, by Stephen Dolson, Daniel Johnson, Patrick Breakhill, Bethuel Tubbs, and Samuel B. Rice.⁸ The first church (Presb.) was organized in 1830; and the Rev. Mr. Pomeroy was the first pastor. There are 4 churches in town.⁹

³ Enos, Joseph, and James Silabee, Abraham Hendricks, Joshua Smith, John Holdridge, Elijah Reynolds, and Ephraim Tyler were among the early settlers. The first birth was that of Elizabeth Wixson, Nov. 6, 1793; and the first marriage, that of Ephraim Sanford, Jr. and Julia Hoff. Jas. Silabee kept the first store, and Enos Silabee the first inn. The first school was taught by Nathaniel Frisbee, in 1797.

⁶ Nathan Rose, Wm. Holmes, and Turner Gardner settled in town in 1799; Col. Jonathan Barney and Thos. Aulls in 1800; Philip Murtle in 1802; and Otto F. Marshall, and others, named Bear, Fernal, and Rifle, in 1803. William, son of Jonathan Barney, was born Nov. 1, 1801, and died Dec. 1, 1802,—the first birth and death in town. Hon. Gratian H. Wheeler was a party to the first marriage. Capt. Wheeler built the first sawmill, in 1802; and Geo. W. Taylor the first gristmill, in 1803-04. John Beals kept the first inn, in 1820; and Cornelius Younglove, the first store, in 1836. The first school was taught by Uriel Chapin.

⁷ Capt. Wheeler's first trip to mill is worthy of record. There were, at the time when he had occasion to 'go to mill,' three institutions in the neighborhood where grinding was done,—a the Friends' settlement, at Bath, and at Naples. The millstones of Bath had suspended operations,—there being nothing there to grind, as was reported. Capt. Wheeler made a cart, of which the wheels were sawn from the end of a log of curly maple: the box was of corresponding architecture. He started for Naples with two oxen attached to this vehicle. Two young men went before the oxen with axes and chopped a road, and the clumsy chariot came floundering through the bushes behind, bouncing over the logs and snubbing the stumps, like a ship working through an ice field. The first day they reached a point a little beyond the present village of Prattsburgh, a distance of six miles from their starting point, and the second moored triumphantly at the mill at Naples.—McMaster's Hist. Steuben Co., pp. 195-196.

⁸ Named in honor of Gen. Nathaniel Woodhull, of the Revolution.

pose, and are used either alone or in connection with seaweed, stable manure, compost, guano, ashes, and other fertilizers. Oysters and clams abound in the bays and seas around the island; and the taking of these, and fishing, form the principal occupations of the inhabitants along the shore. From the first settlement of the co. considerable attention has been given to whaling. This business was originally carried on in open boats from the shore;¹ but large vessels are now sent upon long voyages to the Polar Seas.² The preparation of "fish guano," and oil from bunkers,³ shipbuilding, and brickmaking are the principal manufacturing interests of the co.⁴ At Fire Island, Greenport, and Orient, and at most of the villages along the s. county road, are extensive hotels, especially fitted for the accommodation of families from New York City, great numbers of whom spend the summer months at these public houses or in private families.

The county seat is located at Riverhead.⁵ The courthouse is a fine two story brick building, situated near the depôt, and contains the usual county offices, and accommodations for the sheriff's family.⁶ The jail, situated in rear of the courthouse, is a two story stone octagonal building. The county clerk's office is a fireproof brick building. The co. has no poorhouse.⁷

The first regulation concerning public roads was adopted under authority of an act of General Assembly passed in 1724, and was kept alive by repeated enactments. Commissioners appointed by this authority about 1733 laid out 3 principal roads from w. to e. These were called the North, Middle, and South Country Roads, and upon them the principal villages and settlements are located. The project of opening a navigable communication between the bays upon the s. shore of the island was recommended by Gov. Clinton in 1825, and was subsequently authorized by law, but was never carried into effect.⁸ The Long Island R. R. affords the principal avenue of business through the island.⁹ Short stage routes connect the several villages along the n. and s. shores with the e. e.

Seven newspapers are published in the co.; 2 at Greenport, 2 at Huntington, 1 at Sag Harbor, 1 at Patchogue, and 1 at Riverhead.¹⁰

When Long Island first became known, it was inhabited by 13 tribes of Indians, of which all but two resided wholly or in part in this co.¹¹ Of these the Montauks were the most numerous

⁶ This building was erected in 1854 and '55, at a cost of $17,800. The committee appointed to superintend its erection were Sam'l B. Nicoll, Wm. R. Post, and Sylvester Miller. By an act passed April 9, 1813, the clerk of this co. was authorized to establish his office in two places, and to appoint a deputy to have charge of one. The records migrated between Islip and Southold, and were kept many years at Smithtown. The records of wills in this co. extend back to 1669. The records of the court of General Sessions and Common Pleas have been separately recorded since 1723.

⁷ Most of the towns have poorhouses, at which co. paupers are provided for at the co. expense.

¹⁰ Frothingham's Long Island Herald was established at Sag Harbor May 10, 1791, by David Frothingham. In 1802 it was sold to Bellick Osborn, and changed to The Suffolk County Herald. It was sold in Feb. 1804, to Alden Spooner, and its name was changed to

The Suffolk Gazette, and in Feb. 1811, it was discontinued. The Suffolk Co. Recorder was established at Sag Harbor Oct. 19, 1816, by Sam'l A. Seabury. In 1817 it was changed to The American Eagle; 2 years afterward it was discontinued. The Corrector was started at Sag Harbor Aug. 3, 1822, by H. W. Hunt, and is now published by Alex. Hunt.

The Republican Watchman was commenced at Sag Harbor in Sept. 1826, by Sam'l Phillips. In Sept. 1-44, it was removed to Greenport, where it is now published by S. Phillips & Son.

The Suffolk Times was started at Greenport in Aug. 1857, by John J. Riddell, its present publisher.

The American Eagle was established at Huntington in 1821 by Sam'l A. Seabury. In May, 1825, it was changed to The Long Island Journal of Philosophy and Cabinet of Variety, (mo.), pub. by Sam. Fleet. In 1827 it was changed to The Patriot, and was discontinued in 1829.

The Long Islander was started at Huntington in July, 1838, by Walter Whitman, and is now published by Geo. H. Shepard.

The Suffolk Democrat was started Feb. 17, 1847, at Huntington, and is now published by Edward Strahan.

The Suffolk Gazette was commenced at Riverhead in Aug. 1849. After 18 months it was removed to Sag Harbor. In Dec. 1854, it was brought back to Riverhead, and was soon after discontinued.

The Suffolk Herald was established at Patchogue Aug. 14, 1858, by Van Zandt & Co., its present publishers.

The Suffolk Union was started at Riverhead in 1859 by Washington Van Zandt.

The Sag Harbor Express was commenced in 1859, by ———.

and powerful; and the consent of Wyandance,¹ their grand sachem, was necessary to the validity of all Indian grants of that date upon the island. The earliest settlement within the co. was made in 1639, on Gardners Island, under title derived from James Farrett, agent of the Earl of Stirling, to whom a grant of the whole of Long Island had been made by the Plymouth Company.² Southold and Southampton were settled in 1640, Easthampton in 1648, Shelter Island in 1652, Huntington in 1653, Brookhaven in 1655, and Smithtown in 1668, by English immigrants from New England. These settlers were strongly imbued with Puritan doctrines and zealously devoted to their strict observance.³ They naturally sought alliance with the adjacent New England colonies, to whom they were warmly attached, and with whom they were closely united until they were brought under the government of New York. Among the first measures taken by the colonists was the establishment of religious worship and schools, which in most of the towns date from the first or second year of settlement. These were commonly supported by tax, often levied in kind, and sometimes coupled with privileges and grants that are still recognized.

The patents granted by the New York governors created corporations, with municipal powers and privileges which were liberal for that period. These have never been changed, and are still valid. The rights were of two classes,—one belonging to all who might gain a residence and citizenship within the town, and the other pertaining only to the persons named in the patents and their heirs at law. During the Revolution most of the inhabitants of the co. warmly espoused the cause of the colonists; but after the battle of Long Island the British ascendancy was complete, and few opportunities occurred for assisting in the popular movement. Several bold and successful incursions were made by partisan corps; but the armed occupation of the island was at no time interrupted.⁴ During the latter part of the War of 1812 an English fleet was stationed off the eastern coast; but few depredations were committed. The history of the co. from that day to the present is only the record of the industrial pursuits of a thriving people.

BROOKHAVEN—was incorp. by patent, under Gov. Nicoll, March 13, 1666, with the usual privileges of a township;⁵ and Dec. 27, 1686, the patent was confirmed by Gov. Dongan, and extended privileges were granted.⁶ It was recognized as a town March 7, 1788. It occupies the entire width of Long Island, near the center of the co. n. and w. It has 20 mi. of coast on Long Island Sound, 21 on South Bay, and above 30 on Fire Island, which skirts the whole s. coast. Patchogue and Bellport Bays, upon the s. coast, are branches of Great South Bay; and Old Mans Harbor and Port Jefferson, Conscience, Setauket, and Flax Pond Bays, are indentations upon the n. coast from L. I. Sound. The principal capes upon the n. coast are Cranes Neck, Old Field Point,⁷ Little Neck,⁸ Dyers Neck,⁹ Mount Misery, and Rocky Point. A range of low hills extends across the n. part of the town; but elsewhere the surface is level. The principal streams are Peconic River, in the e. part, and the Connecticut, in the central. There are several fresh water ponds of great depth and purity in the town, many of which have no outlet. The soil along the coast, both upon Long Island Sound and South Bay, is a moderately fertile, light, sandy loam, and in the interior it is generally unproductive. Along the streams near their mouths are numerous salt meadows. Port Jefferson¹⁰ (p. v.) is situated at the head of Port Jefferson Bay, on the n. coast. It has a good harbor, and shipbuilding is largely carried on.¹¹ Pop. 1,247. Setauket, (p. v.), on the bay of the same name, contains 2 churches and 4 shipyards and has a pop. of 1,136. Stony Brook,¹² (p. v.), near the line of Smithtown, contains 1 church and has a pop. (in this town) of 542. Mt. Sinai,¹³ (p. v.), on Old Mans Harbor, has a pop. of 276. Millers Place,¹⁴ (p. o.), Rocky Point, and Sweezy but a few individuals in Islip and Brookhaven, about 200 at Shinnecock, and 5 families on Montauk Point. They have lost all knowledge of their language, using only the English, and are intelligent and civilized. They have intermarried to a considerable extent with negroes, and are probably of more than half African blood.

² This grant was made in 1635, and, at the request of Charles I. Farrett was appointed agent in 1637.—Hough's Nantucket Papers, LK.

⁶ This instrument provided that 7 trustees should be annually elected, in whom the legal ownership of the property of the town should be vested. John Palmer, Richard Woodhull, Samuel Eburne, Andrew Gibb, Wm. Satterly, Thos. Jenner, and Thos. Holme were named as the first trustees.

⁷ The Indian name of this point was "Co-met-t-co."

⁸ Called by the Indians "Mi-na-se-roks."

⁹ Its Indian name was "Po-quott."

¹⁰ Formerly known as "Drowned Meadow," and called "So-was-set" by the Indians.

¹¹ There are 5 shipyards upon the e. side of the harbor, and 3 upon the w.

Landing are hamlets on the coast of Long Island Sound. Patchogue¹ (p. v.) is situated on Patchogue Bay, in the s. w. part of the town. It contains 4 churches, an academy, and manufactories of twine, paper, cotton, ropes, and flour. Pop. 1,562. Bellport, (p. v.) on the w. side of Bellport Bay, contains 1 church and an academy. Shipbuilding is carried on to a considerable extent. Pop. 383. Blue Point,² (p. o.), in the s. w. part, is a hamlet. Fire Place, (p. v.) on Bellport Bay, contains 1 church and about 35 houses; Moriches,³ 4 churches and 50 houses; East Moriches, (p. v.), 40 houses; and West Moriches (Moriches p. o.) and Seatauck, hamlets, are situated near the coast of East Bay. Yaphank,⁴ (p. v.) a station on the Long Island R. R., containing 3 churches and 35 houses, and South Haven, (p. v.) containing 1 church and 20 houses, are situated on Connecticut River. Mastic⁵ is a hamlet on Mastic River. Middle Island, (p. o.), containing 2 churches, Selden, (p. o.), 1 church, New Village, (p. o.), 1 church, and Coram,⁶ (Cor-um,) (p. o.), are hamlets in the central part; and Wampmissic,⁷ containing 1 church, and Manorville,⁸ (p. o.), are hamlets in the e. part. Center Moriches is a p. o. Waverly, and Medford, are hamlets and r. r. stations. The town poorhouse is located near Coram, upon a small farm purchased in 1817 at a cost of $900. The lighthouse on Old Fields Point was built in 1823; and another on Fire Island, near Fire Island Inlet, was built in 1858.⁹ The first settlement was made at Setauket,¹⁰ in 1655, by a colony of immigrants from near Boston, Mass.¹¹ The land was bought from the Setauket Indians, and the sale confirmed by a release from Wyandance, Sachem of Montauk. This settlement was received under the government of Conn. in 1661, and Richard Woodhull and Thos. Pierce were appointed magistrates by the General Court. The tract of land between Islip and Bellport, extending to the center of the island, was purchased of the natives by John Winthrop in 1666, and the title confirmed March 29, 1680.¹² Col. Wm. Smith purchased Little Neck, Oct. 22, 1686, and an extensive tract e. of Connecticut River, extending northward to the center of the co., in May, 1691.¹³ Fort St. George, a strongly fortified British post on South Bay, was surprised and taken by a party of 80 men, under Maj. Tallmadge, Nov. 21, 1780. They crossed Long Island Sound from Conn., landing at Old Mans Harbor, marched to Coram, where they destroyed a large amount of forage, and then to Fort St. George, which they captured without the loss of a man. Over 50 men were made prisoners, and a large amount of property was destroyed.¹⁴ Gen. Woodhull,¹⁵ Pres. of the Second and Third Provincial Congresses, Gen. Wm. Floyd, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, Col. Richard Floyd,¹⁶ and Maj. Wm. H. Smith, were residents, and Maj. Benj. Tallmadge was a native, of this town. In the infancy of the settlement a building was erected at Setauket, which served the double purpose of a townhall and church.¹⁷ There are now 26 churches in town.¹⁸

EAST HAMPTON—was incorp. by patent, under Gov. Nicoll, March 13, 1666,¹⁹ and confirmed by Gov. Dongan, Dec. 9, 1686. It was recognized as a town March 7, 1788. It lies at the e. extremity of Long Island, s. of Gardners Bay and Long Island Sound, and includes Gardners Island, lying n. of the mainland. The e. part consists of a narrow peninsula, to which the name, Montauk, is applied. Upon the n. coast are several large bays, some of them nearly landlocked. The principal of these are Northwest, Three Mile, Acahonac, and Napeague Harbors, and Fort Pond Bay. In the central and w. parts the surface is mostly level or gently undulating; but along the coast

⁴ Yaphank is the Indian name of a small tributary of the Connecticut. The place was originally called "Millville," and afterward "Brookfield."

⁶ Named from an Indian chief.

⁸ Formerly called "St. Georges Manor."

¹⁰ Then called "Cromwell Bay."

¹¹ The family names of these settlers were Woodhull, Hawkins, Whitehaire, Jenner, Perring, Gibb, Satterly, Biggs, Tooker, Rogers, Fancy, Longbotham, Lane, Floyd, Muncy, Seward, Wade, Saylor, Smith, Avery, Dayton, Davis, Frost, Thomas, Baylis, Thomson, Ward, Roe, Budd, Brooks, Williams,

Woolley, Akerly, Combs, Waring, Mapes, Thorp, Eburne, Brewster, Poole, Sharpe, Burnet, Holme, Garlick, Moger, Pierce, and Ware. Many of these names are still common on the island. By a vote of the inhabitants, taken July 13, 1687, the trustees of the town were directed to establish a school, and Francis Williamson was employed as a teacher, at a salary of £30 per annum. The first mill was erected at Stony Brook, in 1690.—Thompson's Hist. Long Island, 2d Ed., I, 408.

¹² A great part of this tract was divided into 36 prizes, and disposed of by lottery for £12,000 in June, 1758.

upon the s. is a belt of low, shifting sand ridges; and the n. part is broken by low, irregular hills, some of which attain an elevation of 100 ft. above the sea. Near the coast in the s. part of the town and upon the peninsula are several fresh water ponds. The principal of these are Great,¹ Fort,² Oyster, Hook, and Georgica Ponds; and their outlets have been closed by sandbars or a beach. Upon the main portion of the peninsula of Montauk the soil is fertile, but its neck is a barren, sandy waste. In the w. part the soil is a light, sandy loam and is kept highly fertile by the use of manures. Stock raising forms the leading occupation; and to that pursuit Gardiners Island³ and Montauk Point are exclusively devoted. A tract of about 9000 acres, embracing the entire n. portion of the town, is devoted wholly to pasturage. It is owned by a company, incorp. as tenants in common, whose affairs are managed by a board of 7 trustees elected annually.⁴ Twelve trustees are chosen annually, to whom are committed the management of the town commons, the meadow beaches, and the waters within the bays, the privileges of which are enjoyed by all citizens. A town poor-house is located on a small farm about 2 mi. w. of East Hampton Village. Lighthouses are located upon Cedar Island, at the entrance of Sag Harbor,⁵ at the n. extremity of Gardiners Island, and upon Montauk Point.⁶ East Hampton, (p. v.), about 1 mi. from the beach, in the s. w. part of the town, has 2 churches,⁷ an academy,⁸ 2 windmills, and about 70 houses. Amagansett, (p. v.), a scattered village about 2 mi. n. of East Hampton, contains 1 church. Pop. 270. Springs, (p. v.), near Acabonac Harbor, and Wainscott, in the s. w. corner of the town, are hamlets. Sag Harbor⁹ (p. v.) is partly in this town. The first settlement in this town, and the first English settlement in the State, was made on Gardiners Island in 1639, by Lyon Gardiner.¹⁰ Settlement in the w. part of the town was commenced in 1648, upon lands purchased of the Montauk Indians, by a company of English families from Lynn, Mass.¹¹ The government of the colony was purely democratic. The people met in "General Court," and enacted laws, appointed civil and ministerial officers, and acted upon appeals from the decisions of their magistrates. Three magistrates,¹² a recorder, a secretary, and a constable were annually elected. Lands were allotted to individuals, and could not be alienated without the approval of the General Court. In Dec. 1653, they adopted the laws of Conn.; and from 1657 to 1667 they were united with that colony.¹³ The inhabitants sided with the colonists in the disputes which led to the Revolution. In June, 1775, an "Association" favoring the measures of the Continental Congress was formed, and its articles were signed by every male inhabitant capable of bearing arms.¹⁴ Rev. Thomas James, the first pastor in the town, settled in 1651.¹⁵ There are now 4 churches in town.¹⁶

HUNTINGTON—was incorp. by patent, under Gov. Nicoll, Nov. 30, 1666.¹⁷ The patent was renewed Aug. 2, 1688, and again Oct. 5, 1694. It was recognized as a town March 7, 1788, at which time Eatons Neck and Crab Meadow were annexed. The w. line was established Feb. 17,

² The Indian name of this pond is "Konk-hong-a-nok." It lies s. of Fort Pond Bay, and nearly divides the isthmus.

³ Called by the Indians "Mon-cho-nock," or "Ma-shong-o-muc," and mentioned in early records as the "Isle of Wight." It contains 3,300 acres.

⁴ This tract originally belonged to the Montauk Indians, and was conveyed by them to the colonists of East Hampton, Feb. 11, 1661, the natives reserving to themselves the right of living upon and using so much of it as they might need. Its ownership was vested in the colonists in person. The lands were represented at first by 40 shares, valued at £40 each, and were intrusted to the management of the trustees of the town. The shares are now divided into "eighths," of which 36 have been purchased by the corporation and extinguished. These eighths are now worth $350 to $400 each. The tract is divided into large inclosures, of which "the field" is reserved for fattening stock. Every share entitles its possessor to the privilege of pasturing for "the season" 48 cattle, 14 of them to be admitted to "the field." A horse is rated as 2 "beasts," (cattle,) and 7 sheep as one. "The season" is fixed by the trustees, and generally lasts from June 1 to Oct. 30. About 1400 cattle and 1100 sheep are annually kept within these inclosures. Five Indian families reside upon the tract, who own 50 shares and are entitled to the keeping of 50 cattle. These privileges are usually hired of them for $200 per annum.

⁶ Montauk Lighthouse, on Turtle Hill, is 85 ft. high, and 160 feet above the level of the sea. It was built in 1796, at a cost of $22,500.

⁸ Clinton Academy was founded in 1784, and incorp. by the regents Nov. 17, 1787. A petition of the trustees of this institution suggested to the legislature the propriety of a general system of supervision, and led to the enactment of the law organizing the Board of Regents of the University. This academy and Erasmus Hall, in Flatbush, were incorp. the same day, and are the oldest legally organized academic institutions in the State.

¹⁰ This island was purchased from Jas. Farrett, agent of the Earl of Stirling, March 10, 1639. Elizabeth Gardiner—born upon the island, Sept. 14, 1641—was the first child of English parents born within the present limits of this State. The pirate, Kidd, visited the island in 1699 and buried a quantity of gold, silver, and jewels, which were afterward recovered by commissioners sent from Boston for that purpose. A piece of cloth of gold presented by Capt. Kidd to Mrs. Gardiner is still preserved.

¹² The first magistrates were John Mulford, Robt. Bond, and Thos. Baker.

¹³ The first school was taught by Chas. Barnes, who received a salary of £30 per annum. He was succeeded in 1663 by Peter Benson.

1787, and Lloyds Neck was set off to Oyster Bay in 1788. This is the w. town of the co. It extends across the island, and has 10 mi. of coast on Long Island Sound and 6 on Great South Bay. It also includes about half of Oak Island Beach, and Cedar and several smaller islands in Great South Bay. The n. shore is deeply indented by Huntington Bay, from which Lloyds Harbor extends to the w., Huntington Harbor to the s., and Northport Bay to the e. Centerport and Northport Harbors branch off upon the s. of the latter bay, and two smaller arms upon the e. v. Great, Little, and Eatons' Necks are peninsulas formed by these bays and harbors. Groups of low hills extend through the center, and the surface 2 to 3 mi. from the Sound is broken; but elsewhere it is comparatively level. The soil in the n. and s. is fertile; but in the interior it is unproductive. The industrial pursuits are various; whaling, fishing, and taking oysters and clams are some of the leading occupations. Shipbuilding and manufactures receive considerable attention. At the annual election 7 trustees are chosen, to whose care the management of the town property is committed.¹ The town poorhouse is located near Huntington Village. A lighthouse was built upon the point of Eatons Neck in 1798.² Huntington, (p. v.), near the head of Huntington Harbor, contains 5 churches, a flourishing union school,³ 2 printing offices, and a limited number of manufacturing establishments.⁴ Pop. 1,328. Cold Spring,⁵ (Cold Spring Harbor p. o.) on the e. side of Cold Spring Harbor, contains 3 churches, 2 shipyards, a woolen factory, and other manufactories. Considerable whaling business is carried on from this port.⁶ Pop. 602. Northport⁷ (p. v.) is on the e. side of Northport Harbor. Shipbuilding is here largely carried on. Pop. 430. Centerport⁸ (p. v.) contains 1 church and 142 inhabitants; and Vernon Valley⁹ (p. v.) 1 church and 100 inhabitants. Babylon, (p. v.), near Great South Bay, contains 2 churches and has a pop. of 470. This is a favorite resort for hunting and fishing parties. Amityville,¹⁰ (p. v.), in the s. w. part, contains 1 church and has a pop. of 304; Deer Park, (p. v.), a station on the Long Island R. R., contains 12 houses; Melville,¹¹ in the w. part, 1 church and 108 inhabitants; and Comack, (Comack p. o.), in the e. part, 2 churches and 121 inhabitants. West Hills, (p. o.), containing 1 church, and Dix Hills, (p. o.), are hamlets on the Smithtown turnpike. Settlement began near the n. coast, in 1653, by a company from Sandwich, Mass.¹² In 1660 the settlement was received under the government of Conn.; and in 1663 deputies were elected to the General Court at Hartford. Upon the English conquest, in 1664, the town came reluctantly under the government of New York. During the Revolution, companies of Tories were stationed here, and many outrages were committed upon those friendly to the independence of the colonies. There are 22 churches in town.¹³

ISLIP¹⁴—was first recognized as a town by the Colonial Government, Nov. 25, 1710, and by the State Legislature March 7, 1788.¹⁵ It lies w. of the center of the co., and extends from the s. coast to the middle of the island; it has a coast of about 18 mi. on Great South Bay, and includes Cap Tree, Oak, and several other islands off the s. coast. Numerous narrow inlets from Great South Bay divide the coast into distinct "necks," of which there are 35 within the limits of the town. The Connecticut River, and Sam-pa-wams or Thompsons Creek, are the principal streams. The surface is level, except in the n. part, where it is hilly. The brush plains occupy all the central portion; and near the coast are extensive salt meadows. Upon a tract extending along the bay, and varying in width from one to three miles, the soil is fertile. This part of the town is thickly settled; but the remainder is almost uninhabited. The keeping of the town poor is let to the lowest bidders. Penataquit,¹⁶ (p. v.), near the coast, contains 1 church and has a pop. of 292; Islip, (p. v.), 2 mi. e. of Penataquit, contains 3 churches and about 70 houses. Midroadville, containing 40 houses, and Sayville, (p. v.), containing 2 churches and 822 inhabitants, are in the s. e. part. Lake-

¹ Named from Gov. Eaton, of New Haven, by whom it was purchased of the Indians in 1646. The names "Eatons Manor" and "Gardiners Neck" have been applied to it.

³ This lighthouse is 56 ft. high and 138 ft. above tide. It was built at a cost of $9,500.

⁴ This school has an endowment of $7,400, bequeathed by Nathaniel Potter.

⁷ Belonging to this port are 5 whaling vessels, with an aggregate of 3,120 tons.

R. Modern Times is a place of about 20 houses, in the central part.² The Patchogue Indians were the original occupants of that part of the town n. of Connetquot River, and the Secatogues, or Secatokets, of that part w. of the river. A large tract of territory, w. of the Connetquot, was purchased by Wm. Nicoll, Nov. 29, 1683, and that part n. of the same stream by Olof, Philip, and Stephen Van Cortlandt, June 1, 1703.³ During the Revolution the inhabitants were in a constant state of alarm by the frequent passing of British troops to and from New York City. There are 10 churches in town.⁴

RIVERHEAD—was formed from Southold, March 13, 1792. It lies upon the n. side of the island, between Brookhaven and Southold, and has 16½ mi. of coast upon Long Island Sound. Peconic River and Great Peconic Bay form the s. boundary, and Wading River⁵ a part of the w. The surface in the s. part is level, but in the n. it is hilly. The shore is lined with high and precipitous bluffs of clay and hardpan. The soil is light and sandy, and in most parts but moderately fertile. The poorhouse is located on a farm of 45 acres. Riverhead, (p. v.), an important station on the L. I. R. R., is situated on Peconic River at the head of boat navigation. It is the county seat, and contains the co. buildings, 3 churches, a seminary,⁶ and several manufactories.⁷ Pop. 813,—723 in Riverhead and 90 in Southampton. From Riverhead n. to the line of Southold, a distance of about 6 mi. upon the "South Road," is a continuous settlement, which has received at different places the names Upper Aquebogue, (p. o.), Old Aquebogue, (Jamesport p. o.), and Franklinville, (West Suffolk p. o.) Old Aquebogue and Franklinville are stations on the L. I. R. R. Jamesport⁸ is situated about one-half mi. s. of Old Aquebogue, on Great Peconic Bay, and contains 1 church; pop. 148. Northville, (Success p. o.), in the n. e. part, contains 1 church and 35 houses; Baiting Hollow, (p. o.), in the n. part, in a scattered settlement, has 2 churches; and Wading River, (p. v.) on stream of same name, 1 church and 25 houses. Settlement began at Riverhead, in 1690, by John Griffing and others. There are 10 churches in town.⁹

SHELTER ISLAND¹⁰—was incorp. by patent, under Gov. Nicoll, May 31, 1666,¹¹ but its government was united with that of Southold until 1730. It was recognized as a town March 7, 1788. It lies between the two peninsulas which form the n. extremity of Long Island, and embraces an area of over 8,000 acres. The island is very irregular; upon all sides jutting headlands extend out into the surrounding waters, and branching bays penetrate into the interior. The principal of these inlets are Coecles, West Neck, and Deerings Harbors. The surface is hilly, and the soil fertile. Grain raising and sheep husbandry form the principal agricultural pursuits. Guano and oil are manufactured in considerable quantities from bony fish caught in the neighboring waters. There is a wind gristmill near the center of the island. Shelter Island is a p. o., centrally located. This island was the ancient residence of the Manhasset Indians. It was purchased for the Earl of Sterling by Jas. Farrett, and was afterward sold to Stephen Goodyear, of New Haven. In 1651 it was purchased by Nathaniel and Constant Sylvester, Thos. Middleton, and Thos. Rowe.¹² The first settlement was made in 1652. The first church edifice was built in 1743.¹³

SMITHTOWN¹⁴—was organized by patent, March 25, 1677, and recognized as a town March 7, 1788. It lies upon the n. side of the island, between Huntington and Brookhaven. Stony Brook and Nissequague Harbors, extending far inland, are separated by the Nissequague Neck. Nissequague River, emptying into the harbor of the same name, divides the town into two nearly equal parts. The surface is considerably broken and hilly. The soil is a light, sandy loam in the s. part, and a clayey loam along the Sound. The Branch, (Smithtown Branch p. o.), on Branch Brook, near the center of the town, contains 2 churches and 35 houses; Smithtown,¹⁵ (p. v.), on Nissequague River, 20 houses; and St. Jamesville, (St. James p. o.), at the head of Stony Brook Harbor, 1 church and 25 houses. Fresh Pond is a p. o., in the n. w. part. Hoppogue,¹⁶ on

² This "village" was laid out and built by Stephen Pearl Andrews and others, who held to the doctrine of "the Sovereignty of the Individual," and some of whom were practical believers in the "Free Love" doctrine.

³ Nicoll's Purchase was confirmed to him by a patent issued by Gov. Dongan Dec. 8, 1684; and the Van Cortlandt Purchase was confirmed to John Mowbray, by whom it had been subsequently bought, by a patent issued in 1708.

A tract of land, including the principal part of this town, was, in July, 1659, conveyed to Lyon Gardiner as a free gift, by Wyandance, Sachem of the Montauks;¹ and in 1662 the grant was confirmed by the Nissequague tribe, by whom the lands were occupied. In 1663 the tract was sold to Richard Smith, and in 1665 the remaining part of the town was purchased of the Indians by him. Fort Slongo, in the n. w. part of the town, was erected by the British during the Revolution. It was captured by a body of Americans, under Col. Tallmadge, Oct. 3, 1781.² There are 6 churches in town.³

SOUTHAMPTON⁴—was incorp. by patent, under Gov. Andros, Nov. 1, 1676,⁵ confirmed by Gov. Dongan, Dec. 6, 1686, and recognized as a town March 7, 1788. It occupies the greater part of the s. branch of Eastern Long Island, and has 30 mi. of seacoast. The entire s. shore is skirted by a beach which is united in a few places with the mainland, separating the inclosed waters into distinct bays, the principal of which are East, Quantuc, Shinnecock, and Mecox Bays; minor bays, branching from these, divide the surrounding shores into numerous irregular "necks." The beach which separates the waters of these bays from the Atlantic is unbroken except by a single inlet into Shinnecock Bay. The outline of the n. coast is extremely tortuous; ragged and often nearly landlocked bays project inland, and irregular points of land jut out into the surrounding waters. A range of low hills extends along the n. border of the town, and the Shinnecock Hills occupy the central part; elsewhere the surface is level. The soil in the e. and s. parts consists of a light, sandy loam, and is moderately fertile; but in other parts it is of an inferior quality. A large tract s. of Peconic River is covered with extensive pine forests. Stock raising and the other branches of agriculture form the principal industrial pursuits. The lands are enriched by the application of immense quantities of bunkers. Large tracts of meadow and pasturage lands in different parts of the town are owned by 3 companies, who, in common, elect annually a board of 12 trustees, to whose management the lands are committed.⁶ Taking clams and oysters, and whaling, form an important part of the business. The town has a small poorhouse, a short distance e. of Bridgehampton. A lighthouse has been recently erected on Ponquogue Beach.⁷ Sag Harbor, (p. v.) in the n. e. part, was incorp. as a fire district in 1803, and as a village March 12, 1819. It contains 7 churches, the Sag Harbor Institute, a newspaper office, a bank, a cotton flannel factory,⁸ 2 clock factories, and several manufactories of oil casks. This port has long been noted for the extent of its whaling business.⁹ It was made a port of entry in 1784, and by itself now constitutes a district of customs. Pop. 2,776,—2,041 in Southampton, and 735 in Easthampton. Southampton, (p. v.) midway between Shinnecock and Mecox Bays, contains 2 churches, an academy,¹⁰ and 65 houses. Bridgehampton,¹¹ (p. v.), in the e. part, contains 2 churches and about 40 houses; Shinnecock, on the e. side of Shinnecock Bay, is an Indian settlement of about 20 houses.¹² Sagg, Scuttle Hole and Watermill are hamlets, in the e. part. Flanders, (p. v.), in the n. part, contains 2 churches and about 20 houses; Speonk, (p. v.), near East Bay, contains 2 churches and about 40 houses. Ketchaboneck and Quogue, (p. o.), near Quantuc Bay, and Good Ground (p. o.) and Canoe Place, near Shinnecock Bay, are hamlets. Riverhead (p. v.) is partly in this town. The first settlement was made at Southampton, in 1640, by a company of immigrants

⁷ This lighthouse is 150 ft. high, and 100 ft. above the level of the sea. It is furnished with an excellent lens apparatus, and its light can be seen 20 nautical miles distant.

⁸ The "Suffolk Mills" were built at an expense of $130,000. About 150 hands are employed, and 10,000 to 12,000 yds. of flannel are made per week.

⁹ The shipping of this port in 1868 consisted of 5 ships, 11 barks, 2 brigs, and 2 schooners, with an aggregate of 5,927 tons, registered; 15 sloops, 5 schooners, and 1 steamer, in all, 1,600 tons, enrolled; and a few small vessels, amounting to about 100 tons, licensed. The total number of vessels belonging to this port at different periods has been as follows: in 1807, 4; in 1832, 20; in 1841, 44; in 1843, 52; in 1845, 61; and in 1847, 63.

¹⁰ This academy was established in 1831, and is unincorporated.

from Lynn, Mass. A grant of the land was obtained from James Farrett, agent of Lord Stirling, in April, and a conveyance from the Indians on the 13th of Dec., 1640. During the first 12 months 47 settlers arrived.¹ In 1644 Southampton was received under the government of Conn., and until 1664² was represented in General Court at Hartford. Upon the Dutch invasion in 1673 the town again sought a union with Conn. It was received, and, together with East Hampton and Southold, was erected into a co. Upon the re-establishment of English power, in 1674, the town came under the government of New York. The first settlement at Sag Harbor was made in 1730, by a few fishermen. On the morning of the 24th of May, 1777, Col. Meigs, with 130 men, surprised the British force stationed at Sag Harbor, destroyed 12 brigs and a sloop, besides a large amount of forage, provisions, and merchandise, and returned across the Sound without the loss of a man.³ A body of American troops was stationed at Sag Harbor in 1813, in consequence of the presence of a British fleet in Gardiners Bay.⁴ The first church was erected at Southampton, in 1641;⁵ and the first church in Bridgehampton was built in 1670.⁶ There are now 17 churches in town.⁷

SOUTHOLD⁸—was incorp. by patent, under Gov. Andros, Oct. 30, 1676,⁹ and recognized as a town March 7, 1788. Riverhead was taken off in 1792. It comprises the principal part of the northern peninsula of Eastern Long Island, and includes Robins Island in Great Peconic Bay, and Plum, Fishers, and several smaller islands in Long Island Sound. Orient¹⁰ is a peninsula upon the n.; and Great and Little Hog Necks are smaller peninsulas in the s. The s. shore is indented by several small, irregular bays; while the outline of the n. coast is unbroken except by 2 or 3 narrow inlets. The surface is elevated and level. The soil is a light, sandy loam, kept highly fertile by the use of manures. Plum Island,¹¹ separated from the mainland by Plum Gut, contains about 800 acres. Fishers Island, about 8 mi. eastward, is 7 mi. long by 1½ wide and contains about 4000 acres.¹² Great and Little Gull Islands are between Plum and Fishers Islands. Agriculture forms the leading industrial pursuit; potatoes, corn, and wheat are the principal crops.¹³ Considerable attention is also given to shipbuilding, whaling, and commerce. A limited amount of manufacturing is carried on.¹⁴ Scattered tracts of lands and beaches, owned by an incorp. company, are intrusted to the management of 3 trustees, elected annually. These lands are represented by 110 shares, valued at $15 each. The town has a poorfarm of 300 acres near Southold Village. Light-houses are located on Hortons Point, Little Gull Island,¹⁵ and "The Dumplings,"—a group of rocks in Fishers Island Sound.¹⁶ Greenport,¹⁷ (p. v.) on Greenport Harbor, was incorp. April 18, 1838. It is a port of considerable whaling and commercial business,¹⁸ and is the n. terminus of the L. I. R. R. It contains 5 churches and 2 printing offices. Pop. 1,665. Southold, (p. v.) near the ² The deputies were John Howell, from 1644 to '51; John Cosmore, from 1651 to '55; Thomas Topping, from 1655 to '58; Alex. Knowles, from 1658 to '59; Thomas Topping, from 1659 to '63; and Edward Howell, from 1663 to '64.

⁶ Rev. Ebenezer White, in 1690; Jos. Brown, in 1756; Aaron Woolworth, in 1787; and Amzi Francis, in 1823, have been the pastors of this church.

⁸ That part of the town n. of Cutchogue was called by the Indians "Yen-ne-cock," and by the English "Northfleet."

⁹ Isaac Arnold, John and Benj. Youngs, Josh. and Barnabas Horton, Sam'l Glover, and Isaac Corry were named trustees in this patent.

¹⁰ Called by the Indians "Po-gua-luck." It was bought of the Indians by Peter Hallock, in 1641; and the first settlement was made on it soon after, during Hallock's absence in England, by John Tuthill, John Youngs, Jr., John King, and Israel, Richard, and Samuel Brown.—Griffin's Journal, 19.

¹¹ Formerly known as the "Isle of Putnec." It was bought of the natives, in 1650, by Sam'l Wyllis.

¹⁷ Formerly "Stirling."

center of the town, is a station on the L. I. R. R. It contains 3 churches, the Southold Academy, a savings bank, and about 80 houses. Hermitage, a small settlement, Cutchogue, (p. v.), containing 3 churches and nearly 100 houses, and Mattituck, (p. v.), containing 2 churches and 40 houses, are stations on the L. I. R. R. New Suffolk, on Great Peconic Bay, contains 1 church and about 20 houses. Franklinville is on the line of Riverhead. West Southold is: p. o. East Marion,¹ (p. v.), near the w. side of Orient Harbor, contains a windmill, a tidemill, and 1 church; pop. 300. Orient,² (p. v.) on the e. side of the same harbor, contains 2 churches and 60 houses. The first settlement was made about 1640, by Rev. John Youngs and others, from New Haven.³ The government of this colony, like that of several of the earlier New England settlements, was vested in the church members. None others were allowed to vote or to hold office; and the Mosaic code was adopted as their law. This exclusiveness was of short duration. All citizens were soon admitted to the right of suffrage; and in 1657 the Mosaic code was superseded by one better adapted to the circumstances of the people. Upon the union of New Haven with Conn., in 1662, Southold was united with the latter colony and was represented in General Court. In 1664 the town passed under the jurisdiction of New York. The first church was erected in 1641, in the village of Southold.⁴ There are now 17 churches in town.⁵

SULLIVAN COUNTY.

THIS county was erected from Ulster, March 27, 1809, and was named in honor of Maj. Gen. John Sullivan, of the Revolution. It contains an area of 1,082 sq. mi., and is centrally distant 85 miles from Albany. The surface is generally very hilly, and along the e. border mountainous. In the s. and w. it consists chiefly of ridges separated by narrow ravines; but in the middle and n. it assumes more the character of a rolling plateau. The highlands of this co. may be considered as the s. slope of the Catskills; and near the n. borders of the co. they divide the waters that flow into Hudson and Delaware Rivers. From this elevated portion numerous ridges extend toward the Delaware, giving the co. a general southerly inclination. The Delaware cuts these ridges diagonally, its valley forming the only division between the Catskills and the mountains of Eastern Penn. The highest points in the co. are the hills in the town of Rockland, which are estimated to be 2100 to 2400 feet above tide. Walnut Hill, in Liberty, has an elevation of 1980 feet. The lowest summit of the Shawangunk¹ Mt., between Bloomingburgh and Wurtsboro, is 1271 feet above tide, and the highest summit is about 500 feet higher. This range of mountains at a distance presents a striking uniformity of outline, which is due to the evenness of stratification of the rock composing it. The lowest point in the co. is upon the Delaware, at the mouth of the Mongaup, which has an elevation of 550 feet above tide. The co. line on the Rondout is elevated 773 feet.

With the exception of a small district on its e. border, through which flow the upper waters of Shawangunk Kil and Lackawack Creek, this co. is drained by the Delaware and its branches, the largest of which are Neversink² and Mongaup³ Rivers, Beaver Kil and Bashers Kil, and Callicoon (Caw-li-coon) and Ten Mile Creeks. The Neversink flows entirely across the co., having for its tributaries Bashers Kil, Wyncoop Brook, Bush Kil, Cherry-meadow Brook, and several minor streams. Most of these streams are rapid, and afford at numerous points a great amount of water-power. In the valleys and forests of the co. are about 100 small lakes, which form peculiar and often picturesque and highly beautiful features in its scenery. Most of these ponds and streams abound in fish, of which trout is the most common. Pickerel have been introduced into several of them.

The geological formation of the co. is exceedingly simple. The whole surface is underlaid by the red sandstone of the Catskill Group and the Shawangunk Conglomerate. These rocks extend southward into Penn., and form the floor of the coal measures. Of these rocks the latter possesses a commercial value for millstones,⁴ building stones, and the manufacture of glass. The soil is mostly a reddish loam mixed with gravel, and is generally stony; in the s.e. portion is found some clay. Grass is the staple production, and the hilly character of most of the co. seems to adapt it to grazing rather than to tillage. The facility with which the products of the dairy can now reach the great markets, by means of the N. Y. & E. R. R., has within a few years given an impetus to the prosperity of the co., while the erection of tanneries, which the same thoroughfare has encouraged, has created a home market of great advantage to the farmer. In 1855 there were in the co. about 40 tanneries, producing over $2,000,000 worth of leather annually and employing about 750 laborers. The lumbering interests also employ large amounts of capital and labor. Winter wheat, formerly considered a sure and abundant crop, is found to yield smaller returns and with less certainty as the country becomes older; and other crops, less valuable but more certain, have been substituted to a great extent. The surplus wheat of Sullivan co. was formerly transported by land to the Hudson, where it found a profitable market; but, with the increase of manufactures, there is now less raised than is consumed in the co. Grass seed of a fine quality is raised in considerable quantities. The fruits are limited to apples, pears, plums, cherries, and a few peaches. The timber along the Delaware Valley is mostly hemlock, pine, oak, and chestnut; and on the highlands it is hemlock, beech, maple, birch, ash, and basswood. The climate is cool and bracing, and the co. is remarkably healthy.

⁴ Soapstone millstones, formerly in high repute, were made from the Shawangunk grit.

After firing most of the houses and barns of the settlement, the marauders retired, leaving behind them a melancholy scene of havoc and desolation at the verge of an inclement winter. The distress thus occasioned was very great. Major Phillips arrived soon after the incursion with a company of militia; but the enemy had fled beyond reach.

In 1777 or '78, Capt. Graham, with a party of 18 men, went to Chestnut Brook in pursuit of some Indians who had been committing depredations upon the settlements at Pine Bush. Having stopped to drink, Capt. Graham saw an Indian in the path, and the party fired a volley without effect. Upon this the Indians on the opposite banks returned the fire with fatal effect, and but 3 of the party escaped to tell the dismal tale. To deprive the enemy of sustenance and the means for further annoyance, the Legislature, in 1779,¹ enacted a law directing the Governor to cause the destruction of such grain and crops in the w. frontiers of Orange and Ulster cos. as could not be removed to a place of safety. In 1783² the precinct of "Mamacotting" and the township of Rochester (the district of the regiment of Col. A. Hawke Hay, and that part of the Goahan regiment on the w. side of the Minisink Mts.) were exempted from a levy then made for the defense of the n. and w. frontiers.³

Several traces of Indian occupation were found in the first settlement of the co. About 4 mi. from the Delaware, on the Flat, was found a brass or copper tomahawk, with a steel edge, and a handle perforated for smoking. Stone axes, flint arrows, &c. were frequently found. In 1793, an Indian living in Rockland, at a place called "Pocotocot," (meaning a river almost spent,) removed to Niagara. He is supposed to have been the last of his race that inhabited the co. Indian trails were found along the Delaware, the Beaver Kil, and in other sections.

The part of this co. s. of the s. bounds of Callicoon and Bethel is comprised in the Neversink Patent, conveyed to Matthew Ling and others Aug. 28, 1704; and the remainder of the co. in the great tract granted to Johannes Hardenbergh and others April 20, 1708, and known as the "Hardenbergh Patent."⁴ The Newburgh and Cohecton Turnpike (incorp. March 20, 1801) was opened across the co. in 1808, and gave the first impulse to its prosperity by making it accessible to settlers. This section continued to receive emigrants from New England and the older portions of the State until its growth was checked by the completion of the Erie Canal to the Genesee country and the great lakes, by which emigration was diverted to the new and fertile lands of the West. Real estate in consequence declined materially in value, and many of the early settlers abandoned their locations and joined the westward current. In 1819 or '20 the Orange Branch Turnpike was made, from Montgomery, (Orange co.,) crossing the Shawangunk Mt. at Roses Gap, and extending across the barrens through Wakemans Settlement to the Neversink Falls, and thence to Liberty. The charter of this road was long since given up, but the route is maintained as a district road.

BETHEL—was formed from Lumberland, March 27, 1809. Cohecton was taken off in 1828. It lies upon the high ridges which form the watershed between Delaware and Mongaup Rivers, a little s. w. of the center of the co. Its surface is broken and hilly, and many of the declivities are steep and rocky. It is watered by a large number of small streams, mostly tributary to Mongaup River; and it has many small lakes, which form a beautiful and romantic feature of the landscape. White Lake, near the center,—named from its white sandy shores and bottom,—is noted for the beauty of its scenery.⁵ The other principal lakes are Birch Ridge Pond in the n. w., Horse Shoe and Pleasant Ponds in the n., Mallory Pond in the w., Indian Field Pond in the s., Big and Wells Ponds on the s. line, and Chestnut Ridge Pond and Black Lake and Lake Superior near the center. The soil is a sandy and gravelly loam, intermixed in places with clay. The settlements are comparatively new, and the people are chiefly engaged in the raising of neat cattle, dairying, lumbering, and tanning.⁶ Mongaup Valley (p. v.) contains 35 houses, and Bethel 15. Bushville and White Lake are p. offices. John Fuller was the first settler in the "Fuller Settlement," in 1806-07.⁷ The first preacher (Presb.) was the Rev. Mr. Green.⁸

sides of leather, valued at $187,000. It consumed about 5000 cords of hemlock bark, and employed 70 men, at a cost of $12,000. There are about 102,000 sides of leather manufactured annually at different tanneries in this town.

⁷ G. and O. Hurd were the first settlers at the Hurd settlement; Adam and Eve Pantler near Bethel; and Potter and Matteson near White Lake. The first school at Mongaup was taught by G. P. Price, and at Bethel by Dr. Copeland. Gillespie & Hook kept the first store at White Lake, and J. K. Beeman built the first saw and grist mill, on White Lake outlet. The first birth was that of Catharine Fuller, in 1807, and the first death that of a child of Stephen Northrup.

⁸ The census reports 4 churches; 2 M. B., Presb., and Ref. Presb.

CALICOON¹—was formed from Liberty, March 30, 1842. Fremont was taken off in 1851. It lies in the w. part of the co., about the sources of the n. branch of Callicoon Creek. It is watered by numerous streams flowing into the Delaware, the valleys being mostly narrow ravines, and the hills rising in steep declivities 200 to 600 feet above them. In the n.e. are Shandler and Sand Ponds, the latter affording a pure white sand, formerly used in making glass. The soil is mostly a sandy loam, and the hillsides and summits are generally capable of a good degree of cultivation. The settlement is recent, and the people are about equally engaged in lumbering, farming, and tanning.² Jeffersonville, (p.v.) on the line of Cochection, has a population of 433, of whom 305 are in this town. Youngsville, (p.v.) North Branch, (p.v.) and Callicoon Center (Callicoon p.o.) have each about 30 houses. The first settlers were Wm. Wood and his sons, Gerrett, Edward, and David, who arrived in town May 19, 1814, and lived 15 years in the wilderness.³ Rev. Mr. McClary, pastor of the Asso. Ref. church of Bethel, was the first preacher.⁴

COCHECTION⁵—was formed from Bethel, March 25, 1828. It is situated upon the bank of the Delaware, in the w. part of the co. Ridges of hills, with narrow valleys between, cover the entire surface of the town. The principal streams are the Callicoon and its branches, and several small tributaries of the Delaware. The mouth of the Callicoon is 777 feet above tide. Pike Pond in the n., Perry Pond in the s., and Mitchells Pond and Lake Huntington in the center, are the principal sheets of water. A large part of the surface is still covered with forests. The soil is mostly a gravelly loam, and best adapted to pasturage. Lumbering and tanning form the leading objects of industry. Cochection (p.v.) contains 269 inhabitants, Pike Pond (p.v.) 188, Callicoon Depot (p.v.) 207, and Stevensburgh (Cochection p.o.) 209. Beech Wood and Fosterdale are p. offices. Settlements were begun on the Delaware before the Revolution, but were broken up. The pioneer settler was N. Mitchell, who located near Cochection Village.⁶ The first church (Presb.) was formed in 1839, and the Rev. Mr. Cummings was the first pastor.⁷

FALLSBURGH—was formed from Thompson and Neversink, March 9, 1826. It derives its name from the falls in Neversink River at Fallsburgh Village. Its surface is hilly and rolling. It is drained by the Neversink and its branches. Sheldrake Pond, (named from the wild ducks that formerly frequented its waters,) Smith, Hill, and Browns Ponds in the w., and East Pond, in the n., are the principal lakes. The soil is a gravelly loam. The people are chiefly engaged in lumbering, dairying, and tanning.⁸ Woodbourne (p.v.) contains 30 houses, Neversink Falls (Fallsburgh p.o.) 25, Hasbrouck (p.v.) 25, Loch Sheldrake (p.v.) 15, and Sandburgh (p.v.) 15. It is said that settlement was commenced in this town by Germans previous to the Revolution,⁹ but the settlers were driven off during that war. Soon after the peace 3 brothers by the name of Baker located in town and commenced the first permanent settlement.¹⁰ The first church (Ref. Prot. D.) was built at Hasbrouck.¹¹

FORESTBURGH—was formed from Thompson and Mamakating, May 2, 1837. It lies principally upon the high ridges between Neversink and Mongaup Rivers, and has a broken surface and an average elevation of 1400 feet above tide. In this town are several small lakes, the principal of which are Ruddicks Pond in the n.w., Beaver Pond in the s., and Panther Pond in the center. The town still retains the character implied by its name. Mongaup Falls, on Mongaup River, 3 mi. above Forestburgh Village, are worthy of note. The river here falls into a chasm 70 feet deep, and the banks below the falls are more than 100 feet high. Lumbering, tan-

² There are 6 large tanneries in town, which manufacture about 125,000 sides of leather annually.

⁵ Cocheek-tun. Originally called "Osh-nun-tunk," or low grounds.

⁶ Among the other early settlers were David Young, at Big Island; John Rose, at Callicoon Creek; Nicholas Conklin and — Tyler, at Cochection. Job Jones taught the first school near Cochection; Maj. Ebenezer Taylor kept the first tavern and store, at Cochection; and Mitchell Conklin built the first sawmill, on Mitchells Pond Brook. On Big Island, 2 mi. above Cochection, was an extensive Indian burial place, of which traces are occasionally plowed up at the present day. There are about 800 Germans in this town.

⁷ The census reports 3 churches; M. E., Presb., and Ref. Prot. D.

⁸ At Fallsburgh is an extensive tannery, that manufactures 40,000 sides of leather annually; and another of the same size is located at Woodbourne.

⁹ Fruit trees planted by these settlers are said to be still standing.

¹⁰ Thomas Rawson came in 1787 or '88; Thomas Grant located in 1789; Samuel Thaddeus, Obadiah Brown, and James Hill settled a little n. of Fallsburgh, and James Nicoll, Peter Perdon, and Mr. Brush on the site of the village. The first sawmill was built in 1808, and the first grist mill in 1806, by Philip Ruggles. Matthew Seeley kept the first inn, at Hasbrouck, and Robt. Reading the first store, at Fallsburgh. In 1797, the nearest mill was at Napanock, in Ulster co.; and for many years the nearest market was Newburgh. In 1786 or '87 an extraordinary and destructive flood occurred upon this valley.

¹¹ This church was burned in 1837, and was rebuilt at Woodbourne. The census reports 3 churches in town; 2 M. E., and 1 Ref. Prot. D.

ning,¹ and dairying constitute the employments of the people. Forestburgh (p. o.) contains 10 houses, Oaklandville 15, and Hartwood 10. Settlement commenced before the Revolution, and recommenced in 1795 on Mongaup River. Zephaniah and Luther Drake were pioneers in the s. w. part of the town, and Elisha Smith near Oakland.² Rev. Isaac Thomas (Meth.) was the first preacher.³

FREMONT—was formed from Callicoon, Nov. 1, 1851, and named in honor of John C. Fremont. It lies in the extreme w. part of the co., upon the bank of the Delaware. Its surface is broken and hilly, the summits rising 600 to 1000 feet above the valley and 1500 to 1800 feet above tide. Its waters are Basket and Hankins Creeks, a great number of smaller streams, and numerous small lakes, the principal of which are Long Pond, Round and Basket Ponds in the n., Lox Pond in the n., and Trout Pond near the center. A large share of the surface is still a wilderness and is too rough for tillage. Tanning and lumbering form the principal employments of the people. Fremont Center (p. v.) contains 141 inhabitants, and Obernburgh (Fremont p. o.) 20 houses. Long Eddy (p. o.) is the Basket Station on the N. Y. & E. R. R. Hankins is a station on the same r. r. The first settlers were Joseph Green, at Long Eddy, John Hankins, at Hankins Depot, Benj. Misner, at Long Pond, and Zach. Ferdon, at Round Pond.⁴

HIGHLAND—was formed from Lumberland, Dec. 17, 1853. It is an interior town, lying in the s. part of the co. It is named from the character of its surface, which consists of high ridges between Delaware and Mongaup Rivers, 600 to 1,000 feet above the canal at Barryville and 1,200 to 1,600 feet above tide. There are a great number of small lakes in town, the principal of which are Big Pond and Wells Pond on the n. line, Mud and Hagan Ponds in the n., York Pond in the s. w., Washington Pond, used as a canal feeder, and Blind, Little, and Montgomery Ponds near the center. The people are chiefly engaged in lumbering and the rudiments of farming. Barryville, (p. v.), a canal village, contains 25 houses, and Lumberland (p. v.) 15. The first settler was John Barnes, who located at Narrow Falls.⁵ Rev. Isaac Sargent (Cong.) was the first preacher, about 1797.⁶ The battle of Neversink, in the Revolution, took place within the limits of this town.⁷

LIBERTY—was formed from Lumberland, March 13, 1807, and Callicoon and a part of Thompson were taken off in 1842. It lies n. of the center of the co., upon the watershed between the Mongaup and Beaver Kil. Its surface is rough and broken. Walnut Hill, s. of Liberty, is 1,980, and Libertyville 1,467, feet above tide. The n. and w. parts of the town are still covered with forests. The principal sheets of water are Lillie Pond in the n., and Broadhead Pond near the center. The soil is good, but stony; and the people are chiefly engaged in lumbering, dairying, and tanning.⁸ Liberty (p. v.) contains 364 inhabitants, Parksville (p. v.) 40 houses, and Liberty Falls (p. v.) 25. Robertsonville and Stevensville are p. offices. The Liberty Normal Institute, at Liberty, is a flourishing academic institution.⁹ Stephen Russell (from Conn.) settled near Liberty, in 1793 or '94.¹⁰ Rev. Wm. Randall (Bap.) was the first preacher.¹¹

LUMBERLAND—was formed from Mamakating, March 16, 1798, embracing all the co. w. of Mongaup River and s. of the present n. lines of Liberty and Callicoon. From it were erected Liberty in 1807, Bethel in 1809, and Highland and Tusten in 1853. Its surface is rugged and

³ There are no church buildings in town.

⁵ Among the other first settlers were John Carpenter, Wm. Seely, N. Patterson, and Wm. Randall, at Beaver Brook; and Benj. Hayne at Handsome Eddy. John Carpenter employed Nathl. Wheeler to teach the first school, before the public schools were organized. G. Ferguson kept the first inn, in 1880, and Phineas Terry the first store, in 1828. N. Patterson built the first sawmill, on Beaver Brook.

⁶ The census reports 3 churches; Cong., M. E., Union.

⁷ This battle took place on the n. side of Beaver Brook, on lot 17 of the 1th div. of the Neversink Patent. The scene of the action is the top of a hill 3 miles from Barryville and half a mile n. w. from Dry Brook. The battle took place between a party of Tories and Indians, under Brant,—who were retreating, after having destroyed the settlement of Neversink,—and a party of American militia, who pursued them. The battle was long and bloody, and resulted in the retreat of the Americans with the loss of 44 killed. In 1822 the bones of the slain were collected and interred beneath a monument at Coabon. An address was delivered on the occasion by Gen. Hathorn, who had taken a leading part in the engagement.

⁹ Incorp. by law, April 12, 1848; the Hon. John D. Watkins, the founder, being sole incorporator.

¹¹ The census reports 4 churches; 1 Bap., 2 M. E., and 1 Fresh.

broken, and much of it is yet a wilderness. The name of the town still suggests the leading pursuit of the people. A large number of small lakes, with their outlets, form the principal waters. The principal of these lakes are Lebanon Pond in the n., Round, Sand, and Hogais Ponds in the v., and Long Pond in the center. Metanques Pond, in the n., lies about 2 mi. w. of the Mongaup, and 300 feet above it. On its outlet is a beautiful cascade. Mongaup and Pond Eddy are p. offices. There is but one church, (M. E.) The Delaware & Hudson Canal extends through the town along the course of the river. It is supposed that settlement was commenced before the Revolution; but the names of the first settlers are not preserved.¹ In the survey of the Minisink Patent by Charles Webb in 1762, mention is made of "Reeve's Sawmill."²

MAMAKATING,³ said to have been named in honor of an Indian chief, was erected into a precinct by the General Assembly, Dec. 17, 1743, and embraced all the present territory of Sullivan co. and a portion of Orange. It continued as a precinct until organized as a town, March 7, 1788. It was reduced to its present limits by the erection of Deerpark (Orange co.) and Lumberland in 1798, Thompson in 1803, and a part of Forestburgh in 1837. It lies upon the highlands between Neversink and Shawangunk Creeks. Two parallel ridges, separated by the valley of Bashers Kil, extend through the town in a n. e. and s. w. direction. The eastern of these ridges is known as Shawangunk Mt. The declivities of this mountain are gentle upon the n., but abrupt and broken on the w. It attains an elevation of 1100 feet above the summit level of the canal, and about 1700 feet above tide. In the n. w. part of the town is a mountain of nearly equal elevation, known as Panther Hill. The principal streams are Shawangunk, Bashers, and Pine Kils, the last of which is the outlet of a small lake in the w. part of the town, known as Yankee Pond. The summit level of the Delaware & Hudson Canal, 17 mi. long and 525 feet above tide, is constructed through the valley of Bashers Kil. Masten Pond, in the w. part, is used as a reservoir. About 2 mi. n. of Wurtzboro a vein of lead was discovered several years since, and was worked to a considerable extent. After an abandonment of several years, preparations are again being made to work it. The soil is a sand and gravel loam, in some places intermixed with clay, and best adapted to pasturage. The census of 1855 shows that this town is second only to Thompson in the amount of dairy products. Bloomingsburgh⁴ (p. v.) contains 365 inhabitants, and Wurtzboro⁵ (p. v.) 491, Summitville (Mamakating p. o.) 20 houses, and Phillipsport (p. o.) 10; the three last named lie upon the canal. Burlingham (p. v.) contains 130 inhabitants. West Brookville (p. o.) is a hamlet, and Homowack is a p. o. The early settlement of this town has already been noticed,⁶ but most of the details have been lost. On the approach of the Revolution the Indians became hostile, and several blockhouses were erected on the frontiers of Ulster co., one of which was at Wurtzboro. On account of the distressed condition of the people by reason of Indian hostilities, they were favored by the supervisors in the apportionment of taxes. Many persons in those days accounted wealthy were reduced to poverty, and but little that could be destroyed remained on the return of peace. Gonzales, the pioneer settler, is said to have built the first sawmill, at Wurtzboro. In 1792 this town contained 182 taxable persons, of whom 34 were in the present towns of Lumberland, Tusten, and Highland. In 1794, Capt. David Dorrance removed from Windham, Conn., and purchased 1000 acres immediately s. of the site of Wurtzboro.⁷ John Dorrance, with Elijah Perry, also from Conn., erected the first bark mill in Sullivan co. Rev. Mr. Freleigh was the first pastor of the Ref. Prot. D. Church, built in 1793.⁸

NEVERSINK⁹—was formed from Rochester, (Ulster co.,) March 16, 1798. Rockland and a part of Shandaken were taken off in 1809, and a part of Fallsburgh in 1826. The surface

³ Written Mame-Kating, Mame-Ootink, &c. in early records.

⁵ Named from Maurice Wurtz, grantee of a canal privilege in Penn., afterward merged in Del. and Hudson Canal Co.

⁷ A road was constructed at an early day, by Ananias Becket, from Mamakating westward, passing about three-fourths of a mi. s. of Lords Pond, and continuing to Nathan Kinne's Place, from which place Capt. Dorrance made a road to Cochecon for $5 per mi. This road opened a communication from the Hollow to the Delaware River, a distance of about 33 mi. A portion of it is still in use, but the greater part was taken up by the Newburgh & Cochecon Turnpike. The village of Wurtzboro is built upon a tract of 1000 acres bought by Johannes Masten, who cleared the land and erected a sawmill. Westbrookville (formerly "Rushhurstville") was settled about the same time, and the first house was built of stone and used as a fort to shelter the settlers. Mr. Felton was a pioneer near Burlingham, and J. Newkirk at Bloomingsburgh. The early town records have been lost. The first school was kept at Bloomingsburgh in 1784, by Mr. Campbell. Wm. Harlow kept the first inn, 2 mi. n. of Bloomingsburgh; Wm. Wighton opened the first store, 1 mi. s. of the same place; and H. Newkirk built the first gristmill, on the Shawangunk, within this town.

⁹ This name, first applied to the river, is said by some to be derived from the Indian "Ne-we-sink," or Mad River, and by is very hilly and to a considerable degree covered with forests. It is watered by the Neversink and its branches, and by the Lackawack, or w. branch of the Rondout, which flows to the Hudson. Denman Hill, 3300 feet, and Thunder Hill, 2500, above tide, are the principal elevations: the latter received its name from the fact that one of the early settlers was frightened away from the place by loud thunder. The soil is generally a gravelly loam, and best adapted to pasturage. The people are chiefly engaged in lumbering, tanning,¹ and dairying. Grahamsville² (p. v.) contains 40 houses, Neversink Flats (Neversink p. o.) 35, and Claryville (p. v.) 30. The first settlement was commenced on the Lackawack, 2 mi. below Grahamsville, by the Hornbecks, Clinees, Clearwaters, and Lowes, who obtained an Indian title in 1743, and were driven off during the Revolution. Mr. Larrabee, on Thunder Hill, and Benj. Gillett, John Hall, and Wm. Parks, on the 1000 acre lot, were the pioneer settlers after the war.³ The first church (Meth.) was located at Grahamsville; and the first preacher was Rev. Samuel M. Knapp.⁴

ROCKLAND—was formed from Neversink, March 29, 1809. It lies upon the headwaters of the Pepacton, or n. branch of the Delaware, in the extreme n. part of the co. It is a rough, wild region, very hilly and mostly covered with forests. Its principal streams are Beaver Kil and Williwemack Creek. A chain of small lakes extends through the town, the principal of which are Upper, Mongaup, and Hodge Ponds in the n., Big and North Ponds in the s. e., Shaw Pond in the s., Burnt Hill and Jenkins Ponds in the w., and Sand, Mud, and Knapp Ponds in the center. Lumbering, farming, and tanning⁵ are the principal pursuits of the people. Westfield Flats (Rockland p. o.) contains 28 houses, and Morsston (p. v.) about 12. Beaver Kill, Purvis, and Shin Creek are p. offices. Settlement was begun in 1789, by two families named Stewart and West, from Middletown, Conn.; they located near the middle of the Big Beaver Kil Flat.⁶ Rev. Mr. Conkey (Meth.) was the first preacher.⁷

THOMPSON—was formed from Mamakating, March 9, 1803, and named in honor of Wm. A. Thompson, first judge of the co. A part of Fallsburgh was taken off in 1826, and a part of Forestburgh in 1837. It lies principally upon the highlands between Neversink and Mongaup Rivers, and is less hilly than most of the towns of the co. The hills rise 100 to 300 feet above Monticello. Neversink and Mongaup Rivers, with several small lakes and streams, constitute the waters of the town. Kiamesha, or "Clearwater," better known as Pleasant Pond, is a beautiful little lake near Monticello. The other principal ponds are Dutch in the n. e., Lords and Mud in the e., Wolf in the s. e., and Sackets (named from Ananias Sacket, an early settler near it) in the s. w. The quiet scenery of these lakes is becoming appreciated by the lovers of nature and those seeking a retreat from the heat and dust of cities in summer. The soil is a reddish loam. The people are principally engaged in stock raising, lumbering, and tanning.⁸ Monticello,⁹ (p. v.) the principal village, was incorp. April 20, 1830. Pop. 629. It is beautifully situated upon a ridge of highlands 1387 feet above tide, and is surrounded by hills. It is finely laid out, the main street being 1 mi. long and 8 rods wide, with flagged walks and ornamented with shade trees. It contains a courthouse, jail, co. clerk's and surrogate offices, and a banking house, all of stone; 3 churches, the Monticello Academy, 3 hotels, 10 stores, 3 printing offices, and an iron foundery. Thompsonville (p. v.) and Bridgeville (p. v.) each contain about a dozen houses. Gales and Glen Wild are p. offices. The first settlers were Wm. A. Thompson, John Knapp, and Timothy Childs, at Thompsonville.¹⁰ Rev. John Boyd (Presb.) was the first preacher.¹¹

² Named in honor of Lieut. Graham, who was killed in a skirmish with the Indians near the present site of the village.

⁵ One of the most extensive tanneries in the State is in the w. part of the town. About 170,000 sides of leather are manufactured each year in town.

Sylvanus Bascom taught the first school, at Westfield Flats; Jehiel Stewart kept the first inn, Mr. Loveland the first store; and Luther Stewart built the first mill, at Westfield Flats. The settlers are said to have obtained their first seed corn from the Indians on the Susquehanna Flats, and this stock has been continued till the present time. The lumber trade began in 1798.

⁷ The census reports 3 churches; M. E., Presb., and Union.

⁸ About 35,000 sides of leather are manufactured annually.

¹¹ The census reports 4 churches; M. E., Presb., Prot. E., and Union.

Benjamin Tusten, who was killed in the battle of Minisink, in 1779.¹ This town lies upon the w. bank of Delaware River. The w. and s. parts are very hilly, and the e. portions belong to the plateau of rolling lands which comprises the greater part of Tusten, Highland, and Lumberland. The average height of this region is about 750 feet above the Delaware, or 1400 feet above tide. The principal streams are Ten Mile River and its branches: Half Moon and Mill Ponds in the e., and Mill, Davis, and Canfield Ponds in the center, are the principal sheets of water. The soil is a gravelly loam, and best adapted to pasturage. The people are generally engaged in farming and lumbering. Narrowsburgh, (p. v.), containing about 35 houses, is the only village. It derives its name from the fact that the Delaware is here compressed by two points of rock into a deep, narrow channel. Over this is a wooden bridge, with a single span of 184 feet.² The place is known to lumbermen by the name of "Big Eddy." Below the narrows the river expands into a wide basin, which in time of a freshet exhibits a stirring scene. Delaware Bridge and Beaver Brook are p. offices. John Moore kept the first inn and store, and R. Moore built the first mill. The Baptist is the only church in town.

² The "Narrowsburgh Bridge Co." was incorp. April 5, 1810, with a capital of $5,000. The bridge was to be 25 feet wide, well covered with plank, and secured by railings.

TIOGA COUNTY.

THIS county was formed from Montgomery, Feb. 16, 1791. A part of Chenango was taken off in 1798; Broome in 1806; a part of Tompkins in 1822; and Chemung in 1836. It lies near the center of the s. border of the State, centrally distant 135 mi. from Albany, and contains 542 sq. mi. Its surface is broken by a series of ridges extending northerly through the co. from the Penn. line and forming a northerly continuation of the Allegany Mts. The summits of these ridges have a nearly uniform elevation of 1,200 to 1,400 ft. above tide. The valley of the Susquehanna cuts them diagonally and breaks the continuity of the general system of highlands. Numerous lateral valleys extend in a general n. and s. direction from the river, separating the ridges and giving a great variety to the surface. These valleys vary in width from a few rods to a mile and sometimes more, and are generally bordered by steep declivities which rise 250 to 400 ft. above them. The summits of the hills are generally broad and rolling, and in some places are broken and rocky.

The rocks of this co. belong to the Chemung and Catskill groups. The former occupies all the surface n. of the river and forms the underlying rock of the hills s., and the latter crowns all the summits s. of the river. The sandstone of the Chemung group is quarried for flagging; and some of the red sandstone is sufficiently compact to make good building stone. Limestone, from which lime is manufactured, is found along the Penn. border. There are no other minerals of importance. The river valleys, and many of the hills adjoining, are covered deep with drift, consisting of sand, clay, and gravel. This deposit near Factoryville is 80 ft. thick, and a wide belt of it seems to extend northerly in an almost unbroken line from the latter place to Cayuga Lake. The principal streams are Susquehanna River, and Owego, Catatunk, Cayuta, Pipe, and Apalachin Creeks and their branches. These creeks have generally rapid currents, though few waterfalls; and they furnish all necessary water-power for local purposes. Their valleys are usually narrow and rocky in their upper courses, but toward the Susquehanna they expand into broad and beautiful level intervals. The valleys of the Susquehanna and several of its tributaries are celebrated for their beauty.

The soil along the valleys is a rich, deep, gravelly loam, with an occasional intermixture of clay and sand. The intervals along the Susquehanna are especially noted for their fertility. The uplands are gravelly and sandy and moderately fertile. Upon the summits the soil is hard and unproductive, and in many places the rocks are entirely bare. A considerable portion of the uplands is still covered with forests.

The prominent interest of the co. is agricultural, and its various branches are successfully pursued. Winter and spring grains, corn, and the root crops, are mostly cultivated on the lowlands or river bottoms, and the uplands are devoted to stock and wool growing and dairying. Considerable commercial interest has grown up in connection with the rail roads, and manufactures have also been established to a limited extent.¹

The county seat is located at Owego, upon the Susquehanna.² The courthouse, a wooden structure, was erected about 40 years since, at a cost of $8,000. It is in a good state of preservation. The jail, jailor's house, and barn, all of brick, were built in 1851, at a cost of about $6,000. The jail contains 8 double cells. The clerk's office is a fireproof brick building, erected in 1858, at a cost of $2,200. The courthouse, clerk's office, jail, jailor's house, and barn occupy a square in the center of the village.

¹ A large lumber and tanning business was formerly carried on; but it has declined, from the scarcity of material.

² By the organic act of 1791, Tioga was formed a half-shire county. It provided that the courts should be held alternately at "Chenango," in the town of Union, and at "Newtown Point," in the town of Chemung, the former now Binghamton, Broome co., and the latter Elmira, Chemung co. The half-shire was abolished upon the organization of Broome co. in 1806; Feb. 17, 1810, Nathaniel Locke, Anson Cary, and Samuel Campbell were appointed commissioners to locate the courthouse site, and Joshua Ferris, Isaac Swartwout, and Samuel Westbrook to superintend the erection of the building; and in 1811-12 the county seat was removed from Elmira to Spencer Village. June

8, 1812, the co. was divided into 2 Jury Districts, and the courts were held at Elmira and Spencer. The East Jury District embraced the towns of Tioga, Spencer, Danby, Caroline, Candor, Berkshire, and Owego; and the West, the towns of Cayuta, Catharine, Chemung, and Elmira. The courthouse at Spencer was burned in 1831, and by an act of 1822 the half-shire of the county was re-established, and Owego and Elmira became the half-shire towns. Upon the organization of Chemung co. in 1836, Elmira became its county seat, and Owego the county seat of Tioga. The first county officers were Abram Miller, First Judge; Wm. Stuart, District Attorney; Thomas Nicholson, County Clerk; James McMaster, Sheriff; and John Merceus, Surrogate.

The county poorhouse, a stone building, is located near Owego, upon a farm of 62 acres, which yields an annual income of $600. The average number of inmates is 62, and the whole number of rooms for their accommodation is 15. No school is connected with the establishment, and no means are provided for religious instruction.

The principal works of internal improvement are the N. Y. & E. R. R., extending along the river valley through Owego, Tioga, and Barton; and the Cayuga & Susquehanna R. R., extending from Owego northward through Tioga and Candor to Ithaca.¹ These roads furnish ample facilities for transportation, and bring the products of the county into close proximity to the Eastern market.

Three weekly newspapers are now published in the co.²

The first settlement in this county was made upon the Susquehanna intervalles, soon after the Revolution, by emigrants from the Wyoming Valley in Penn. These settlers originally came from Conn. and Mass., and left Wyoming in consequence of troubles growing out of the Indian hostilities and of controversies in regard to title. They located here before the Indian title to the lands was extinguished. The greater part of the present territory was comprised in the Botsa Ten Towns. The title of this tract, comprising 230,400 acres between Chenango River and Owego Creek, was vested in the State of Mass. in 1786, and in 1787 it was sold to a company of 60 persons, mostly residents of that State. The greater part of the proprietors immediately took possession of these lands; and thus it happened that the county was filled up with a New England population while the fertile region of Western New York was yet an unbroken wilderness.

BARTON—was formed from Tioga, March 23, 1824. It lies w. of the Susquehanna, in the s. w. corner of the co. Its surface is generally hilly. A small portion of level land lies along the s. border. The highlands on the w. rise abruptly from the valley of Cayuta Creek, and are divided into two ridges by the valley of Ellis Creek. Their summits are broad and rolling and generally covered with forests. The highest points are 400 to 600 ft. above the river. The soil is a rich alluvium in the valleys and a sandy or gravelly loam upon the hills. A sulphur spring is found on Ellis Creek, near the center of the town. Waverly, (p. v.), situated upon the Erie R. R., in the s. w. part of the town, was incorp. in 1854. It contains the Waverly Academy, 5 churches, and several manufactories. Pop. 1,067. Factoryville, (p. v.), on Cayuta Creek, 1½ mi. n. of Waverly, contains 180 inhabitants; and Barton, (p. v.) near the n. e. corner, on the Susquehanna, 30 dwellings. North Barton is a p. o. Halsey Valley (p. o.) is a hamlet in the n. e. part, on the line of Tioga. The first settlement was begun by Ebenezer Ellis and Stephen Mills, who located near the mouth of Ellis Creek in 1791.³ There are 9 churches in town.⁴

BERKSHIRE—was formed from Tioga, Feb. 12, 1808. Newark was taken off in 1823, and Richford in 1831. It lies upon the e. border of the co., n. of the center. Its surface is mostly a hilly and broken upland, with a mean elevation of 1,200 to 1,400 ft. above tide. A high hill, with steep declivities, lies e. of the center of the town. The streams are the East and West Branches of Owego Creek and their tributaries. The soil in the valleys is a sandy and gravelly loam, and upon the hills it is a tough clay and hardpan. Berkshire (p. v.) contains 3 churches and 34 dwellings. East Berkshire and Wilson Creek are p. offices. The pioneer settlers of the town were Daniel Ball and Isaac Brown, who came in 1791.⁵ Rev. Seth Williston conducted the first religious services in town.⁶

² The American Farmer was commenced at Owego in 1810 by Stephen Mack. In 1813 it was sold to Stephen B. Leonard, who changed its name to

The Owego Gazette, and continued it until 1835, when he sold to J. B. Shurtliff. In 1841 the office was burned, and the paper was discontinued a short time; but soon after it was re-incited by E. P. Marble, and in 1843 it was sold to Thomas Woods. In 1844 it was changed to

The Tioga Freeman, John Dow, publisher, and in a few years was discontinued. A local party dispute having arisen, another paper, called

The Owego Gazette, was started in 1844 by H. A. Beebe, and the two papers were published under the same name for several months. In 1845 Thomas Peasall became proprietor, and in 1846 the paper was sold to David Walter and son. In 1848 it again passed into the hands of H. A. Beebe, by whom it is still published.

The Republican was published 1 year at Owego in 1833 by — Chatterton.

The Owego Advertiser was commenced in 1836 by Andrew H. Calhoun, and was continued by him until 1853, when he sold to Powell & Barnes, who changed its name to

The Southern Tier Times. In 1864 Wm. Smyth purchased the establishment and changed the name of the paper to

The Owego Times, under which title he still continues its publication.

The Waverly Advocate was commenced at Waverly Village in 1862 by F. H. Baldwin. It is now published by Baldwin & Polley.

The St. Nicholas, a monthly literary magazine, was published about 1 year in 1853.

³ Among the other early settlers were — Atkins, Ezekiel Williams, John Hanna, Wm. Bensley, Luke Saunders, James Swartwood, Charles Bingham, Layton Newell, Lyon C. Hedges, Philip Crana, Justice Lyon, John Manhart, — Reed, and Silas Wolcott. A number of these were from the Wyoming Valley, and some of them from the adjoining towns of this co. George W. Butison erected the first sawmill, at Barton Village.

⁴ 5 M. E., 2 Bap., Prot. E., and R. O.

⁵ Among the first settlers were Stephen and Samuel Ball, Peter Wilson, and Josiah Ball, from Stockbridge, Mass., in 1793-95. John Brown, Capt. Am. Leonard, Eben. Cook, Daniel Carpenter, Consider Lawrence, David Williams, Joseph Waldo, Nathaniel Ford, Abel, Asel, and Nathaniel Hovey, Jeremiah Campbell, and Samuel Collins, — all from Berkshire co., Mass., — came in soon after. W. H. Moore kept the first inn and store; David Williams erected the first mill; and Miss T. Moore taught the first school.

⁶ The census reports 4 churches; 2 M. E., Cong., and Bap.

CANDOR—was formed from Spencer, Feb. 22, 1811. It is a large town, extending from the center to the n. border of the co. Its surface consists of high, broad, rolling uplands, separated into ridges by the narrow valleys of streams flowing in a southerly direction. Their declivities are generally abrupt, and their summits are mostly covered with forests. Catatunk Creek flows through the center of the town, and the West Branch of Owego Creek forms the e. boundary. A western branch of Catatunk Creek enters the town near the center of its w. border and flows e., its valley completely dividing the western ridge into two parts. The soil is a gravelly loam, very fertile in the valleys and moderately so upon the hills. The settlements are mostly confined to the valleys. Candor (p. v.) is situated on Catatunk Creek, near the center of the town. It is a station on the C. & S. R. R., and contains 4 churches, a woolen factory, flouring mill, 2 sawmills, and about 70 dwellings. Candor Center, $\frac{1}{2}$ mi. w. of Candor, contains 1 church, a flouring mill, 2 sawmills, and 20 dwellings. Willseyville, (p. v.) a station on the C. & S. R. R., in the n. w. part of the town, contains 20 dwellings. South Candor, on Catatunk Creek, near the s. border of the town, contains a church and about 20 dwellings. Weltonville (p. o.) is a hamlet at the mouth of Dolittle Creek. East Candor is a p. o. The first settlers were Thos. Hollister, Job Judd, — Luddington, and — Jordan, from Conn., who came into town in 1793.¹ Rev. Daniel Loring was the first preacher. The census reports 10 churches.²

NEWARK—was formed from Berkshire, as "Westville," April 12, 1823. Its name was changed March 24, 1824. It lies upon the center of the e. border of the co. Its surface is mostly a hilly, upland region, with a mean elevation of about 1,200 ft. above tide. Its streams are the West Branch of Owego Creek, forming the w. boundary, and the East Branch, flowing s. w. through near the center of the town. The soil in the valleys is a fine, gravelly loam, but upon the hills it is an unproductive hardpan. The greater part of the uplands are yet unsettled. Newark Valley, (p. v.), located in the valley of East Owego Creek, contains 2 churches, mills, an extensive tannery, and 75 dwellings. Ketchumville, (p. v.), in the n. e. corner of the town, 7 mi. n. e. of Newark Valley, contains a church, sawmill, and 26 dwellings. West Newark is a p. o. The settlement of the town was commenced in 1791, by emigrants from Berkshire co., Mass.³ The first religious association (Cong.) was formed in 1798, by Rev. Seth Williston, a missionary from Conn.; Rev. Jeremiah Osborn was the first settled preacher, in 1803.⁴

NICHOLS—was formed from Tioga, March 23, 1824. It lies upon the s. bank of the Susquehanna, near the center of the s. boundary of the co. Its surface is mostly upland, terminating in steep declivities upon the river, and broken by the narrow valleys of small streams. The summits of the hills are broad and 300 to 500 ft. above the river. Many of them are still covered with forests. The soil in the valleys is a gravelly loam and very productive; upon the hills it is a moderately fertile, gravelly and clayey loam, underlaid by red sandstone. Nichols, (p. o.), Hoopers Valley, (p. o.), and Canfields Corners (p. o.) are hamlets upon the Susquehanna. The first settlement was made by Ebenezer Ellis, Pelatiah Pierce, Stephen Mills, and James Cole, in 1787. There are 2 churches in town; M. E. and Union.⁵

OWEGO⁶—was organized Feb. 16, 1791. Spencer was taken off in 1806. It is a large town, occupying the s. e. corner of the co. Its surface is mostly upland, separated into two distinct parts by Susquehanna River and broken by the narrow valleys of small creeks. The summits of the ridges are broad and rolling, and 300 to 500 ft. above the river. The intervalle along the river in some places is an unbroken flat more than a mile in width. Owego Creek, flowing through a broad and beautiful valley, forms the w. boundary of the town n. of the Susquehanna. The other streams are Nanticoke Creek, from the n., and Apalachin Creek, from the s., and a great number of smaller brooks and creeks. The declivities bordering upon these streams are generally very steep. The soil is a deep, rich, gravelly loam in the valleys, and a less productive, gravelly loam, ¹ They were followed in 1794 by Joel and Elijah Smith, Israel Mead, and his son Israel,—the former two from Conn. and the latter from Vt. Families named Collins, Sheldon, Marsh, Bates, and Ellis were also among the early settlers. The first inn was kept by Thomas Hollister; the first store by Philip Case; and the first gristmill was erected by Elijah Hart.

² 5 Bap., 2 M. E., Prot. E., Cong., and Union.

³ Among the settlers in 1791 were Elisha Wilson, (living upon the place of his original settlement in 1868, at the age of 87,) Daniel Ball, Isaac and Abram Brown, — Dean, and — Norton,—all from Stockbridge, Mass.—most of them settling in the valley of Owego Creek. The first birth was that of Wm. Ball. Miss E. Moore taught the first school; Enos Shawson kept the first store and inn; and E. Wilson built the first mill.

⁴ The census reports 5 churches; 3 M. E. Cong., and Presb.

underlaid by hardpan, on the hills. A considerable portion of the hilly regions is yet covered with forests. Manufactures, and commerce to a limited extent, engage the attention of the people. Owego, (p. v.,) the co. seat, was incorp. April 4, 1827. It is finely situated upon the Susquehanna, near the mouth of Owego Creek.¹ It is the commercial center of a large agricultural and lumbering district; and since its first settlement it has been one of the most important villages in the southern tier of counties.² It contains the Owego Academy, a female seminary, 7 churches, 2 banks, 2 newspaper offices, and several manufacturing establishments.³ A bridge 80 rods in length here crosses the Susquehanna. Pop. 3,041. Apalachin, (p. v.,) on the s. bank of the Susquehanna, 8 mi. above Owego, contains 1 church and 200 inhabitants. Campville, (p. v.,) on the n. bank of the river, 7 mi. above Owego, contains 1 church and 20 dwellings. It is a station on the Erie R. R. Flemingville (p. o.) is a hamlet in the n. w. part of the town, on Owego Creek; Willsboro, a p. o. on Nanticoke Creek; and South Owego, a p. o. near the Penn. line. Amos Draper, an Indian agent and trader, from the Wyoming Valley, erected the first house in town, at Owego Village, in 1786, and moved in his family in 1787.⁴ The first religious services were conducted by Rev. Seth Williston. The first religious association (Presb.) was formed in 1810, and a church was organized in 1817; Rev. Horatio I. Lombard was the first settled minister, in 1818. There are 13 churches in town.⁵

RICHFORD—was formed from Berkshire, as "Arlington," April 18, 1831. Its name was changed April 9, 1832. It is the n. e. corner town in the co. Its surface is mostly upland, broken by a few narrow valleys. It contains the highest land in the co., estimated to be 1,400 to 1,600 ft. above tide. Its streams are the head branches of Owego Creek. Its soil is a moderately fertile, gravelly loam. About one-third of the surface is yet covered with forests. Leather and lumber are manufactured to some extent. Richford, (p. v.,) s. of the center of the town, contains a church and about 60 dwellings. West Richford is a p. o. The first settlements, made at a later period than those in Berkshire, from which the town was taken, were since the commencement of the present century;⁶ but the exact date could not be ascertained. There is a Presb. church in town.

SPENCER—was formed from Owego, Feb. 28, 1806. Candor, Caroline, Danby, and Newfield (the last three now in Tompkins co.) were taken off Feb. 22, 1811, and Cayuta, March 20, 1824. It is the n. w. corner town of the co. Its surface is an upland, broken by the valleys of small streams. The n. w. portion forms the watershed between Susquehanna River and Cayuga Lake. The ridges have a general n. and s. direction. Their declivities are generally steep and their summits broad and broken. Catatunk Creek, flowing e., breaks through these ridges at nearly right angles, forming a deep and narrow valley. The soil in the valleys is a gravelly loam, and upon the hills it is a hard, shaly loam. Spencer,⁷ (p. v.,) on Catatunk Creek, w. of the center of the town, contains 3 churches, 2 tanneries, a flouring mill, sawmill, and 75 dwellings. The first settlement was commenced in 1795, by Benj. Drake and Joseph and John Barker.⁸ The first religious meeting was held by P. Spaulding, at his own house; and the first religious association (Bap.) was formed by Elder David Jayne.⁹

TIOGA—was formed from Union, (Broome co.,) March 14, 1800. Berkshire was taken off in 1808, a part of Union in 1810, and Barton and Nichols in 1824. It lies on the Susquehanna, s. w. of the center of the co. Its surface is principally upland, terminating in bluffs along the river intervals. The streams are Catatunk and Pipe Creeks and numerous smaller creeks and brooks.

² For many years the p. o. here was one of the four distributing offices of the State. From this place also were shipped salt, plaster, lumber, and wheat for the Penn. and Md. markets. Sept. 7, 1849, a destructive fire occurred, burning 75 buildings.

⁵ 6 M. E., 2 Presb., Prot. E., Bap., Cong., Wes. Meth., R. C. and Union.

⁶ Among the early settlers were Evan Harris, Samuel Smith, Samuel Gleason, Nathaniel Johnson, — Stevens, Jeremiah Campbell, Beriah Wells, Caleb and Jesse Gleason, Ezekiel Rich, and William Dunham,—many of them from the adjoining town of Berkshire.

⁷ This village was the co. seat of Tioga co., then including Chemung, from 1812 to 1821.

The soil is a fine, dark loam in the valleys and a gravelly loam upon the hills. Most of the summits are still covered with forests. Tioga Center, (p. v.,) at the mouth of Pipe Creek, contains a church, several mills, and 60 dwellings. It is a station on the N. Y. & Erie R. R. Smithsboro, (p. v.,) on the N. Y. & E. R. R., contains 230 inhabitants. Halsey Valley (p. o.) is a hamlet, in the n. w. corner of the town, on the line of Barton. Straights Corners is a p. o. on the n. border. Jenksville (p. o.) is a hamlet, near the mouth of Catatunk Creek. The first settlement was made on Pipe Creek, in 1785, by Samuel and Wm. Ransom, — Primmer, and Andrew Alden, from Wyoming, Penn. Col. David Pixley, from Mass., and Abner Turner, from N. H., made the first settlement on the river, in 1791.¹ There are two churches in town; M. E. and Union.

TOMPKINS COUNTY:

THIS county was formed from Cayuga and Seneca, April 17, 1817. Three towns were annexed from Tioga, March 22, 1822, and a part of Schuyler co. was taken off in 1854. It lies around the head of Cayuga Lake, s. w. of the center of the State, is centrally distant 141 mi. from Albany, and contains 506 sq. mi. Its surface consists principally of an upland, broken by a series of ridges extending n. and s. The watershed between Cayuga Lake and Tioughnioga River occupies the n. border of the co., and that between the same lake and Susquehanna River the s. border. The deep valley of Cayuga Lake, 700 ft. below the summits of the ridges, separates the n. portions of the co. into two distinct parts. The n. portion, declining toward the n., gradually loses its hilly character and spreads out into the beautifully rolling lands so common in Central N. Y. West of the lake the land does not lessen in height within the limits of the co.; but the rough, broken hills change into smooth ridges, with long, gradual slopes.

The deep valley of Cayuga Lake affords a fine opportunity to examine the geological structure of this region. Upon the shore in the extreme n. part are found the Hamilton shales, the lowest rock in the co. Next above them on the shore appear the Tully limestone, Genesee slate, and Portage or Ithaca shales and sandstones.¹ The summits of all the hills are formed of the rocks belonging to the Chemung group, usually covered deep with drift deposits. The streams, in their course from the table lands to the lake, have worn deep channels into the rocks, and waterfalls which once were, probably, at the face of the bluffs, have receded one to two miles, forming below deep, rocky chasms bordered by perpendicular walls. As the rocks are composed of strata of different degrees of hardness, the water has worn them irregularly,—the soft and yielding shales generally forming a declining surface, while the hard and compact limestone retains its perpendicular forms.²

The streams are Salmon, Fall, Cascadilla, Six Mile, and Taughanick Creeks and Cayuga Inlet and their branches, flowing into the lake, and several branches of Owego Creek and other small streams, flowing s. The cascades upon these streams form one of the most peculiar and interesting features of the landscape.

The soil in the n. part is generally a gravelly or clayey loam, formed by the drift deposits; and that in the s. is a gravelly or slaty loam, derived from disintegration. It is all best adapted to grazing. In the n. part the people are generally engaged in grain raising, wheat forming the staple production. In the s. towns the principal branches of agriculture pursued are stock raising and dairying. Considerable manufacturing is carried on at Ithaca and other places.

The co. seat is located at the village of Ithaca. The courthouse is a brick edifice, built upon a fine lot near the center of the village.³ The jail, contiguous to the courthouse, is a well built stone edifice, with ample accommodations for the health of the prisoners. The cells are clean and well ventilated. The co. clerk's office is a fireproof building, fronting upon Tioga St. The poor-house is situated upon a farm of 100 acres in Ulysses, 6 mi. n. w. of Ithaca. The average number of inmates is 53, and the revenue derived from the farm is about $1,500. No school is provided for the children, and they are not admitted to the public schools. The house is in bad repair, destitute of ventilation, and entirely unfit for the residence of so many human beings.

The Cayuga & Susquehanna R. R. extends from Ithaca to Owego, connecting with the Erie R. R. at the latter place. Cayuga Lake is navigable and connects with the Erie Canal at Monte-the absence of a resisting stratum at the surface, the rock has been worn down in a continuous slope.—Geol. IV. Dist., p. 378, 379.

suma. A daily line of steamers plies between Ithaca and Cayuga Bridge, on the N. Y. C. & R. R., touching at all the landings on the lake. The railroad and canal and lake constitute one of the principal routes for supplying the West with the anthracite coal of E. Penn.

Four weekly newspapers are now published in the co.¹

The three s. towns of this co. were included in the Watkins and Flint's Purchase, and the remainder in the Military Tract. A public road was built from Oxford, on Chenango River, directly through to Ithaca, by Joseph Chaplin, in 1791-92-93, and this became the great highway for immigration in the s. part of the State for many years. As a consequence, the co. immediately bordering upon the road was rapidly settled. The first immigrants were mostly from New England. At the place where Ithaca now stands were found cleared fields which had previously been cultivated by the Indians; and these lands were among the first occupied in the co. The next settlements were made in Ulysses, on the w. bank of the lake, and along Chaplin's road in Dryden. The opening of the rich lands of the Genesee country to settlers diverted immigration from this region, and the co. for many years did not increase in population with the same rapidity as the regions further w. The growth of the co., however, has been gradual and continuous; and now in every element of real prosperity it is fully on an average with the other cos. in the State.

CAROLINE—was formed from Spencer, (Tioga co.,) Feb. 22, 1811, and was transferred to this co. March 22, 1822. A part was annexed to Danby in 1839. It is the s. e. corner town of the co. Its surface is an upland, broken by a series of ridges extending n. w. and s. e. 500 to 700 ft. above the valleys and 1,500 to 1,700 ft. above tide. The summits of the hills are usually rounded and rolling and their declivities steep. The streams are Owego Creek, forming the e. boundary, and Six Mile Creek and their branches. These streams flow in deep, narrow valleys bordered by steep hillsides. The soil is generally a gravelly loam, and is well adapted to grazing. Caroline Center (p. v.) contains 2 churches and 14 houses; Motts Corners, (p. v.,) on Six Mile Creek, in the n. w. corner of the town, 1 church, several manufacturing establishments,² and 40 houses; Speedsville, (p. v.,) upon Boyer Creek, in the s. e. corner, contains 3 churches and 30 houses; and Slaterville, (p. v.,) near the n. border, 1 church and 30 houses. Pugleys Depot (p. o.) is a station on the C. & S. R. R. Caroline (p. o.) is a hamlet in the n. e. corner of the town. Rawson Hollow, on the e. line, is a p. o. The first settlement was begun by Capt.

¹ The Seneca Republican, the first paper published in the co., was started at Ithaca, July 4, 1815, by Jonathan Ingersoll. In 1816 it was changed to The Rhaca Journal, and in 1817 Mack & Shepherd became proprietors. It was successively issued by Mack & Searing, Ebenezer Mack, and Mack & Morgan, until 1834, when Wm. Andrus became partner, and the paper was issued by Mack & Andrus. In 1837 the name was changed to Ithaca Journal, Literary Gazette, and General Advertiser, and about a year afterward a portion of the title was dropped, and it was issued as The Ithaca Journal and Advertiser. In Dec. 1833, Mack & Andrus sold to Nathan Randall; in 1837 Randall sold to Mattison & Barnaby; and in 1839 A. E. Barnaby became sole proprietor. In 1841 Barnaby sold to Alfred Wells, and soon after Wells sold to J. H. Selkreg, the present publisher. The Republican Chronicle was started at Ithaca in June, 1830, by Spencer & Stockton. In 1828 David D. Spencer became sole proprietor. In 1826 S. S. Chatterton bought an interest, and in 1828 he became sole proprietor, and soon after changed the name to The Rhaca Republican. In 1831 or '32 he again changed the name to The Tompkins American, and in 1834 the paper was discontinued. The Western Messenger was started at Ithaca in 1826 by A. P. Searing, and was continued about 2 years. The Philanthropist, a Universalist paper, was started at Ithaca in 1831 by O. A. Brownson, and was continued about 1 year. The Rhaca Chronicle was started by D. D. & A. Spencer in Feb. 1828, and was continued by them until 1848, when Anson Spencer became sole proprietor. In 1844 it was changed to The American Citizen, published by A. E. Barnaby & Co. It is now published by Anson Spencer, who has been one of the proprietors from the commencement of the paper in 1828. The Lake Light was started at Trumansburgh in 1837 by Wm. W. Phelps, and was continued about 2 years. The Trumansburgh Advertiser was published a short time in 1833 by D. Fairchild.

The Jeffersonian and Tompkins Times was started in 1836 by C. Robbins. He soon after sold to G. G. Freer, who changed the name to The Rhaca Herald. In 1837 Nathan Randall became proprietor, and merged the paper in the Ithaca Journal and Advertiser. The Christian Doctrinal Advocate and Spiritual Monitor was started at Motts Corners in 1837, under the auspices of the 7th Day Baptist denomination, and was continued several years. The Tompkins Volunteer was started at Ithaca by H. C. Goodwin in 1840. He soon after sold to J. Hunt, Jr. In 1843 the title was changed to The Tompkins Democrat, and after a short time the paper was removed to Greene, Chenango co. The Trumansburgh Gazette was published a short time in 1848 by J. H. Hawes. The Flag of the Union was started at Ithaca in 1848 by J. B. Gouman. In 1850 it was merged in the Ithaca Journal and Advertiser. The Templar and Watchman was started at Ithaca in 1843 by Orlando Lund. It afterward passed into the hands of Myron S. Barnes, and was continued a short time. Rumsey's Companion was started at Dryden in 1856 by H. D. Rumsey. It was soon after changed to The Fireside Companion, and again in a few months to The Dryden News. In 1867 it was sold to G. Z. House and changed to The New York Confederacy, and was soon after discontinued. In 1858 it was resuscitated, as The Dryden News, by Anabel Clapp, by whom it is still published. The Tompkins County Democrat was started at Ithaca in Oct. 1854, by Timothy Malony, by whom it is still published. ² Two flouring mills, two sawmills, a tannery, and woolen factory. One mile below the village is the extensive gun barrel manufactory of J. & B. Loeey, and, with one exception, the only one in the State. This establishment was started 50 years ago, by Abiel Loeey, father of the present proprietors, at Owego; thence it was removed to Fall Creek, near Ithaca; thence to Owego; and thence to its present location.

David Rich, who came from Vt. in 1795 and located near Willow Bridge; Widow Earsley, with four sons and four daughters, from N. J., came in the next year; and for several years these were the only families in town.¹ The first church (Ref. Prot. D.) was formed at an early period; the first pastor was Rev. Garrit Mandeville. The census reports 10 churches in town.²

DANBY—was formed from Spencer, (Tioga co.,) Feb. 22, 1811, and was transferred to this co. March 22, 1822. Part of Caroline was annexed April 29, 1839, and a part was annexed to Dryden in 1856. It lies near the center of the s. border of the co. Its surface is broken by ranges of hills extending n. and s. 300 to 400 ft. above the valleys. Their summits are rounded and their declivities generally steep. The valleys are mere ravines. The principal streams are Cayuga Inlet, flowing n., and numerous small streams, the latter being tributaries either to this or to Owego Creek. The soil is a mixed gravelly and shaly loam, with occasional patches of clay, and is well adapted to grazing. Danby, (p. v.,) in the n. part, contains 3 churches and 50 houses; Beers Settlement, (South Danby p. o.,) near the center, about a dozen houses. West Danby is a p. o., near the w. border. The first settlers were Jacob Yapple, Dr. Lewis Beers, Jabez Beers, and Joseph Judson, who located at Beers Settlement in 1797.³ The first church (Cong.) was formed in 1807; Rev. Daniel Loring was the first pastor. There are 8 churches in town.⁴

DRYDEN⁵—was formed from Ulysses, Feb. 22, 1803. A part of Danby was annexed in 1856. It is a large town, occupying the central portion of the e. border of the co. The surface of the s. half is rolling or moderately hilly, and that of the s. half hilly and broken. The e. border forms the watershed between Tioughnioga River and Cayuga Lake. The highest ridge, in the s. e. part, is 1,700 to 1,800 ft. above tide. The principal stream is Fall Creek, flowing s. w. through near the center of the town, on its course affording several millsites. Several small streams, tributaries to Owego Creek, take their rise in the s. part. Dryden Lake is a small sheet of water 1 mi. long and about $\frac{1}{2}$ mi. wide, lying in an elevated valley near the e. border and 1,500 ft. above tide. A mineral spring, strongly impregnated with sulphur, magnesia, and iron, is situated one mi. w. of Dryden Village, and has a local notoriety for medicinal virtues. In the n. e. part are two swamps, each covering an area of several hundred acres. Dryden, (p. v.,) on the s. branch of Fall Creek, in the e. part of the town, is a flourishing inland village. It contains 2 churches, a large gristmill, and several manufacturing establishments. Pop. 522. Etna, (p. v.,) on Fall Creek, near the center, contains 2 churches, a grist and saw mill, an iron foundry, and machine shop. Pop. 230. West Dryden, (p. v.,) in the n. w. part, contains 93 inhabitants; Varna, (p. v.,) on Fall Creek, near the w. border, 170 inhabitants; Malloryville, Freeville, and California are hamlets. The first settlement was commenced in 1797, by Amos Sweet, on the present site of Dryden Village.⁶ Joseph Chaplin built a road from Oxford, Chenango co., to Ithaca, passing through this town, in 1791-92-93. There are 9 churches in town.⁷

ENFIELD⁸—was formed from Ulysses, March 16, 1821. It lies upon the center of the w. border of the co. Its surface is rolling, and it has a mean elevation of 500 to 700 ft. above Cayuga Lake. The principal streams are Ten Mile Creek and the s. branch of Taughanick Creek. Upon the former, in the s. e. part of the town, is one of the finest of the beautiful cascades so common in this co. It is in a deep gorge, and has a total fall of 230 ft. The soil is principally a gravelly loam. Enfield Center (p. v.) contains 2 churches and about 40 dwellings; Enfield (p. v.) 25 dwellings. Enfield Falls is a hamlet. Among the first settlers were — Geltner, John Whitlock, Jas. Rumsey, Lewis Owen, and Isaac and John Beech.⁹ There are 5 churches in town.¹⁰

¹ Among the other early settlers were Thos. Tracy and Sam'l Yates, from Mass.; Joseph Chambers, Richard Bush, and Hartmore Earnest, from Ulster co., in 1798; Levi Slater, (formerly of Slaterville,) Charles and John Mulks, John Cantine, (first settler at Motta Corners,) and Joseph Bishop, all from Ulster, and John Rounceville, from Mass., in 1801. The first child born was Harriet Rounceville. The first school was taught by John Robinson. Richard Bush kept the first inn, Isaac Miller the first store, and Gen. Cantine built the first gristmill, in 1800.

² 4 M. E., Prot. E., Cong., Bap., Ref. Prot. D., F. W. Bap., and Univ.

⁴ 3 M. E., 2 Bap., Cong., Prot. E., and Swedenborgian.

⁵ Named in honor of John Dryden, the English poet.

⁶ The next settlers were Ezekiel Sandford, David Fort, and Ebenezer Chausen, who located at Willow Grove in 1798. A single yoke of oxen, at one load, brought these three families, consisting of 14 persons, and all their household goods, from the Chenango River. Capt. Geo. Robertson (sometimes called the "father of the town") came in the same year, and settled on Lot 53. Among the other early settlers were Lyman Hurd, from Vt., Dr. Sheldon, Dr. Wolf, Irona Peat, Wm. Daley, Joel Hall, and Jas. Wood. The first child born was Robert Robertson; and the first death was that of the mother of Amos Sweet. Daniel Lasey taught the first school, in 1804. Amos Lewis kept the first inn, Joel Hull the first store, and Col. Hopkins, from Homer, built the first mill, in 1800.

⁷ 5 M. E., 2 Presb., 2 Bap., and R. C.

⁸ Named from Enfield, Ct.

⁹ John Applegate kept the first inn, Samuel Ingersoll the first store, and Wm. Ferris built the first mill.

¹⁰ 2 M. E., Christian, Bap., and Presb.

GROTON¹—was formed from Locke, (Cayuga co.), as "Division," April 7, 1817, and its name was changed March 13, 1818. It is the n. e. corner town in the co. Its surface is rolling or moderately hilly. From the valleys the land rises by long and gradual slopes to a height of 100 to 300 ft. The highest point in town is about 1,600 ft. above tide. The principal streams are Owasco Inlet and Fall Creek. Bear Swamp, in the n. part, contains an area of several hundred acres. The soil is a fine quality of gravelly loam, underlaid by slate. Groton, (p. v.), on Owasco Inlet, near the center of the town, contains 3 churches, the Groton Academy, and several manufacturing establishments.² Pop. 587. McLean, (p. v.), on Fall Creek, in the s. e., contains 5 churches, several factories,³ and 40 houses. Peruville, (p. v.), near the s. border, contains 2 churches, a saw and grist mill, pail factory, and 30 houses. Groton City, (p. v.), in the n. e. corner, and West Groton, (p. v.), in the n. w., contain about 11 houses each. Bensons Corners is a hamlet, in the s. w. corner. Among the first settlers were Saml. Hogg, at West Groton; Ichabod Bowen, John Guthrie, and — Perrin, at Groton; and J. Williams, J. Houghtaling, and W. S. Clark, at East Groton. The census reports 11 churches.⁴

ITHACA⁵—was formed from Ulysses, March 16, 1821. It is the central town in the co., lying at the head of Cayuga Lake. A tract of land 2 mi. long and 1½ broad, low and nearly level, extends s. from the lake shore; and from this the valley of Cayuga Inlet opens to the s. w. and that of Six Mile Creek to the s. e. Ridges 400 to 700 ft. high, with steep declivities, separate these valleys and surround the low land and the head of the lake. From the summits the surface spreads out into a rolling upland. A marsh ½ mi. wide borders immediately on the lake. The streams are Fall, Cascadilla, Six Mile, Buttermilk, and Ten Mile Creeks, and Cayuga Inlet. In their course from the uplands each of these streams plunges down the wall-like precipices which surround the lake, forming series of cascades which for beauty and variety are scarcely equalled elsewhere.⁶ The soil is a fertile, gravelly loam upon the uplands, and a deep, rich alluvium in the valleys. Ithaca, (p. v.), 1½ mi. s. of the head of Cayuga Lake, is the co. seat, and the commercial center of the co. It is beautifully situated upon a fine alluvial plain, bordered on 3 sides by lofty hills, and on the fourth by the lake, with which it is connected by a navigable inlet. It contains the Ithaca Academy,⁷ 9 churches,⁸ 2 banks, 4 printing offices, and a large number of manufacturing establishments.⁹ The commercial interests of the place are extensive and important. A daily line of steamboats on the lake running between this place and Cayuga Bridge, in connection with the C. & S. R. R., serves to connect the Erie R. R. on the s. with the N. Y. Central on the n.¹⁰ The lake is also a link in the great chain of the internal water navigation of the State, and upon it a large amount of canal commerce, centering at Ithaca, is carried on. The transshipment of Scranton and Lackawanna coal brought by the C. & S. R. R. forms an important and constantly growing branch of business. A large proportion of the anthracite coal for the Northern and Western markets is supplied through this avenue.¹¹ The public schools of the village are graded, and are in a flourishing condition. The annual attendance is about 1,200.¹² The village was incorp. April 2, 1821. Pop. 4,908. The first settlement of the town was made by Jacob Yaple, Isaac

³ Thrashing machine factory, pail factory, two furnaces, flouring mills, and 2 sawmills.

⁸ 2 M. E., Bap., Presb., Cong., Prot. E., Ref. Prot. D., Af. Meth., and R. C.

Dumond, and Peter Hinepaw, who located on the present site of Ithaca Village in 1789. The land that they occupied had previously been partially cultivated by the Indians.¹ The first church (Presb.) was organized in 1804-05, with seven members.

LANSING—was formed from Genoa, (Cayuga co.,) April 7, 1817. It lies upon the n. bank of Cayuga Lake, in the n. part of the co. The surface is principally a rolling upland, 500 ft. above the lake, bordered by steep declivities. Salmon Creek, the principal stream, flows s. through near the center of the town. Its valley is narrow and bordered by steep hillsides. Swarts, Townly, and Hedden Creeks are its principal tributaries. The soil is generally a fertile, gravelly loam. Ludlowville, (p. v.,) on Salmon Creek, about 1 mi. from its mouth, contains 3 churches, several factories,² and about 50 dwellings. Lansingville, (p. v.,) on the ridge w. of Salmon Creek, in the n. part of the town, contains 1 church and 25 dwellings. North Lansing, (p. o.,) in the n. e. corner, Lake Ridge, (p. o.,) on the bluff above the lake, in the s. w. corner, and Libertyville (South Lansing p. o.) are hamlets of about a dozen houses each. East Lansing and Forest City are p. offices. Forest City Water Cure is finely situated on the bluff overlooking the lake, in the s. part of the town. The first settlement was begun in 1792, by emigrants from N. J.³ The census reports 7 churches in town.⁴

NEWFIELD—was formed from Spencer, (Tioga co.,) as "Cayuta," Feb. 22, 1811. Its name was changed March 29, 1822, and a part was annexed to Catharines (Schuyler co.) in 1853. It is the s. w. corner town in the co. The surface is high and hilly, the ridges being 400 to 600 ft. above the valleys and 1,500 to 1,700 ft. above tide. The streams are Cayuga Inlet and Ten Mile Creek and their branches. The valleys of these streams are usually narrow and bordered by steep hillsides. A portion of the w. part of the town is yet uncultivated. The soil is a shaly and clayey loam, best adapted to grazing. Newfield, (p. v.,) in the n. e. part of the town, contains 3 churches, 2 flouring mills, 2 carriage shops, a woolen factory, an oilcloth factory, and about 80 dwellings. Trumbull Corners, (p. v.,) on the n. border, contains 1 church and 20 dwellings. Poney Hollow (p. o.) is a hamlet in the s. w. part. The first settler was — Thomas, who located at Poney Hollow.⁵ The census reports 3 churches in town.⁶

ULYSSES—was formed March 5, 1799. Dryden was taken off in 1803, and Ithaca and Enfield in 1821. It lies upon the w. bank of Cayuga Lake, on the n. border of the co. A range of bluffs 600 ft. high, with steep declivities, borders upon the lake; and from their summits the surface spreads out in an undulating upland. The only considerable stream is Taughanick (Ti-kaw-nik) Creek, which crosses the town from the w. In its descent from the plateau to the lake this stream forms a series of cascades, the principal of which is known as Taughanick Falls. These falls have receded about 1 mi. from the shore of the lake, and have worn a deep gorge in the yielding shales, with banks 380 ft. high. The stream now falls, in an unbroken sheet, over a limestone terrace 210 ft. in height. About 1 mi. farther up the gorge is another fall, of 80 ft. The soil is a fine quality of gravelly loam. Trumansburgh,⁷ (p. v.,) near the n. border of the town, is the second village in the co. in amount of business and population. It contains 4 churches, the Trumansburgh Academy, and several manufacturing establishments.⁸ Pop. 1,052. Jacksonville, (p. v.,) near the center of the town, contains 1 church and 50 houses. Waterburgh, near the w. border, contains 1 church, mills, and 40 dwellings. Halseyville⁹ is a hamlet. The first settlements were commenced by Samuel Weyburn, at the mouth of Taughanick Creek, and by Abner and Philip Tremaine, on the site of Trumansburgh, in 1792.¹⁰ The first church (Presb.) was formed by Jedediah Chapman, in 1803. There are now 6 churches in town.¹¹

² Grist and saw mills and an ax helve factory.

stay in the house a rattlesnake crept into the bed and slept with his children. — Tooker kept the first store; Silas Ludlow, of Ludlowville, built the first mill, in 1798.

⁴ 4 M. E., 2 Bap., and Presb.

⁶ Bap., M. E., and Presb.

⁷ Name derived and corrupted from Tremaine, the first family of settlers.

⁸ 3 flouring mills and 2 furnaces and machine shops.

⁹ Named from Nicoll Halsey, the first settler.

¹⁰ John McLallen, a young man, accompanied the Tremaines in the capacity of teamster. The first child born was Calvin Tremaine, in 1794; and the first marriage, that of John McLallen and Mary King, Dec. 12, 1799. John McLallen kept the first inn — Henshaw the first store; Abner Tremaine built the first mill; and Stephen Woodworth taught the first school, all at Trumansburgh. ¹¹ 3 M. E., Bap., Presb., and E. ULSTER COUNTY.

THIS county was formed Nov. 1, 1683,¹ and included the country between the Hudson and the Delaware, bounded n. and s. by the n. and w. lines passing through the mouths of Sawyers and Murderers Creeks. A part of Delaware was taken off in 1797, a part of Greene in 1800, and Sullivan in 1809. A portion was annexed to Orange in 1798, and the town of Catskill was annexed from Albany co. the same year. It lies on the w. bank of the Hudson, centrally distant 68 mi. from Albany, and contains 1,204 sq. mi. Its surface is mostly a hilly and mountainous upland. The Catskill Mts. occupy the n. w. part; and the Shawangunk Mts. extend n. e. from the s. w. corner nearly through the co. The mountain region consists of irregular ridges and isolated peaks with rocky sides and summits too steep and rough for cultivation. The summits are 1,500 to 2,000 ft. above the Hudson. The remaining parts of the co. are generally broken and hilly. Esopus Creek flows in a tortuous course through the n. part and discharges its waters into the Hudson. It receives Platte Kil from the n. Rondout Creek enters the s. w. corner of the co. and flows n. e. along the v. declivity of the Shawangunk Mts. and enters the Hudson at Rondout. It receives as tributaries Sandburgh Creek in the s. w. part of the co., and Wall Kil near its mouth. The latter stream flows along the n. foot of the Shawangunk Mts. The remaining streams are small brooks and creeks.

The rocks of the co. are composed of the Portage and Chemung shales, in the n. part, and the Shawangunk grit or Oneida conglomerate, in the w. part. Drift deposits are found in nearly every part. Lead ore is found to some extent among the Shawangunk Mts.²

At an early period the Esopus grit was largely quarried and manufactured into millstones.³ Water-limestone of an excellent quality is found and largely quarried.⁴ The Ulster co. Cement has an excellent reputation throughout the United States, and is used in immense quantities on fortifications and other Government works requiring solidity. It was used on Croton, Brooklyn, Cochituate, Albany, Washington, and other water-works. It finds a ready market in every port on the seaboard from New Brunswick to Texas. It has been exported to California and South America, and is largely used in and around New York, Boston, and Philadelphia, upon public and private buildings. The cement rocks are quarried usually on the hillsides, and these openings often extend in galleries under the overlying rock. The rock outcrops in a belt running n. e. and s. w., first appearing on the Hudson a few miles n. of Kingston Point, and extending 20 to 25 mi. to the town of Rochester, but is lost from view at the surface in several places between these points. In the section occupied by the Portage group of rocks are found extensive outcrops of thin bedded sandstone, yielding a fine quality of flagging, which is largely quarried and exported.⁵ The soil is generally a good quality of sandy and gravelly loam, in some places intermixed with clay. Most of the valleys are covered with a deep, rich alluvium.

Most of the land is best adapted to grazing. Dairying is extensively pursued, and spring grain

³ In Smith's History, written in 1782, this co. is said to be noted for fine flour, beer, and a good breed of draft horses. The millstones—then quarried about 10 mi. from the river—had acquired celebrity, and were said to far exceed those from Colen, in Europe, formerly imported at £80 the pair, while Esopus stones did not cost a fourth part of that sum. Small millstones for family use are still made for the Southern market; but the business has lost much of its former importance. A finer quality of these grits, when calcined and crushed, furnishes the alkali used in the glass manufacture at Ellenville.

is raised to some extent. Fruit growing is becoming an important branch of business. Manufactures of sole leather and lumber are located in the western towns,¹ and water-line in the eastern. The commerce, carried on by means of the river and canal, is large, and is constantly increasing.

The co. seat is located at Kingston.² The courthouse is a fine stone edifice, situated upon Wall St.³ The jail is a stone building in rear of the courthouse. It is well arranged and furnished and is kept in good order.⁴ The clerk's office is in a fireproof one story building on the corner of Fair and Main Sts.⁵ The poorhouse is located upon a farm of 140 acres, on the s. line of New Palts, 16 mi. s. w. of Kingston. It is poorly constructed, not ventilated at all, and is entirely unfit for the purposes for which it is used. The average number of inmates is 175, supported at a weekly cost of $1.25 each. A school is taught 6 months in the year.⁶ The farm yields a revenue of $500. The Delaware & Hudson Canal is the only important work of internal improvement in the co. It extends from Rondout, on the Hudson, up Rondout and Sandburgh Creeks, through Kingston, Rosendale, Marbletown, Rochester, and Wawarsing. It opens a direct communication between the coal mines of Penn. and the Hudson. The Delaware & Hudson Canal Co. was incorp. April 23, 1823, and the canal was finished in 1828.⁷

One daily and 7 weekly newspapers are now published in the co.⁸

The Dutch established a trading post upon the present site of Rondout in 1614, and probably a few Dutch families settled in the immediate vicinity soon after. This early settlement was broken up by Indian hostilities, and a new one was commenced between 1630 and '40. This was again attacked by the Indians, and in 1655 was abandoned. Before 1660, settlers had again located at Kingston and vicinity. In 1660 a treaty had been concluded with the Indians; and the people were so unsuspicious of danger that they left open the gates to their fort both day and night. June 7, 1663, the Indians came into the fort at Wiltwyck in great numbers, apparently to trade, while the greater part of the people were engaged in their usual avocations out of doors. At a given signal the Indians commenced the work of destruction. Recovering from their first panic, the whites rallied, under the leadership of Thomas Chambers, and finally drove the Indians out of the fort; 18 whites were killed, and 42 were carried away prisoners. The out settlements were all destroyed. A destructive war ensued, in which the Ulster Indians were nearly exterminated. During this war the valley of the Wall Kil was discovered, and soon after the peace of 1663 it was occupied by a colony of French Huguenots.⁹ The settlements gradually extended along the valleys of Kaopus,

³ The first county officers under State government were Levi Paulding, First Judge; Egbert Dumond, Sheriff; and Joseph Gashier, Sheriff.

⁹ After the peace of 1660 the Director General of New Netherlands shipped 11 Indian prisoners to Curaçoa to be sold as slaves. This outrage led to the attack made in 1663, and the bloody war that followed. Nine days after the retreat of the Indians from the attack upon Wiltwyck, in June, 1663, a rain-

Rondout, and Wall Kil Creeks and their tributaries. Besides the manorial grant of Fox Hall,¹ the English made township grants of Kingston, New Paltz, Marletown, Rochester, Hurley, Shawangunk, and Marlborough. During the Revolution the frontier settlements were exposed to Indian hostilities, and before the close of the war were all destroyed or abandoned. The river towns were taken by the British in 1777, and most of them were pillaged and burned. The Provincial Congress and State Legislature held several sessions at Kingston during the war and soon after. The people were nearly all ardent patriots; and there were probably fewer Tories in this co. than in any other section of the State. Since the Revolution the co. has steadily progressed in wealth and population. The completion of the Delaware & Hudson Canal was a marked era in the history of the industry of the co.; and the commencement of the cement manufacture and stone quarrying have greatly added to its permanent prosperity.

DENNING²—was formed from Shandaken, March 6, 1849. A part of Hardenburgh was taken off in 1859. It lies in the n. w. part of the co., upon the border of Sullivan. Its surface is a broken and mountainous upland. A spur of the Catskill Mts. extends through the town, with a mean elevation of 1,500 to 2,000 ft. Its streams are head branches of Rondout Creek and Neversink River. The valleys are narrow ravines bordered by steep and rocky hillsides. The soil upon the uplands is a gravelly loam, and in the valleys a sandy loam. The settlements are chiefly confined to the valleys. Denning is a p. o. near the center. Dewittsville is a hamlet near the s. line. This town, though large, has the least population of any town in the co. Its chief wealth consists in its heavy growth of hemlock and hard wood. Settlements were made at a comparatively recent period.³

ESOPUS—was formed from "Kingston," April 5, 1811. A part was set off to Kingston, and a part of Hurley was annexed, in 1818, and a part of New Paltz was annexed April 12, 1842. It lies upon the Hudson, and is the central town upon the n. border of the co. Its surface is rolling in the n. and moderately hilly in the w. A range of hills extends n. and s. through near the center of the town, the highest peak being 1,632 ft. above tide. Huzzys Hill, s. of Rondout, is 1,000 ft. high. Wall Kil forms the w. and n. boundaries, and Swarte Kil and Black Creek flow through the s. part.⁴ The soil is a light, clay loam. Fruit growing is becoming an important branch of business. Cement is largely manufactured, and an extensive commerce is carried on by means of the river and Delaware & Hudson Canal.⁵ Port Ewen, (p. v.) upon the Hudson, s. of the mouth of Rondout Creek, is a village built up by the Penn. Coal Co. A large part of the coal brought forward by the canal is here shipped upon barges for the Northern market. Pop. 1,300.⁶ Arnoldton, (p. v.) upon Rondout Creek, in the s. part of the town, contains a church, woolen factory, cotton factory, and 150 inhabitants. South Rondout, upon Rondout Creek, in the n. part, contains an extensive cement and lime factory, a lager beer brewery, a brickyard, several boatyards, and 568 inhabitants. Dashville, upon Rondout Creek, in the s. part, contains a cement factory and 20 houses. Sleightsburgh, upon the Hudson, at the mouth of Rondout Creek, contains an extensive shipyard and 40 houses. Elmores Corners, (Esopus p. o.) upon the Hudson, contains a church and 40 houses. Amesville (p. o.) and Atkerton are hamlets. Freerville, in the n. part, contains a gristmill and 20 houses. Settlements were made by the Dutch, soon after their first occupation of the co.⁷ The first church (Ref. Prot. D.) of which there is any record was formed in 1751; Rev. G. W. Mancius was the first preacher.⁸

GARDINER⁹—was formed from Rochester, New Paltz, and Shawangunk, April 2, 1853. It is an interior town, lying s. of the center of the co. The surface is rolling in the n. and hilly in the forcement of 40 men, under Ensign Myssen, arrived, and relieved the fort. Capt. Krygier, with a cannon and a force of 210 men, pursued the Indians to their forts and destroyed their grain. In Sept. another expedition surprised an Indian fort, 38 mi. s. w. of Wiltwyck, killed the chief and 20 others, and restored 22 captives. The Indians were effectually broken and scattered, and late in the fall they sued for peace and restored all the remaining prisoners except 3.

³ The first sawmill was built in 1827, and the first tannery in 1850, at Dewittsville, by De Witt & Reynolds.

⁴ "Esopus," as known by the Dutch, included both Kingston and the country s. of the Rondout. Their descendants still designate Kingston as "Esopus," and the corporate town above named as "Klein Esopus," or Little Esopus. The word is of Indian origin. The Esopus Indians—who lived in this region when first known to the whites—were of the Algonquian stock, and were allied to the Mohican and the other river tribes.

⁶ Named from John Ewen, President of the Penn. Coal Company. The village was laid out in 1851; nearly all of the inhabitants are more or less interested in the coal trade.

⁸ There are 6 churches in town; 3 Ref. Prot. D., M. E., Prot. E., and Friends.

center and w. The Shawangunk Mts. extend along the w. border.¹ The Wall Kil flows n. e. through near the center and receives Shawangunk Kil from the s. w. The soil is principally a gravelly loam, with clay and alluvium along the streams. Lumber and leather are manufactured to some extent. Tuthilltown, (Tuthill p. o.,) upon Shawangunk Kil, near its mouth, contains 20 dwellings.² Libertyville, (p. o.,) on the n. line, and Jenkinstown are hamlets. The first settlement was made at an early period, by a colony of French Huguenots. The first church was formed in 1833; Rev. Wm. Brush was the first preacher.

HARDENBURGH³—was formed from Denning and Shandaken, April 15, 1859. It lies in the extreme w. corner of the co. Its surface is a broken and mountainous upland, the highest summits being 2,000 ft. above tide. It occupies a portion of the watershed between the Hudson and Delaware. Beaver Kil, Mill Brook, and Dry Brook take their rise in the town. Dry Brook (West Shandaken p. o.) is a hamlet.

HURLEY⁴—was granted by patent Oct. 19, 1708.⁵ A part of the Hardenburgh Patent was released by Margaret Livingston, and was annexed March 3, 1789; and a part of New Palts was taken off in 1809, a part of Esopus in 1818, a part of Olive in 1823, a part of Rosendale in 1844, and a part of Woodstock in 1853. It is an interior town, lying n. e. of the center of the co. The surface is a rolling and moderately hilly upland, the highest summits being about 700 ft. above tide. Esopus Creek flows n. e. through the s. part. Along its course are extensive fertile flats. The soil is a sandy loam, a considerable portion lying n. of the creek being unfit for cultivation. Stone quarrying is extensively carried on.⁶ Hurley, (p. v.,) on Esopus Creek, contains a church and 160 inhabitants;⁷ and West Hurley, (p. v.,) in the n. part, 2 churches and 25 dwellings. The first settlements were made by the Dutch, about 1680.⁸ This town became the refuge of the inhabitants of Kingston when the latter place was taken by the British in 1777. The first church (Ref. Prot. D.) was formed in 1800; Rev. Thos. G. Smith was the first pastor.⁹

KINGSTON—was incorp. by patent May 19, 1667, and was recognized as a town May 1, 1702.¹⁰ Fox Hall Patent was annexed March 12, 1787.¹¹ Esopus and Saugerties were taken off in 1811; a part of Esopus was annexed in 1818, and a part was annexed to Saugerties in 1832. It lies upon the Hudson, n. of the center of the co. Its surface is broken and hilly, the highest summit being Kuykuyt or Lookout Mt., about 600 ft. above tide. Esopus Creek flows n. e. through near the center, receiving Saw Kil from the w. as tributary. Rondout Creek forms the s. boundary. The soil is principally a clayey loam. A large business in coal, ice, and stone is carried on by the canal and river. Kingston, (p. v.,) upon Rondout Creek, 2 mi. w. of the Hudson, was incorp. April 6, 1805. Besides the co. buildings, it contains 8 churches, the Kingston Academy, several private seminaries,¹² 3 banks, 1 savings bank, 4 newspaper offices, and several small manufactories.¹³ It is the center of an extensive trade upon the river and canal.¹⁴ Pop. 3,971. Rondout,¹⁵ (p. v.,) upon the Hudson, at the mouth of Rondout Creek, was incorp. April 4, 1849.

⁴ Named from Geo. Lovelace's family, who were Barons Hurley in Ireland.—Benson's Memoir, p. 49. In early times it was called "Hurley Common."

⁵ The patentees of this tract were Cornelius Kool, Adrien Garrettsie, Matthew Ten Eyck, Jacobus Du Bois, Johannes Schepmoes, Roeloff Swartwout, Cornelius Lammerse, Peter Peteries, Lawrence Osterhondt, and Jannetie Newkirk. The successors of the original trustees afterward bought 300 acres for the benefit of the corporation. An act of April 4, 1806, appointed John A. De Witt, Levi Johnston, and a third person, to be named by the freeholders, to sell these lands and make a partition among the owners.

⁸ Among the early settlers were families named Crispell, Du Bois, Cole, Newkirk, Schepmoes, Ten Eyck, Wynkoop, Kimsendorff, Hoos, Constable, Louw, Delanester, and others,—mostly from Holland and Belgium. In 1719 the following persons held the office of trustees of the corporation:—Cornelius Kool, Adrien Garrettsie, Jacob Du Bois, Barnabas Swartwout, Jacob Rutse, Nicolaes Roosa, and Charles Wyle. The first inn of which there is definite knowledge was kept about 1760, by Charles De Witt, at Hurley Village. Two gristmills were erected soon after the first settlement.

⁹ There are 3 churches in town; 2 Ref. Prot. D., and M. E.

¹² The Golden Hill Seminary and the Brookside Female Seminary, two private boarding schools, are located at this place.

¹⁴ The principal trade is that of stone, obtained from the neighboring quarries.

¹⁵ Formerly named "The Strand" and "Kingston Landing." When the canal was located, it was named "Belton," from the then president of the canal company; but its present name was adopted soon after. It is the Dutch name for reedbed. It was,

It contains 8 churches, a bank, and newspaper office. The people are principally engaged in the coal trade; and a large number of steamers, barges, and sailing vessels are constantly engaged in freighting coal, stone, and cement from this place.¹ The Newark Lime and Cement Manufacturing Co. manufacture a larger amount of waterlime and cement annually than is produced at any similar establishment in the country. Pop. 5,978. Eddyville, upon Rondout Creek, $\frac{3}{4}$ mi. from its mouth, contains a cement factory² and about 50 dwellings. It is the n. terminus of the D. & H. Canal. Wilbur, (p. v.,) on the Rondout, below Eddyville, contains about 100 houses. It is the center of an immense trade in flagging stones.³ Fly Mountain is a p. o. Dutch Settlement is a hamlet in the n. part. Flatbush contains a cement factory.⁴ The Dutch built a trading and military post here as early as 1614; but every thing was swept away in the wars of 1644-45. Another settlement was commenced in 1652, and abandoned in 1655. The first permanent settlers came in soon after, but suffered much from Indian hostilities for several years.⁵ Feb. 19, 1777, the first State Convention adjourned from Fishkill to Kingston. On the 9th of September following, the State Legislature convened here, but dispersed upon the approach of a British force under Sir Henry Clinton on the 7th of Oct. At that time the public records were hastily removed to the back settlements, and the place was burned.⁶ The first church (Ref. Prot. D.) was formed May 30, 1658. There are 18 churches in town.⁷

LLOYD—was formed from New Paltz, April 15, 1845. It lies upon the Hudson, s. of the center of the co. Its surface is mostly a rolling and hilly upland, terminating in a bluff upon the river; and the average height of the surface above tide is about 200 ft. Swarte Kil flows n. along its w. boundary and Black Brook n. through the center. The soil is generally a clay and gravelly loam. The bluffs along the river are principally occupied by fine country seats. New Paltz Landing, (p. v.,) upon the river, contains 2 churches and 50 houses;⁸ Centerville (Lloyd p. o.) a church and 17 houses. Lewisburgh is a hamlet on the river, s. of New Paltz Landing. Riverside is a p. o. in the n. e. part. The date of first settlement in this town is quite ancient; but most of the details of the first years are lost. It was originally named "Paltz." The first church (M. E.) was formed in 1787. There are 3 churches in town; 2 M. E. and Presb.

MARBLETOWN—was formed by patent June 25, 1703.⁹ It was first recognized as a town March 7, 1788. A part of Olive was taken off in 1823, and a part of Rosendale in 1844. It is near the geographical center of the co. The surface is a hilly upland, broken by the valleys of the streams. Stone Ridge, near the center, the highest summit, is about 400 ft. above tide. Esopus Creek flows through the n. part, and Rondout Creek through the s. e. corner. The soil is chiefly a clay and sandy loam. A quarry of Shawangunk grit has been opened, and a sulphur spring has been found near the line of Rosendale. Stone Ridge, (p. v.,) s. e. of the center, contains 2 churches and 80 houses; Kripplebush, (p. v.,) in the s. part, a church and 12 houses. High Falls¹⁰ is a hamlet upon the canal. Marbletown is a p. o. Bruceville (High Falls p. o.) is a small canal village on the line of Rosendale, in the s. e. corner. The first church (Ref. Prot. D.) was formed in 1738.¹¹ at an early period of its growth, a mass of crooked lanes, bordered by rude shanties and inhabited by a floating population of Irish laborers. The village still contains a large proportion of Irish, and has a large and increasing number of German inhabitants. Its appearance has much improved within a few years.

² The Lawrence Cement Co. manufacture 60,000 barrels of cement annually.

³ The aggregate amount of this trade is more than $250,000 per annum.

⁴ The Kingston and Rosendale Cement Co. manufacture 70,000 barrels of cement annually.

⁵ The site of the first Dutch fort is said to be upon a plateau in the w. bounds of Rondout. The locality is still called by its Indian name, Ponkhookie, said to signify "Canoe Harbor." On the 7th of June, 1685, as most of the people were at work in the fields, the Indians made a sudden attack upon the fort, (which was carelessly left open,) killed 18, and carried away 42 as prisoners. Capt. Chambers rallied the men, drove out the Indians, and commenced a war in which the captives were mostly reclaimed and the Indians nearly exterminated. The first marriage on the church record was that of Jan Janse Timmermans and Catharine Mattyson, Oct. 3, 1660.

⁶ The British force under Gen. Vaughan, consisting of 3,000 men, was sent up the river to co-operate with Burgoyne. For 10 days after passing the barriers at the Highlands they amused themselves by burning and plundering the places along the river. They took possession of Kingston Oct. 17, and, after plundering it several hours, they burned every house but one. The houses were mostly of stone, and the woodwork was easily replaced after the retreat of the British. Several of the early meetings of the Legislature were held at this place; and the first State Constitution was formed here.

⁹ This patent was granted to Col. Henry Beekman, Capt. Thos. Gaston, and Capt. Chas. Brodhead, in trust for the inhabitants. Trustees continued to be annually elected until 1806. The records of 1703 contain the names of the following petitioners for grants of land:—Moses Du Puy, Thomas Vandemarke, Loondart Kool, Richard Wilson, Jeremy Kettell, Jr., Gysbert Roosa, Wm. Nottingham, John Cock, sen., and Capt. Richard Brodhead.

¹⁰ The cement works of Delafield & Baxter, at High Falls, employ about 60 men, and produce about 40,000 barrels annually. The falls on the Rondout are here about 60 feet high, affording a great amount of water-power.

¹¹ The census reports 6 churches in town; 3 Ref. Prot. D. and 2 M. E. Rev. Derick Romeyn and Rev. J. R. Hardenburgh (afterward Pres. of Rutgers College) were both pastors of the Ref. Prot. D. church at Stone Ridge.

and as a town, March 7, 1788. Plattekill was taken off in 1800. It lies upon the Hudson, in the s. e. corner of the co. Its surface is broken and hilly. Marlborough Mt., a rocky ridge along the w. border, is about 1,000 ft. above the river. The streams are principally small brooks flowing directly into the Hudson. The soil is a slaty loam. Milton, (p. v.) upon the Hudson, in the n. part, contains 3 churches and about 75 dwellings. Marlborough,¹ (p. v.) in the s. part, contains 2 churches, several manufactories,² and about 50 dwellings. Lattinftown is a hamlet. The date and statistics of the early settlement have not been ascertained. The first church (Presb.) was formed Jan. 1, 1764.³

NEW PALTZ⁴—was granted by patent by Gov. Andros, Sept. 29, 1677.⁵ Its bounds were enlarged April 1, 1775, and a part of Hurley was annexed Feb. 2, 1809. A part of Esopus was taken off in 1842, a part of Rosendale in 1844, Lloyd in 1845, and a part of Gardiner in 1853. It is an interior town, lying s. e. of the center of the co. Its surface is mostly a hilly upland. The Shawangunk Mts. extend along the w. border. Paltz Point, the highest summit, is 700 ft. above tide. Wall Kil flows n. e. through near the center; it is bordered by wide, fertile flats. The soil is generally a fine quality of sandy loam. Hay is one of the principal products and exports. New Paltz, (p. v.) upon Wall Kil, near the center, contains the New Paltz Academy, 2 churches, and 45 dwellings. Butterville, Ohioville, and Springtown are hamlets. The first settlements were made by a colony of French Huguenots, a few years before the date of the patent.⁶ The oldest church record is in French, and bears date of 1683. There are 3 churches in town; Ref. Prot. D., M. E., and Friends.

OLIVE—was formed from Shandaken, Marbletown, and Hurley, April 15, 1823. A part was annexed to Woodstock, and a part of Woodstock was annexed, in 1853. It is an interior town, lying a little n. w. of the center of the co. The surface is mountainous in the n. and w. and hilly in the s. and e.⁷ A considerable portion of the mountainous region is too rough for profitable cultivation. Esopus Creek flows s. e. through the town, a little n. of the center. The soil is a sandy, gravelly, and clayey loam. Lumbering and tanning⁸ are largely carried on. Shokan,⁹ (p. v.) upon the creek, n. of the center, contains 2 churches and 20 houses; Samsonville,¹⁰ (p. v.) on the s. line, a church, tannery, and 30 houses; Olive, (p. v.) in the n. e. corner, a church and 25 houses; and Olive City, (Olive Bridge p. o.), on the creek, near the center, a tannery and 20 houses. The first settlements were made in the Esopus Valley, in 1740.¹¹ The first church (Ref. Prot. D.) was formed at Shokan, in 1800.¹²

PLATTEKILL¹³—was formed from Marlborough, March 21, 1800. A part of Shawangunk was annexed April 3, 1846, but was restored March 28, 1848. It lies upon the s. border of the co., near the s. e. corner. Its surface is broken by a series of ridges of an average elevation of 300 ft. above the valleys. Its streams are small brooks and creeks. The soil is a fine quality of sandy and gravelly loam. Plattekill, (p. v.) near the s. line, contains a church and 25 dwellings; Clintondale, (p. v.) in the n. part, on the line of Lloyd, a church and 20 dwellings; Flint, (New Hurley p. o.) in the s. w. corner, on the line of Shawangunk, a church and 15 dwellings, and Medena, (p. v.) near the n. w. corner, 16 dwellings. The first settlements were made about

² About 15,000 wheelbarrows and $40,000 worth of agricultural implements are manufactured annually.

³ The census reports 9 churches in town; 2 Presb., 2 M. E., 2 Friends, Prot. M., Bap., and Christian.

⁵ The patentees of this tract were Lewis Du Bois, Christian Deyo, Abraham Hasbrouck, Andries Le Fevre, Jean Brocq, Pierre Deyo, Lawrence Beverie, Anthony Crispell, Abraham Du Bois, Hugo Frere, Isaac Du Bois, and Simon Le Fevre.

⁶ The valley of Wall Kil was discovered by one of the parties engaged in pursuing the destroyers of Wiltwyck, in the summer of 1683. The persecuted exiles from France, who first sought refuge in Germany, and thence emigrated to America, decided upon settling here. They bought the land of the Indians May 20, 1677, and soon after they settled in their new homes. In 1728, the owners of the patent intrusted its care to 12 trustees, known as "The Twelve Men." These trustees were elected annually, until the organization of the town under the State Government. The Twelve Men in 1735 were Simon Du Bois, Jacobus Hasbrouck, Johannes Freer, Jacob Hasbrouck, Jr., Abraham Donaldson, Abraham Eitner, Petrus Hasbrouck, Samuel Berke, Benjamin Deyo, Isaac Le Fevre, Matthew Le Fevre, and Abraham Elm. By act of March 31, 1785, the settlements made by the Twelve Men were confirmed. Their "Common Book" was to be retained by the Surveyor General until a convenient time, and then it was to be deposited with the co. clerk of Ulster co., to be forever preserved. Its records are deemed authentic evidence in court.

¹⁰ Named from Gen. Henry A. Samson.

¹¹ Geo. Middagh settled in 1740; Samuel Cox, in 1742; William Nottingham, in 1745,—all near Olive Bridge; John Crispell, in 1747, a little n. of Shokan; Hendrick Crispell, at Shokan, in 1760; John Coons, in 1775; and Theo. Bush, in 1755, s. of Olive City. The first inn was kept at Olive Bridge, by Conrad Du Bois; and the first store, sawmill, and gristmill, by Lemuel Winchell, at Winchells Falls. Three sons of Frederick Bush were carried off by the Indians in 1751. Two were killed, and the third returned. The early history of this town is blended with that of Marbletown.

the commencement of the last century. The first church (Ref. Prot. D.) was formed in 1770; Rev. Stephen Goetschius was the first pastor.¹

ROCHESTER²—was incorp. by patent June 25, 1703,³ and organized as a town March 7, 1788. A part of Middletown (Delaware co.) was taken off in 1789, Neversink (Sullivan co.) in 1798, Wawarsing in 1806, and a part of Gardiner in 1853. A part of Wawarsing was annexed March 21, 1823. It is an interior town, lying a little s. w. of the center of the co. Ranges of mountains extend along the e. and w. borders, and a rolling upland occupies the central portions. Rondout Creek flows n. e. through the s. part, and receives as tributaries Sander Kil, Peters Kil, and several other streams. Vernoooy Creek flows s. through the w. part. The soil upon the uplands is a gravelly loam, and in the valleys a sandy loam mixed with clay. The Delaware & Hudson Canal extends along the valley of Rondout Creek. Esopus millstones are largely quarried in this town. An extensive cave near Kyserike has been explored about half a mile. Alligerville and Port Jackson are small villages upon the canal. Accord and Kyserike are p. offices. The first settlements were made about 1700, by the Dutch.⁴ The first church (Ref. Prot. D.) was formed soon after the first settlement. There are now 2 churches in town; Ref. Prot. D. and M. E.

ROSENDALE—was formed from Marblatown, New Palts, and Hurley, April 26, 1844. It is an interior town, lying e. of the center of the co. Its surface is a rolling and broken upland, the highest summits being 200 to 500 ft. above the valleys. Rondout Creek flows n. e. through near the center, and receives Coxing Kil from the s. and Kettle Kil from the n. The Delaware & Hudson Canal extends along the valley of the Rondout. The soil is principally a sandy loam. The manufacture of cement has become one of the most important branches of business.⁵ There is an extensive paper mill in town. Rosendale, (p. v.) upon the creek and canal, contains 2 churches and 450 inhabitants; Lawrenceville, 1 mi. w., 40 houses; Bruceville, (High Falls p. o.), upon the line of Marblatown, about 30 houses. Green Locks, a canal village, on the e. border, and Whiteport, in the n. part, each contains about 20 houses. The first settlements were made by the Dutch, about 1700.⁶ The first church (Ref. Prot. D.) was formed in 1797; Rev. Thos. G. Smith was the first preacher.⁷

SAUGERTIES⁸—was formed from Kingston, April 5, 1811. An error in the boundary was corrected June 8, 1812, and a part of Kingston was annexed April 2, 1832. It lies upon the Hudson, in the n. e. corner of the co. The surface is rolling in the e. and hilly in the center and w. The hills upon the river and extending 2 mi. back are underlaid by limestone, from which quicklime and cement are manufactured. Farther w. are quarries of fine flagging stone. Platte Kil flows through the town in a tortuous course and forms the principal drainage. Kaaters Kil flows along the n. border. The soil along the river is a clayey loam, and upon the uplands a sandy and gravelly loam. Quarrying is extensively carried on.⁹ Saugerties, (p. v.) upon the Hudson, at the mouth of Esopus Kil, was incorp. April 28, 1831, as "Ulster." Its name was changed April 10, 1855. It contains the Saugerties Academy, 7 churches, a newspaper office, and several extensive manufactories. Pop. 3,334. Malden, (p. v.) upon the Hudson, 2 mi. n. of Saugerties, is the seat of an extensive stone trade. Pop. 350. Glasco, (p. v.) upon the Hudson, 3 mi. s. of Saugerties, is the seat of an extensive brick manufactory and stone trade. Pop.

¹ There are 7 churches in town; 3 M. E., Wes. Meth., Ref. Prot. D., Presb., and Friends.

² Named in honor of the Earl of Rochester. The Indian name is said to be Mom-bac-cus.

⁴ In 1703 the following persons resided in town:—Van Gerritse Decker, Lodewyck Hornbeck, Leendart Kool, sr., Anthony Hornbeck, Wm. De La Montaigne, Teunis Oosterhout, Jan Cartwright, Gysbert Van Garde, Andries Davies, and David Du Bois. Teunis Oosterhout had a "corne mill" on Mombaccus Kil, in 1743.

⁵ More than one-half of the cement made in the co. is manufactured in this town. The water-limestone quarries may be said to constitute the wealth of the town. The cement manufactories are as follows:—

| | Barrels. |
|--|----------|
| Newark and Rosendale Lime and Cement Co., at Whiteport, manufactures annually..... | 125,000 |
| Rosendale Cement Co., Rosendale, manufact's annually | 40,000 |
| Clearwater & Martin, " " " | 40,000 |
| David S. Ogden, " " " | 28,000 |
| Luther Hoffman, " " " | 8,000 |

⁷ There are 5 churches in town; 2 Ref. Prot. D., Bap., Friends, and B. C.

⁸ This name is said to be derived from the Dutch "Zaggen," a sawyer, from a sawmill built by Robert Livingston on Saw Kil. Ebeneser Wooster first used the name in 1749, when surveying the bounds of the Hardenburgh Patent.

In 1828, Henry Barclay, of N. Y., purchased the present site of the village, and the water-power. He built a dam and constructed a race which made a fall of 47 feet. He soon after built a rolling mill, paper mill, and cotton factory. The last named has since been changed to a white lead factory. The Ulster Iron Works employs 800 hands night and day, and manufactures 6,000 tons of bar and hoop iron annually. The paper mill employs 125 hands, and turns out 600 tons of paper annually. The White Lead Works employs 40 men, and manufactures 1,500 tons of paint annually. A steam mill for dressing stone turns out 1½ tons daily. The village is also largely engaged in commerce. About 30 sail-vessels are employed in exporting stone and brick. A steam ferry plies between this place and Tivoli station on the Hudson River R. R., and a daily steamer runs to New York.

about 300. West Camp, (p. v.,) upon the Hudson, in the n. part, contains a church and 15 houses. Quarryville, (p. v.,) in the n. part, and Unionville, near the center, each contains about 300 inhabitants, who are mostly engaged in getting out stone from the neighboring quarries. Glenrie, upon the s. line, Van Akens Mills, near the center, and Ashbury, are small villages. The first settlements were made by the Dutch, at an early period; but the largest immigration was that of the German Palatinates,¹ a colony of whom located at West Camp in 1710. The first church (Luth.) was organized at West Camp, in 1711. There are now 15 churches in town.²

SHANDAKEN³—was formed from Woodstock, April 9, 1804. A part was annexed from Neversink (Sullivan co.) in 1809. A part of Olive was taken off in 1823, Denning in 1849, and a part of Hardenburgh in 1859. It is the n. w. corner town of the co. Its surface is mostly a mountainous upland, broken by deep ravines. The declivities are steep and rocky, and a large share of the surface is too rough for profitable cultivation. The town is not inhabited except along the valleys, the mountain region being left to wild beasts and hunters. The soil in the valleys is a clay and sandy loam. The principal branches of business pursued are lumbering, shingle making, and tanning. Shandaken,⁴ (p. v.,) in the n. part, contains a church, a large tannery, a sawmill, gristmill, and 20 houses; Pine Hill, (p. v.,) in the n. w. part, a sawmill, gristmill, tannery, and 15 houses. Ladew's Corners, (The Corner p. o.,) in the extreme n. angle of the town; Phoenicia, (p. o.,) in the n. e. corner; and Woodland, (p. o.,) s. e. of the center, are hamlets. At each of these places, and at several other points in town, are extensive tanneries.⁵ The first settlements were made before the Revolution.⁶ There are 2 churches in town; Ref. Prot. D. and M.E.

SHAWANGUNK⁷—was formed as a precinct Dec. 17, 1743, and as a town March 7, 1788. A part of Gardiner was taken off in 1853, a part was annexed to Plattekill in 1846 and restored in 1848. It is the central town upon the s. border of the co. The surface is a hilly and broken upland. The Shawangunk Mts., extending along the w. border, are about 2,000 ft. above tide. The Shawangunk River forms about $\frac{1}{2}$ of the s. boundary, and flows n. e. through near the center, receiving Dwaars Kil⁸ from the w. Wall Kil flows n. e. through the e. part, receiving Muddy Kil from the e. and Dwaars Kil from the w. The soil is generally a gravelly loam. Shawangunk, (p. v.,) in the s. e. part, contains a gristmill, sawmill, spoke factory, and 20 houses; Ulsterville, (p. o.,) in the s. w. part, 10 houses; and Galeville Mills, (p. o.,) on Wall Kil, a church, sawmill, gristmill, and 10 houses. Dwaarskill, near the center, is a p. o. Bruynswick, (p. o.,) on the n. line, contains a church and 10 houses; Jamesburgh, (p. v.,) near the extreme w. angle, a church and 12 houses. New Hurley (p. o.) is a hamlet, on the line of Plattekill. The first settlements were made along the valley of Shawangunk River, by the Dutch, between 1680 and 1700.⁹ New Fort is a locality where two Indian battles were fought in 1663. The first church (Ref. Prot. D.) was formed Oct. 10, 1753; Rev. V. Vrooman was the first pastor.¹⁰

WAWARSING¹¹—was formed from Rochester, March 14, 1806. A part was re-annexed to Rochester in 1823. It is the s. w. corner town in the co. Its surface is mostly a mountainous upland, broken by several deep valleys. The Shawangunk Mts. extend along the e. border; and spurs of the Catskills occupy the central and w. parts. The highest peaks are 2,000 to 3,000 ft. above tide. The mountainous portions in the e. and n. w. corners are rocky and precipitous and

³ Said to signify "Rapid Water."

⁶ John Longyear, Cornelius Furlough, Jacob Brink, Coonrad Wiener, and Frederick Markle, all settled before the war. — Witherspoon taught school at The Corner at an early period.

⁹ Among the early settlers were Jacobus Bruyn, Cornelius Schoonmaker, Abram Schutt, Zachariah Hoffman, Benjamin Smedes, Jacob Decker, John Terwilliger, and Johannes Decker. Along Wall Kil, Robert Kain, Robert Graham, David Davis, Daniel Winfield, Hendrick Van Wegen, and James Penneck settled from 1710 to '30. A school was taught near Bruynswick p. o., between 1730 and '40. The first mill was probably at the junction of Wall and Dwaars Kils, 1 mi. below Shawangunk Village.

¹¹ Usually abbreviated to "War-sink." It is an Indian word, and said to signify "black bird's nest."

too rough for cultivation: The s. w. portion is a hilly upland. Rondout Creek flows in a deep valley from the w. border s. e. to near the center; thence it turns at nearly right angles and flows e. to the e. border. It receives from the s. Sandburgh Creek, a stream which drains the w. declivities of the Shawangunk Mts., Beer Creek, and the outlet of Cape Pond, which flows through near the center and empties into Sandburgh Creek. The Delaware & Hudson Canal extends along the valleys of Rondout and Sandburgh Creeks, at the w. foot of the Shawangunk Mts. The soil in the valleys is principally a sandy loam. Lumber,¹ leather, glass, earthenware, iron, and axes are extensively manufactured in different parts of the town. Ellenville, (p. v.) upon Sandburgh Creek, at the mouth of Beer Kil, was incorp. in Sept. 1858. It is an important canal village, and contains several churches, a high school,² newspaper office, and an extensive glass factory.³ Pop. 1,700. Napanock, (p. v.) upon the Rondout, above its junction with the Sandburgh, contains several churches and manufactories,⁴ and a population of about 700. Hemewack, (p. v.) a canal village, upon the line of Sullivan co., contains a church, glass factory, woolen factory, and 20 houses. Merhonkson, (p. v.) a canal village, on the line of Rochester, contains a church and 30 houses. Lackawack, (p. v.) upon the Rondout, in the w. part, contains a church, an extensive tannery, and about 20 houses. Greenfield, (p. v.) in the s. w. part contains 2 churches, a gristmill, sawmill, tannery, and about 25 houses. Wawarsing, (p. v.) in the n. e., contains a gristmill, sawmill, tannery, and about 25 houses. Port Benjamin, a canal village, south of Wawarsing, contains about 25 houses. Port Hixon, a village upon Rondout Creek and the canal, in the n. e. part, contains a church and about 25 houses. The first settlements were made about the commencement of the last century, principally by the Dutch.⁵ During the Revolution the inhabitants were killed, captured, or driven off by the Tories and Indians.⁶ The first church (Ref. Prot. D.) was formed in 1745; Rev. J. Fryenmoet was the first preacher.⁷

WOODSTOCK—was formed April 11, 1787, from the settlements of Great and Little Shandaken, which had been attached to Hurley. A part of Middletown (Delaware co.) was taken off in 1789, Windham (Greene co.) in 1798, and Shandaken in 1804. A part of Olive was taken off, and parts of Olive and Hurley were annexed, Nov. 25, 1853. It lies upon the n. border of the co., e. of the center. Its surface is mostly a mountainous upland, too rough for profitable cultivation. Several fine valleys extend through the town, separating the upland into several distinct ridges and peaks. Overlook Mt., in the n. e. corner, is 2,500 ft. above tide. Near its summit is Shues Lake, a beautiful sheet of clear water. The scenery in this vicinity is among the finest in Eastern N. Y. Saw Kil and Beaver Kil are the principal streams. The soil is a clay and slaty loam upon the uplands and a gravelly loam in the valleys. Woodstock, (p. v.) in the s. e. part, contains 2 churches, a tannery, and 20 houses; Bearsville, (p. o.) 2 mi. w. of Woodstock, is a hamlet; Lake Hill is a p. o., near the center. The first settlements were made just before the commencement of the Revolution.⁸ The first church (Luth.) was formed in 1806.⁹

³ The Ellenville Glass Co., incorp. in 1836, turns out more than $100,000 worth of demijohns, bottles, &c. annually. It employs 200 hands.

⁵ The first settlers were Abram Bevier, John Bevier, from New Paltz, in 1708, Egbert De Witt, Wm. Nottingham, and Andries De Witt. An inn was kept by Johannes Bevier before the Revolution. The first store at Wawarsing was kept by Abram Vernooij; the first gristmill was built by Cornelius Vernooij.

⁶ On the 12th of Aug. 1781, a large party of Tories and Indians, under one Caldwell, appeared in this town. They had formed the design of falling upon Napanock, but, being informed that that place was defended by a cannon, they came to Wawarsing before the inhabitants were up in the morning. At this place was a stone fort on the site of B. O. Hornbeck's house. Two men and a young woman discovered the enemy before they reached the fort, and the young woman succeeded in closing the door just in time to prevent it from being burst open by the savages. The latter, finding further attack dangerous, dispersed for burning and plundering the out settlements. Some 5 or 6 dwellings, 7 barns, and a gristmill were burned, and on the next day the enemy withdrew, laden with spoils. Several lives were lost on both sides, and much property was destroyed.—The Indians; or Narratives of Massacres and Depredations on the Frontiers of Wawarsing and Vicinity, p. 21.

⁷ The census reports 11 churches in town; 4 M. E., 3 Ref. Prot. D., 2 R. C., Bap., and Friends.

⁸ Philip Bonesteel, first innkeeper, settled in 1770; Edward Short, in 1776; Peter Short, in 1784; Jacobus Du Bois, Ephraim Van Keuren, Philip Shultis, and Henry Shultis, sen., in 1788; Jas. Hutchens, in 1790; Wm. Kiling, in 1796; Mathew Keip, in 1797; and Jacob Montrose at an early day. Robert Livingston built the first sawmill, and J. Montrose the first gristmill. These settlements were much harassed by the Indians during the war.

⁹ There are 6 churches in town; 3 M. E., Luth., Bap., and Friends.

* Formed since 1854.

WARREN COUNTY.

THIS county was formed from Washington, March 12, 1813, and was named in honor of Gen. Joseph Warren, of the Revolution. It lies s. and w. of Lake George, near the n. border of the State. It is centrally distant 65 miles from Albany, and contains 968 sq. mi. The surface is very broken and mountainous, less than one-half being susceptible of cultivation. The mountain ranges are continuations of the great mountain masses which culminate in Essex co. The characteristic features of Essex are somewhat softened and subdued in this co. The mountains are broader, less pointed, and generally less precipitous; the valleys are wider and more connected; and there are larger expanses of comparatively level land. With all these modifications, however, a great part of the surface is wild and rugged. High, serrated ridges traverse the entire extent of the co., often rising thousands of feet above the valleys. These mountains, being principally composed of primary rocks, which strongly resist the action of the elements, have a steepness of declivity and sharpness of outline in marked contrast with the gradual slopes and beautifully rounded summits of the highlands of the slate and limestone regions. The soil formed by the exceedingly slow process of disintegration is either washed directly into the valleys, or in the course of ages it collects in thin layers upon the hillsides, giving nutrition to a scanty vegetation. Three of the five mountain ranges n. of the Mohawk Valley extend through this co. The Palmertown Range enters the extreme n. part of Queensbury from Washington co. French Mt., a spur of this range, at the s. e. extremity of Lake George, rises almost precipitously from the lake and attains an elevation of 2,500 to 3,000 ft. above tide. Another spur of this range forms the Luzerne Mts., which extend through the s. part of Luzerne and the n. part of Caldwell,—a n. branch extending e. and forming the whole series of high bluffs which border the w. shore of Lake George. The second or Kayaderoseras Range extends n. e. through Stony Creek, Thurman, Chester, and Hericon, sending spurs both n. and s. Crane Mt., in the s. e. corner of Johnsbury, the highest peak of this range, has an elevation of 3,000 ft. above the surrounding valleys. The third or Schroon Range occupies the central and northerly part of Johnsbury and the n. w. angle of Chester. It consists of a great number of rocky peaks rising to a height of 2,500 to 3,000 ft. above tide; most of these have never yet been named. The rocks that compose these great mountain masses are principally gneiss. Granite, white crystalline, limestone, and serpentine are found in considerable quantities in the form of injected veins. A belt of this limestone extends along the course of the Kayaderoseras Mts., and from it a good quality of lime is manufactured. In the valleys and in the s. part of the co. are found layers of Potsdam sandstone, black marble of the Black River limestone strata, Trenton limestone, and Utica slate. Many of these rocks are useful for building materials; and the limestone furnishes an abundance of excellent lime. At the foot of a granite ledge upon Crane Mt. is found a bed of very pure porcelain clay, supposed to have been formed by the slow disintegration of the feldspathic rock. Graphite and magnetic iron ore have also been discovered, but not in sufficient quantities to be profitably worked.

The drainage of the co. is mostly through the Hudson River. This stream enters the co. from Essex, in two branches about 10 mi. apart, and these, after flowing through nearly parallel valleys for about 30 mi., unite in one stream. The e. branch is the outlet of Schroon Lake, and the w. forms the drainage of the Adirondack Mts.¹ This river has a very rapid course; and upon it are several rapids and falls, two of which are worthy of especial note.² Lake George³ is river flows over a shelving rock with a total descent of 50 ft. The fall is broken into three channels by natural piers of black limestone standing upon the brow of the precipice over which the water flows.

² The High Falls are situated just below the great easterly bend of the river in the s. w. corner of Luzerne. The water flows in a series of rapids for three-fourths of a mi. over a declining rocky bottom, and is then compressed into a narrow gorge for 80 rods, at the bottom of which it shoots down a nearly perpendicular descent of 60 ft. The gneiss ledge over which it falls is convex in form, and the water is broken into perfect sheets of snow-white foam. A few rods above the last leap of the water, and where it is rushing with the greatest velocity, the river is spanned by a single plank 13 ft. in length. At Glens Falls the

³ Called by the Indians Can-ta-de-ri-ot, the tail of the lake. The name "Horicon" has been applied by some modern writers to Lake George, and it is said to be an Indian word meaning "The Lake of Silver Water." However poetic and appropriate this designation may appear, or however euphonious it may sound, it may be questioned whether a term suggested by fancy alone, and never used by the aborigines, will ever find place among the geographical names of the State as one of Indian origin.

situated upon the n. border, and receives the drainage of the n. part of the co. It is 36 mi. long and 1 to 3 mi. wide.¹

The soil of this co. is mostly a thin, sandy loam. The level lands n. of Glens Falls are very sandy, and are known as "pine plains." The declivities of the mountains have a very thin soil, and usually a scanty vegetation. In the valleys is some clay mixed with the sand and disintegrated primitive rocks, forming a deep and excellent soil. Farming and the manufacture of lumber and leather form the leading pursuits of the people. Farming is mostly confined to stock raising and dairying. Immense quantities of logs are floated down the Hudson and manufactured into lumber, shingles, hoops, staves, and heading, at Glens Falls and other places. Black marble is quarried at Glens Falls, and feldspar and kaolin for the manufacture of porcelain, graphite and serpentine are also found in different places. Peat exists in abundance; but it has never been extensively used.

Caldwell, at the head of Lake George, is the county seat.² The courthouse was built in 1816-17, with the jail in the basement. The poorhouse is located on a farm of 200 acres in Warrensburgh.³

The works of internal improvement are the Glens Falls Navigable Feeder, 7 mi. in length, feeding the summit level of the Champlain Canal, and the improvement in the log navigation of the Hudson. There is no r. r. in the co.⁴ Three newspapers are now published in the co.⁵

This co. was the scene of some of the sanguinary battles between the French and English long anterior to its settlement. In 1755, a provincial army of 5,000 men, under Sir. Wm. Johnson, designed to act against the French posts on Lake Champlain, assembled at Albany early in June, and were there joined by a large number of Mohawks under King Hendrick. Forts Lyman (afterward Fort Edward) and Miller were built, and a road was opened to Lake George. The news of Braddock's defeat was received before this army left Albany. The expedition set out on the 8th of Aug., by way of Lake George, for Ticonderoga, with the design of erecting a fort there. Learning that the French had anticipated them and had already fortified Ticonderoga, they encamped near the head of Lake George. About the 1st of Sept., Baron Dieskau, the French commander, with a force of 200 grenadiers, 800 Canadian militia, and 300 Indians, passed up South Bay and across the rocky peninsula, with a view of falling upon the rear of the English and of cutting off their supplies from Fort Lyman. On the 8th, a force of 1000 troops under Col. Ephraim Williams, and of 200 Indians under King Hendrick, were sent out to meet them; but, falling into an ambuscade, the greater part of the troops and the two commanders were killed. The survivors fled, and were immediately followed by the French. The firing alarmed the camp, and a breastwork of logs was immediately thrown up, and 300 men, under Col. Cole, were despatched to cover the retreat of the flying fugitives of the first party. Flushed with victory, the French assailed the English camp with great fury, and a sanguinary conflict ensued, which lasted is 54, who are supported at a weekly expense of 90 cts. each.

¹ This lake has long been celebrated for its wild and picturesque beauty. It is almost completely surrounded by precipitous and rocky mountains, and is studded with little, green islands. Its winding course is marked by a panorama of beautiful and distinct views. At some points high rocky bluffs rise precipitously from the very edge of the water, and at others a little basin seems scooped out among the hills. Most of the mountain declivities are covered with verdure; but a few of them are masses of naked rocks. This whole region is full of historic interest. Each mountain, precipice, and cape has its own tales and reminiscences of the olden time. Some of the fiercest conflicts of the last long wars between the French and English colonists took place upon its shores, and the pure and peaceful waters of this beautiful lake were often enangined with the blood of fierce combatants. Again during the Revolution war held high carnival here: but since that period its visitors have been principally the lovers of the wild and beautiful in nature. Sabbath-Day Point and Lord Howes Point are two low beaches upon the w. shore, near the foot of the lake; and Rogers Slide is a precipice upon the w. shore, 200 feet high, rising at an angle of about 25 degrees. Tongue Mt., forming a promontory upon the w. shore, Anthony's Nose, upon the n. shore, and French Mt., near the head of the lake, have each an elevation of more than 2,000 feet.

⁵ The Warren Co. Patriot, commenced at Glens Falls about 1818 by John Cunningham, was the first paper in the co. A newspaper was begun at Caldwell in 1817 or '18 by Timothy Haskins, which in four or five years was changed to The Guardian. It was a few years after sold to — Broadwell, its name again changed, and in two years after it was removed to Glens Falls.

The Glens Falls Observer was started in 1838 by E. G. Sidney. In about two years it passed into the hands of Abiel Smith, who changed its name to

The Glens Falls Republican, and afterward to The Warren Co. Messenger. In 1835 it was again changed to The Warren Co. Messenger and Glens Falls Advertiser, by which name it was continued until 1840, when it appeared as The Glens Falls Gazette, and in two years after as The Glens Falls Clarion. In 1850 it passed into the hands of Zabina Ellis, its present publisher, by whom its name was changed to

The Glens Falls Free Press.

The Glens Falls Spectator was published in 1840 by D. Ellis. The Warren Co. Whig was started by James A. Kellogg, and continued one year.

The Glens Falls Messenger was established by A. D. Milne, and is still continued.

The Glens Falls Republican was established in 1843 by M. & T. J. Strong, who conducted it until 1851. It has passed through several hands, and is now published by H. M. Harris.

The Rockable and Temperance Eagle, semi-mo., was commenced in 1845 by M. & T. J. Strong, and continued several months.

The Star of Destiny was published in 1855 by A. D. Milne.

from 12 m. to 4 p.m. and resulted in the total defeat of the French.¹ Col. Blanchard, who commanded at Fort Lyman, learning the result of the first engagement in the morning, sent a party of about 300 N. H. and N. Y. militia to the scene of the conflict. This party surprised the French camp, and, after dispersing the troops left to guard it, they hastened on to the English camp and arrived in season to assist materially in gaining the victory. This engagement was the only one fought during the campaign of 1755 that reflected the slightest credit upon the British army.

The remainder of the season was spent in erecting Fort Wm. Henry,² on the site of the English camp. A projected attack upon Ticonderoga during the winter was prevented by the uncommon severity of the season. In the summer of 1756 a provincial force of 6,000 men assembled here, but too late to effect their purpose.³ On the 17th of March, (St. Patrick's day,) 1757, the French, under Longee, a famous partisan officer, attempted to surprise the fort, but were successful only in burning a few buildings and several vessels on the lake.⁴ Soon after, a party of 400 English, under Col. Parker, marched to attack Ticonderoga; but, falling into an ambuscade, only 72 escaped. Early in the summer of 1757, Montcalm, the French commander, made extensive preparations to capture Fort Wm. Henry. On the last day of July, Maj. Putnam discovered a large body of the enemy encamped on an island about 18 mi. down the lake. Gen. Webb, who had immediate command, upon being apprised of the matter, enjoined Putnam to keep the intelligence secret and to prepare to escort him (Webb) back to Fort Edward, leaving Col. Munro in command at Fort Wm. Henry. The enemy soon landed in force and proceeded to invest the fort. The garrison consisted of 2,500 men, and the attacking force amounted to nearly 9,000. Gen. Webb had a force of 4,000 regulars at Fort Edward, only 9 mi. distant, and the militia were rapidly collecting to afford further aid. Col. Munro sent pressing and repeated messages for relief; but Gen. Webb paid no attention to the request, and appeared totally indifferent to every thing but his own personal safety. At length, upon the ninth day of the siege, he allowed Gen. Johnson to march with a body of volunteers to the relief of the garrison; but before the party had proceeded 3 mi. they were recalled, and Gen. Webb sent a letter to Col. Munro advising him to surrender on the best terms he could obtain. This letter was intercepted and given to Col. Munro by Montcalm in person. Thus cut off from hope, and assured by Montcalm that the garrison should march out with the honors of war, with their arms, and one of the four cacons of the fort, with their baggage and baggage wagons, and an escort of 500 men to Fort Edward, he surrendered. The Indians soon began to pillage the baggage, and, not being checked, fell upon the sick and wounded, whom they killed and scalped. Excited by carnage, they next surrounded and attacked the disarmed and defenseless troops; and, although Montcalm was implored to furnish a guard, as promised, the massacre was allowed to proceed until a large number were killed or hurried away prisoners for more deliberate torture.⁵

In the summer of 1758 an army of 7,000 regulars and 10,000 provincials, under Gen. Aber-

² Named in honor of the Duke of Cumberland, brother of the heir apparent, afterward George III.

³ Several incidents worthy of note occurred during this expedition. At Halfway Brook a party of teamsters were surprised and captured by 600 of the enemy, who immediately retreated down South Bay. A hundred men, under Capt. Israel Putnam and Robert Rogers, set out from Fort Wm. Henry, crossed over to Lake Champlain, and from an ambuscade poured a destructive fire upon the enemy as they passed. A number were killed, and the English immediately retreated across to Lake George. The next morning they embarked on the lake, and at Sabbath-Day Point they were met by a force of French and Indians three times their own number. The English dashed forward to the attack; and, by reserving their fire until they came into close quarters, they threw the enemy into confusion, and succeeded in escaping, with the loss of one killed and two wounded. In the winter of 1756-57, Maj. Rogers, with 74 men, went down Lake George, and crossed over to Lake Champlain, where he captured a small party of French. On his return he was met on the summit of the hill by a party of 200 French; and a desperate conflict ensued. Maj. Rogers was wounded, and the command devolved upon Capt. Stark, (afterward Gen. Stark of the Revolution.) The conflict continued until nightfall, when the French retreated, leaving half of their number dead upon the field. Of the rangers, 48 remained un wounded; and the company pushed forward through deep snows and reached the lake in the morning. They were now quite exhausted; and Stark, with two others, pushed on to Fort Wm. Henry, arriving in the evening. He secured sleds and returned to his suffering comrades, whom he reached the next morning. The party finally reached the fort, after extreme suffering.—Rogers's Jour., p. 26.

crombie, proceeded against Ticonderoga by way of Lake George. On the 5th of July the army embarked on board of 900 bateaux and 135 boats, and passed down the lake with all the pomp and pageantry of war; and four days after they returned, shattered and broken, with a loss of nearly 2,000 in killed and wounded. Such of the latter as admitted of removal were sent to Fort Edward; and the main army lay inactive in camp at the head of the lake during the remainder of the season. In June, 1759, Maj. Gen. Amherst, with an army of 12,000 men, advanced to Lake George, and, while waiting to complete his arrangements, he commenced building Fort George, about half a mile π from Fort Wm. Henry.¹ As Gen. Amherst advanced to Ticonderoga, the French withdrew to Crown Point, and soon after to the Isle Aux-Noix. Quebec fell soon after, and the conquest of Canada was completed the following year, rendering the vast military works at Fort George, Ticonderoga, and Crown Point of no further utility, and allowing the hardy pioneers of civilization to advance and occupy the fertile valleys which as provincial soldiers they had previously traversed.

BOLTON—was formed from Thurman, March 25, 1799. Hague was taken off in 1807, a part of Caldwell in 1810, and a part of Horicon in 1838. It lies π . of the center of the co., between Schroon River and Lake George. The π . shore of the lake constitutes the π . line, so that more than one-half of the lake is within the limits of this town. The surface is principally occupied by the high mountainous ridges which lie between the lake and Hudson River. There are 3 principal peaks belonging to this range within the limits of the town,—Tongue Mt.,² on the peninsula between the lake and North West Bay, 2,000 ft. above tide; Pole Hill, in the π . part, 2,500 ft. high; and Cat Head, in the center, 1,500 to 1,800 ft. above tide. The mountains generally rise precipitously from the lake; but toward the w. the surface assumes the character of a high, rolling upland. High up among the hills are numerous little crystal lakes, the principal of which are Trout Lake, Marsh Pond, and Edgecomb Pond. Trout Lake is 1,000 ft. above Lake George. Not more than one-half of the town is susceptible of cultivation. The soil is a thin, sandy loam.³ Bolton, (p. o.,) situated on Lake George, opposite Green Island,⁴ is a small village. The settlement of the town was commenced in 1792, principally by New England people.⁵ The improvements are confined mostly to the vicinity of Lake George. The first church (Presb.) was formed in 1804; the Rev. — Armstrong was the first settled minister. There are 2 churches in town; Bap. and M. E.

CALDWELL—(Col'-well) was formed from Queensbury, Bolton, and Thurman, March 2, 1810. It lies around the s. extremity of Lake George. A range of mountains occupies the extreme w. part. The central portion is a high, hilly region, descending abruptly to the lake. Prospect Hill, w. of the s. extremity of the lake, has an elevation of 2,000 ft. above tide. South of this hill a low valley extends s. w., through Caldwell and Luzerne, to the valley of the Hudson near the mouth of Sacandaga River. This depression seems to be a continuation of the valley in which Lake George is situated, and shows that a change of a few feet in the elevation would cause the waters of the lake to flow into the Hudson. In this valley is a chain of small lakes. A narrow strip of low land lies immediately upon the border of the lake. The soil is a sandy loam among the hills, and a dark, rich, sandy and clayey loam on the lowlands. Caldwell, (p. v.,) the county seat, is situated near the head of Lake George. It contains 2 churches, several hotels, and about 50 dwellings. This place is the annual resort of great numbers of tourists and pleasure seekers, who are attracted hither by the beautiful scenery of the lake and the surrounding region. During the summer the steamer Minnehaha plies daily between Caldwell and the foot of the lake. Fort William Henry and Fort George were situated near Caldwell, at the head of Lake George and Bloody Pond, in the s. part. Settlement commenced at the head of Lake George, soon after the conquest of Canada; but its progress was arrested by the Revolution. Soon after the close of the war, settlement was recommenced.⁶ There are 2 churches in town; Presb. and Union.

⁴ During the Revolution this island was fortified, and Gen. Burgoyne, when he advanced to the Hudson, left upon it a large amount of public property, guarded by two companies of the 47th regiment, commanded by Capt. Aubrey. After the partial success which attended the attempt upon Ticonderoga in 1777, Cois. Warren and Brown, on the 24th of Sept., made an attack upon this place with the gunboats they had captured. They were repulsed with loss, and retreated to the π . shore. The enemy being in pursuit, they burned their boats, crossed the mountains to Lake Champlain, and returned to Gen. Lincoln's camp at Pawlet, Vt.

⁵ Among the first settlers were James Ware, Joseph Tuttle, Rufus Randall, Benj. Pierce, David and Keuben Smith, Eleazar Goodman, Daniel Nims, Frederick Miller, — Boyd, — Wright, and Thomas McJee. The first birth was that of Lydia Ware; and the first death, that of Mrs. John Pierce. Sally Boyd taught the first school.

⁶ Named from Gen. James Caldwell, a merchant of Albany, who became a patentee of 1,500 acres, in 4 parcels by grants dated Sept. 18-20, 1787.

⁷ Among the early settlers were Daniel Shaw, Benoni Burtch,

CHESTER—was formed from Thurman, March 25, 1799. It lies upon the n. border of the co., between Hudson and Schroon Rivers. The surface is broken. The Kayaderosseras Mts. extend through the s. part, and the Schroon Range occupies the n.w. portion. A continuation of the valley of Schroon Lake, extending in a s.w. direction to the w. branch of the Hudson and separating the mountain ranges, contains a chain of small lakes. Loon Lake is the principal one in this valley; and s. of it, among the hills, is another sheet of water, called Friends Lake. Schroon Lake is about 1,000 feet above tide, and the hills that surround it are 500 to 800 feet above its surface. The soil is generally light and sandy. A cave in Mt. Moxon is quite a curiosity, and has some local notoriety. Near the n. border of the town, upon Stone Bridge Creek, is a natural bridge.¹ Feldspar has been quarried to a considerable extent and exported for the manufacture of porcelain. Chestertown (p.v.) contains the Chester Academy and 246 inhabitants; and Pottersville (p.v.) 126. The settlement of this town commenced toward the close of the last century.² The first church (Bap.) was organized in 1796; and the Rev. Jehiel Fox was the first pastor. There are now 6 churches in town.³

HAGUE—was formed from Bolton, Feb. 28, 1807, as "Rochester." Its name was changed April 6, 1808, and a part of Horicon was taken off in 1838. It lies upon the shore of Lake George, in the n.e. corner of the co. The surface is very mountainous, not above one-fourth being susceptible of cultivation. The mountains along the lake generally descend abruptly to the very edge of the water. The narrow valleys of Trout and North West Bay Brooks form the line of separation between the two mountain ranges. Ash Grove Hill, upon the w. border, is 2,000 to 2,500 feet above tide; and upon the shore of the lake, in the n.e. corner, is another mountain peak of nearly the same elevation. Rogers Rock is on the lake shore, in the n.e. corner. It rises from the water's edge at an angle of about 45° and attains an elevation of 300 feet.⁴ Sabbath-Day Point is a headland projecting into the lake near the s. border.⁵ The soil is a light, sandy loam. Iron ore has been found near Seventh Pond; and mines have been worked to some extent, but they are now abandoned. The beauty of the lake and the solitary grandeur of the mountain scenery of this town render it a favorite resort for hunting and fishing parties and the lovers of the beautiful in nature.⁶ Hague, (p.o.) on McDonalds Bay, and Wardboro (p.o.) are hamlets. The principal improvements are along the lake. The first settlement was made about 1796.⁷ There is a union church in the town.

HORICON—was formed from Bolton and Hague, March 29, 1838. It lies upon the n. border of the co., n. of Schroon Lake. The greater part of its surface is occupied by the two branches of the Kayaderosseras Mts., which are here divided by the valley of Brant Lake. In the n. and s. these ranges rise, in numerous sharp, rocky peaks, 1,600 to 2,000 feet above tide; but in the s. and w. they sink into a hilly plateau region. About one-half of the surface is arable. Among the hills are great numbers of small lakes, laving with their crystal waters the base of the huge, rocky masses which tower above them. Brant Lake, the principal of them, is 10 mi. long and is everywhere surrounded by precipitous hills. The soil is a sandy loam. Horicon, (p.v.) situated on Schroon River, in the s.w. part of the town, contains about 20 houses; and Mill Brook, (p.v.) on Schroon Lake, 15 houses. Aaron Harris, Joseph Gregory, Bishop Carpenter, and Timothy Bennett were some of the earliest settlers.⁸ The first church (Wes. Meth.) was formed in 1820; Nathaniel Streeter was the first minister. There are 4 churches in town; 2 Bap., M. E., and Wes. Meth.

JOHNSBURGH—was formed from Thurman, April 6, 1805. It lies upon the bank of the — Tierce, Andrew Edmonds, Reed Wilbur, Obadiah Hunt, Thaddeus Bradley, Elias Prosser, Nathan Burdick, Geo. Van Deusen, — Butler, and Christopher Potter. The first inn and gristmill were erected by Gen. Caldwell.

² The first settlers were Titus, Jabes, Levi, Gideon, Enos, Jonathan, Daniel, and Caleb Mead, — Beman, Isaac Bennett, John Haskins, Obadiah and Benj. Knapp, Noel Wightman, James Storback, — Steward, and D. and J. Funderdon. The first birth was that of a son of Caleb Mead; and the first death, that of Martin Wightman.

⁷ Among the first settlers were Abel Rising, Abner Briggs, Elijah Bailey, Samuel Cook, Ellis Denton, Samuel Patchin, John Holman, Isaac and Uriah Balcom, and Uri Waite.

⁸ Howard Waters, Nathan, Benj., and James Hayes, Benj. Hayes 2d, John Robbins, James Frasier, and Benj. Wright were also early settlers. Hannah Reynolds taught the first school.

⁹ Named from John Thurman, an early settler.

Hudson, and is the n. w. corner town of the co. Its surface is very broken and mountainous. The Schroom Range occupies the n. and central parts; and a spur of the Kayaderoseras Range extends into the s. Crane Mt.,¹ the highest peak of the latter, is about 3,500 feet above tide. The greater part of the town is too rough and broken for cultivation. The arable land is confined to the narrow valleys. The soil is a sandy and gravelly loam. Kaolin, serpentine iron ore, and other minerals are found. There are 3 large tanneries in town. Johnsburgh, (p. v.), on Mill Creek, contains 20 houses; Nobles Corners, on the same stream, 25; North Creek, (p. v.), on the Hudson, at the mouth of North Creek, 15; and The Glen, (p. o.), on the Hudson, in the s. e. corner of the town, 7. The first settlement was made soon after the close of the Revolutionary War, by John Thurman, the proprietor of extensive tracts in this part of the State.² The first church (Bap.) was organized in 1793. There are 4 churches in town.³

LUZERNE—was formed from Queensbury, April 10, 1792, as "Fairfield." Its name was changed April 6, 1808. A strip of territory 1 mi. wide was set off to Queensbury, March 30, 1802. It lies upon the e. bank of Hudson River, in the s. extremity of the co. Two branches of the Luzerne Mts. extend through the town, respectively occupying the n. and s. portions. They are separated by the valley which extends s. w. from the s. end of Lake George. A chain of small lakes lies along its course; and in them two streams take rise, one of which flows to Lake George and the other to the Hudson.⁴ About one-half of the surface bordering upon the river is a high, hilly region, but arable. Kettle Bottom, in the s. part, and several peaks of the ridge which extends along the e. border, are 2,000 to 2,500 feet above tide. The soil is a light, sandy loam. Luzerne (p. v.) is situated on the Hudson, above its confluence with Sacandaga River. Pop. 280. The first settlements were made about 1770, along the Hudson. Most of the early settlers occupied lands leased from Ebenezer Jessup, the patentee. There are 3 churches in town.⁵

QUEENSBURY—was incorporated by patent⁶ as a township, May 20, 1762, and recognized as a town, March 13, 1786. Luzerne was taken off in 1792, and a part of Caldwell in 1810. A strip of territory 1 mi. wide was taken from Luzerne and added to this town in 1802. It lies between Lake George and the Hudson, and is the s. e. corner town of the co. The w. part is occupied by the Luzerne Mts., and the extreme n. part by French Mt., a high, rocky bluff which rises precipitously from the surface of Lake George to a height of 2,500 to 3,000 feet above tide. The central and s. parts are rolling, gradually declining toward the s. The soil is a light, sandy loam in the interior, and a deep, tough clay upon the river. The fall in the Hudson at Glens Falls is about 50 feet high, and affords valuable mill privileges. Below the fall is a small island, through which is a cave extending from one channel to the other. The manufacture of lumber is largely carried on.⁷ Glens Falls,⁸ (p. v.), incorp. April 12, 1839, is situated on the Hudson, in the s. part. It contains 9 churches, the Glens Falls Academy, 3 newspaper offices, 2 banks, and several manufactories.⁹ Pop. 3,420. West Glens Falls, on the Hudson, contains 25 houses; and Queensbury, (p. v.), in the e. part 20. French Mountain (p. o.) is a hamlet. The summit level of the Champlain Canal is fed through the Glens Falls navigable feeder with water taken from the Hudson above the falls. The settlement was commenced in 1766; but its progress was very slow until after the close of the Revolution.¹⁰ The first house of worship was erected by the Society of Friends, in 1786. There are now 11 churches in town.¹¹

STONY CREEK—was formed from "Athol,"¹² Nov. 3, 1852. It lies upon the w. bank of Hudson River, and is the s. w. corner town of the co. Nearly the whole town is still a wilderness. Through the center of the town extend mountain ranges, several peaks of which attain an elevation of more than 2,000 feet. The valleys of e. and w. Stony Creeks are narrow ravines, forming a natural pass between the valleys of the Hudson and Sacandaga. The soil is a light, sandy loam.

² Among the early settlers were Robt. Waddell, Geo. Hodgson, John Wilkinson, Reuben and Calvin Washburn, and Samuel Somerville. The first birth was that of Polly Waddell; the first marriage, that of Calvin Washburn and Betsey Waddell; and the first death, that of Enos Grover. The first mills were erected in 1766 or '70, by Mr. Thurman. He opened a store and built a distillery; and in 1766 he erected a woollen factory. This was soon after changed to a cotton factory; and as early as 1797 he erected calico printing works, the first, it is believed, in America.

³ Bap., M. E., Free Will Bap., and Wes. Meth.

⁵ Bap., M. E., and Union.

⁶ This patent embraced 2,300 acres.

⁷ An immense number of logs is annually floated down from the pine forests of the Upper Hudson to Glens Falls and Fort Edward. At one mill upon the State dam at the former place are 12 gates and 350 saws.

⁹ This place contains 4 sawmills, a flouring mill, and an establishment for sawing marble.

Creek Center (p. o.) and Stony Creek, (p. o.), both upon Stony Creek, are hamlets. The first settlement was made about 1795.¹ The first preacher was Jonathan Paul, a Christian Indian. The first church (Presb.) was formed about 1800.²

THURMAN³—was formed April 10, 1792. Bolton and Chester were taken off in 1799, Johnsbury in 1805, and a part of Caldwell in 1810. The town was divided into "Athol" and Warrensburgh Feb. 12, 1813; and "Athol" was divided into Thurman and Stony Creek, Nov. 3, 1852. It lies upon the w. bank of the Hudson, s. w. of the center of the co. The w. part is a high, broken upland, almost unknown except to hunters. The e. portion, along the Hudson, is a hilly plateau, with several peaks rising 1,000 feet above the valley. Among the hills are numerous small lakes. The soil is a light, sandy loam. Athol (p. o.) and Thurman, (p. o.), both in the e. part, are hamlets. Settlement was commenced in the latter part of the last century.⁴ A Bap. church was first formed; Elder Jehiel Fox was the first preacher. There are now 4 churches in town.⁵

WARRENSBURGH—was formed from Thurman, Feb. 12, 1813. It lies between the two branches of the Hudson, near the center of the co., and upon the ridges s. of the junction. The peninsular portion is a rolling plateau 600 to 1,000 feet above the river. The s. w. part is occupied by an immense mountain mass with several summits 2,400 to 3,000 feet above tide. Nearly two-thirds of the land in town is arable. The soil is a light, sandy loam among the hills, and upon the river it is nearly the same, mixed with some clay. Warrensburgh (p. v.) is on Schroon River, 3 mi. from its junction with the Hudson. Pop. 700. Across the Hudson, below the mouth of Schroon River, is a long bridge connecting this town with Thurman. The first settlement was made a few years after the close of the Revolution.⁶ A M. E. church, the first in town, was organized in 1796; and the Rev. Henry Ryan was the first minister. There are 4 churches in town.⁷

WASHINGTON COUNTY.

THIS county¹ was formed from Albany as "Charlotte County,"² March 12, 1772. Its name was changed April 2, 1784; Clinton co. was taken off in 1788; the n. portion was ceded to Vermont in 1790;³ a strip along its s. border was annexed from Albany Feb. 7, 1791; and Warren co. was taken off in 1813. It lies on the n. border of the State, is centrally distant from Albany 45 miles, and contains an area of 850 sq. mi. The surface consists principally of a series of ridges extending n. e. and s. w., and the valleys between them. The remarkable depression which extends southerly from the s. extremity of Lake Champlain divides these ridges into two distinct groups,—the n. belonging to the Palmertown Mt. Range, and the s. constituting one of the connecting links between the highlands of Southern New York and those of Western Vermont. The s. group is subdivided into three principal ranges, which are all related and of the same general character. The most southerly of these ranges is a northerly continuation of the Taghkanick Range of Rensselaer co., occupying the greater part of White Creek and the n. part of Jackson. The declivities are usually steep, and the summits broad, broken, and rocky. The second—sometimes described as a continuation of the Petersburg Mts. of Rensselaer—constitutes the highlands of Cambridge, Jackson, Salem, and the n. part of Hebron and Granville. In Salem it spreads out like a fan between the streams. The third comprises the highlands of Easton, Greenwich, Argyle, Hartford, Granville, Hampton, and the n. part of Whitehall. It might with propriety be called Cossayuna Range, from the principal lake which it incloses. The declivities of these ranges are usually steep, and, except where broken by ledges, are arable to their summits. They gradually rise toward the n., reaching their culminating point near the n. border of the co. The highest summits are 1000 to 1200 feet above tide. These three ranges belong to one general group and are of the same geological formation. They are composed of slate rock, ledges of which crop out along their whole extent. Many of these ledges in Granville and Hebron are quarried, and furnish stone much valued for roofing, building, and ornamental purposes. Among the slate quarries are found numerous veins of injected quartz, intersecting the slate strata in every direction, varying from the thickness of paper to several inches. They often present cavities and surfaces beautifully studded with transparent crystals of quartz. The edges of the slate are sometimes bent and distorted by the quartz dikes, showing the extreme heat and great force of the injected veins. The soil in this system of highlands consists chiefly of disintegrated slate, and is very fertile.

The second group of highlands, belonging to the Palmertown Mt. Range, occupy the towns of Fort Ann, Dresden, Putnam, and the n. part of Whitehall. They belong to the primary formation, their rocks consisting principally of gneiss, granite, sandstone, and impure limestone. Their sides are very precipitous and broken, and their summits are wild irregular masses of naked, barren rocks. The valleys between them are narrow and rocky, often bordered by precipices many hundred feet in height. The soil is cold and unproductive, like that of all regions of a similar geological formation. A narrow valley extending s. w. from the s. extremity of South Bay divides the group into two ranges. Saddle Mt., overlooking South Bay and 1000 ft. above tide, is the highest peak in the s. range; and Black Mt., 2878 ft. above tide, is the highest peak in the n. range. Diameter Rock, on the n. shore of South Bay, is 1300 ft. above tide.⁴

sioners were Smith Thompson, Simeon De Witt, and Geo. Tibbitts. See Notes to N. Y. Session Laws, April 15, 1814.

The Hudson River forms the s. half of the w. border of the co. A rich intervale, from half a mi. to a mi. in width, bordered by a series of clay bluffs 20 to 60 ft. high, extends along its course. Most of the other streams of the co. are tributaries of the Hudson, and among them are the Hoosick, Batten Kil, Moes and Fort Edward Creeks, and many smaller streams. Wood Creek is a deep, sluggish stream, flowing into Lake Champlain and draining the valley, which here extends from the lake to the Hudson. The soil along the valley is mostly a hard, stiff clay. The Mowee, or Pawlet, and the Poultney Rivers, from Vt., are tributaries of Wood-Creek. In the co. are several other streams important as mill streams.³ Lake Champlain s. of Ticonderoga is scarcely more than a ship canal through a reedy marsh bordered by rocky cliffs. Lake George lies along the n. w. border of the co. Among the hills in the interior are several small lakes, the principal of which is Cossayuna Lake, in Argyle.³

The various branches of agriculture form the leading pursuits of the people. The principal grains raised are rye, spring wheat, oats, buckwheat, and corn. Peas, beans, flax, and potatoes are also extensively cultivated. Stock raising, dairying, and wool growing are also extensively pursued. The manufactures of the co. are principally along the Hudson and Batten Kil.

The county offices are divided among several towns. The courts are held alternately at Salem and Sandy Hill, and the clerk's office and co. poorhouse are located at Argyle.⁴ The jail is connected with the courthouse at Salem, and all prisoners sentenced for more than two months are sent to the penitentiary at Albany.

The principal public works in the co. are the Champlain Canal,⁵ extending in and along Wood Creek and the Hudson to Greenwich; the Saratoga & Whitehall R. R., extending through Fort Edward, Kingsbury, Fort Ann, and Whitehall, with a branch to Lake Station and another to Castleton, Vt.; and the Rutland & Washington R. R., extending from Eagle Bridge, through White Creek, Jackson, and Salem, to the State line.

The first newspaper in this co. was established at Salem, in 1788.⁶

Upon the advent of the whites, few Indians were found within the limits of this co.; but Indian ² At Sandy Hill a dam 8 to 10 ft. high and 1200 ft. long crosses the Hudson, the water setting back to the foot of the rapids below Glens Falls. At Fort Edward a dam 27 ft. high and 900 feet long was built by the State in 1821, as a feeder to the canal, but, the Glens Falls feeder superseding it, it was sold to a company in 1840 and cut down to 16 ft. The Saratoga Dam (where the Champlain Canal crosses the Hudson into Saratoga co.) is 1390 feet long. Batten Kil is crossed by 9 dams. White Creek furnishes a large number of mill sites, once improved, but now mostly abandoned. Black Creek has several valuable and improved mill sites. Mowee or Pawlet River has also several valuable mill sites.

⁶ The Times. It was published by Mr. Gerrish; and in 1798 it was changed to

The Washington Patriot. From 1810 to 1818 it bore the name of The Northern Post, and was published successively by Dodd & Rumsey and Dodd & Stevenson. About 1827 it appeared as

The Co. Post and North Star; and in 1840 as The Washington Co. Post. It is now published at North White Creek by E. K. Crocker.

The Washington Register was started at Salem in 1802 by John F. Reynolds, and continued several years.

The Salem Messenger was commenced about 1819.

The Salem Press was issued May 21, 1850, by W. B. Hartman, and is still continued.

The Whitehall Empirion was published from 1822 until about 1833.

The Whitehall Republican was published in 1832 by J. E. Averb.

The Whitehall Chronicle was started in June, 1854, and is now published by H. D. Morris.

The Whitehall Democrat was founded in 1845, and is now published by H. Dudley and J. B. Wilkins.

The Whitehall Telegraph (tri-w.) was commenced in 1845, and continued a short time.

The Whitehall was published by W. S. Southwick in 1849.

The American Sentinel was established in June, 1855, by John E. Watkins.

The Sandy Hill Herald was started in 1834, and is now published by E. D. Baker.

The Sun was published at Sandy Hill in 1826 by A. Enness.

The Free Press was issued by the same publisher in 1822.

The Independent Politician was published at Sandy Hill in 1822 by C. Y. Haynes & Co.

The Temperance Advocate was published at Sandy Hill the same year by E. P. Hines.

The Anti Masonic Champion was started at Union Village in 1830 by L. Dewey, and published by him until 1835, when Wells & Lansing became the proprietors.

The Banner was published at Union Village in 1836 by Wells & Lansing.

The Union Village Courier was published in 1836 by Ormsby & Holmes.

The Union Village Democrat was started in 1839 by John W. Lawton, and in 1841 John C. Osborn became the publisher. In 1842 he was succeeded by Joseph Holmes, by whom it was styled

The Democratic Champion, and continued until 1846.

The Washington Co. Sentinel was published at Union Village in 1840.

The W. Co. People's Journal was founded in 1843 by John W. Curtis, by whom it is still published.

The Champion was started at Union Village in 1843 by J. Holmes.

The Eagle was started by J. L. Cramer in 1845. In 1846 it became

The Union Village Eagle, and was published about 2 years by McCall & Bailey.

The Union Village Democratic Standard was published in 1848 by Wm. A. McCall.

The Washington Telegraph was established in 1849, and is now published by C. M. Haven, as

The Granville Register.

The Public Ledger, started at Fort Edward in 1854 by H. F. Blanchard, is now called the Fort Edward Ledger.

The Fort Edward Institute Monthly was started in 1860 by Wm. A. Holley, and is still published.

trails and implements of Indian art frequently found show that it had been inhabited at a former period. The n. portion of the co., lying in the natural channel of communication between Hudson River and Lake Champlain,¹ became the great highway of hostile parties passing between the Five Nations and the Canada Indians, and at a later day by the more formidable armies of disciplined troops in the struggles which ended in the conquest of Canada. The French made incursions upon the English and Five Nations in 1665, 1688, and 1693; and these were returned by attacks upon the French and Indians in Canada in 1691 and 1692. For several years after, the passage of small hostile parties was of frequent occurrence. In 1709, Forts Ann and Nicholson were erected by the English and garrisoned for the protection of the northern frontier; but upon the return of peace they were abandoned.² Frequent incursions of small parties were made in the War of 1748, and many persons were murdered,—though no regular engagement took place. Again, during the French War of 1755, forts were built at Ft. Ann, Ft. Edward, and the whole region around the head of Lakes George and Champlain became the theater of stirring military events. The armies that attacked Ticonderoga, and those that finally effected the conquest of all the French posts upon the lakes, marched through this region; and it formed a portion of the great battle-ground between the armies of two nations contending for the sovereignty of a continent. In the summer and fall of 1777, upon the advance of Burgoyne, war again, for a brief space, spread terror and desolation over the whole region. "Skenesborough" was burned and abandoned on the 7th of July, Fort Ann was taken on the 8th, Fort Edward on the 28th, and the country was overrun by the enemy soon after. On the 13th and 14th of Sept. the British army crossed the Hudson into Saratoga co.; and about the 10th of Oct. Fort Edward was re-taken by the Americans, thus effectually cutting off the retreat of the army, already disheartened by their defeat at Bemis Heights. The surrender of Burgoyne put an end to the war in this section; and the subsequent history of the co. is but the record of the continued and progressive triumphs of peaceful industry.

ARGYLE³—was granted by patent, March 13, 1764,⁴ and formed as a town, March 23, 1786. Greenwich was taken off in 1803, and Fort Edward in 1818. It lies near the center of the co. Its surface is rolling in the n. and w. and broken and hilly in the s. and e. The highlands are divided into broad ridges with abrupt declivities. In the n. part Tamerack Swamp covers several hundred acres. The principal stream is the Moses Kil,⁵ which flows in a s. w. direction through near the center of the town. The other streams are small brooks, which flow into the Hudson, Batten Kil, and Wood Creek. Cossayuna Lake⁶ is a beautiful sheet of water, 3 mi. long, situated in a narrow valley in the s. e. part of the town. It is everywhere surrounded by steep hill slopes, and contains several beautiful green islands. To the n. e. of this lake, high up among the hills, is Argyle Lake,⁷ a small sheet of water, half a mile in circumference. The soil of the town is generally a productive, slaty or gravelly loam. A mineral spring, 1 mi. n. w. from South Argyle, is said to resemble those at Saratoga. Argyle (p. v.) was incorp. March 27, 1838. It is the seat of the Argyle Academy. Pop. 375. North Argyle and South Argyle (p. offices) each contains about 20 houses, and The Hook 10. Argyle was conveyed to 83 families, and in 1765 the first settlement commenced.⁸ The family of John Allen, a tory living on Lot 25, was murdered by Indians belonging to Burgoyne's army, July 26, 1777.⁹ The first church (Asso. Ref. Presb.) was formed in 1793;¹⁰ Rev. Geo. Mairs was the first preacher.

³ Named in honor of the Scottish Duke of Argyle.

⁷ Summit Lake is a picturesque sheet of water in the co., upon the very summit of the central range of hills. Two sawmills are supplied by its outlet.

¹⁰ The census reports 5 churches; 2 Asso. Presb., M. E., Ref. Presb. or Cong., and Prot. E.

CAMBRIDGE—was incorp. by patent,¹ July 21, 1761. It was formed as a town² in Albany co. March 7, 1788, and annexed to Washington co. Feb. 7, 1791. White Creek and Jackson were taken off in 1815. The surface of the town is hilly in the n. and rolling in the s. The summits of the hills are 200 to 300 ft. above the valleys. The e. part embraces a portion of the valley of Owl Kil, which is celebrated for the beauty of its scenery. Upon the w. of this valley are high undulating hills, the broad sweeps of which show alternate patches of green woodland and cultivated farms; and upon the e. rise the Taghkanick Mts., rough and broken, while the valley itself is very smooth and level. The other streams are Wampecack Creek, Whiteside Brook, and several other small brooks. The soil is generally a gravelly and sandy loam. Flax is extensively cultivated. Cambridge (p. v.) contains 100 houses and the Cambridge Washington Academy; Center Cambridge (p. v.) 13 houses; North Cambridge (p. o.) 10; and Buskirk's Bridge³ (p. v.) 15. The first settlers consisted of 30 families, who located in 1761, '62, and '63 and who each received 100 acres of land as a gift from the proprietors.⁴ Phineas Whiteside,⁵ from Penn., settled 8 mi. w. of the Colerain Colony, in 1766. The expedition against Bennington, under Baum, passed through the town Aug. 13, 1777; and the remnant of the fugitives returned on the night of the 16th. The first church (Asso. Presb.) was organized in 1789; Rev. Thos. Beverly was the first pastor.⁶

DRESDEN—was formed from Putnam, as "South Bay," March 15, 1822; its present name was adopted April 17, 1822. It lies between Lake George and the s. extremity of Lake Champlain. Nearly its entire surface is covered by steep mountain ridges, several peaks of which are 1500 ft. above the lake. The declivities of the mountains are steep, sometimes forming perpendicular precipices several hundred feet high. Upon the side of Lake George the mountains rise abruptly from the very edge of the water; but upon the borders of Lake Champlain is a narrow strip of arable land. The principal mountain peaks are Black⁷ and Sugar Loaf Mts. and Diameter Precipice. Pike Brook and the head branches of Mill Brook take their rise in these mountains. All of the surface in the interior is covered with forests or naked rocky peaks. The soil is hard and sterile, and is unfit for agricultural purposes. The town was principally conveyed to non-commissioned officers and privates of the Colonial British army; and settlement was begun about 1784, by Jos. Phippeny, at the foot of South Bay. Ebenezer Chapman, — Boggs, and Daniel Ruff came soon after, and settled along the bay and lake. Lumbering has formed a prominent pursuit. In several localities iron and other ores have been noticed, but none worked to any extent. The town is without a p. o. A bridge was built, at the expense of the State, across South Bay, near its outlet, in 1856.

EASTON—was formed from Stillwater and Saratoga, March 3, 1789, while a part of Albany co., and so named from being the e. town in the Saratoga Patent. It was annexed to Washington co. Feb. 7, 1791. It lies upon the e. bank of the Hudson. A broad intervalle extends along the course of the river, which is succeeded by a plateau region, embracing the central and s. portions of the town. The e. part is broken by several lofty hills. The principal highlands are Willards Mt.⁸ and Harrington Hill. The streams are Hudson River and Batten Kil,⁹ forming the w. and e. boundaries of the town, Kidney and Vly Creeks, and a few minor streams. Upon the e. borders of the town is an extensive swamp known as "The Fly."¹⁰ The Di-on-on-dah-o-wa Falls,¹¹ upon ¹ This patent embraced 81,600 acres, and was nominally conveyed to 60 persons, most of whom resided in Hebron, Conn. The real owners were but 6 in number, and of these 3 only were mentioned in the charter, viz.: Isaac Sawyer and Edward Wells, of Conn., and Jacob Lansing, founder of Lansingburgh. The other three owners—Alex. Colden, Wm. Smith, and Geo. Banyar—were connected with the Colonial Government.

³ Named from Martin Van Buskirk, who built the first bridge.

⁵ William Whiteside acquired the title to 3 lots, of 400 acres each, of the finest land, and settled his sons (John, Peter, Thomas, William, and James) upon large farms near him. These estates are all owned by his descendants at the present day. The remaining lands were mostly leased by the six proprietors at an annual rent of one shilling per acre; but, they being generally willing to sell at a sum equal to the present worth of the perpetual rent, most of the settlers have gradually acquired the fee simple of their farms. The first inn was of logs, on the site of the "Checkered House," and kept by Jas. Cowden. Philip Van Ness built the first sawmill and gristmill on Gordons Brook, near Buskirk's Bridge. This neighborhood was called by the Indians "Ty-ohoke," and by them a field of 12 acres had been cleared there for corn. Other early settlers on the Hoosick Patent were Col. Lewis Van Wort and John Quackenbush.

⁶ The census reports 4 churches; 3 M. E., 1 Asso. Presb.

⁸ Willards Mt. is said to have derived its name from a Mr. Willard, who from its summit, with a spyglass, reconnoitered the position of Burgoyne's army at Saratoga.

¹⁰ A term used to denote a marsh overgrown with bog moss and low bushes.

¹¹ Pronounced Di-on-on-dah-o-wa. On a map of Saratoga Patent published in 1700 it is written Di-on-on-de-ho-wa.

Batten Kil, below Galesville, are 60 ft. high, and well worthy of note. The soil is an excellent quality of sandy and gravelly loam. Limestone of an excellent quality abounds in this town. Machinery, agricultural implements, and woolen goods are manufactured at Galesville. Easton Corners (North Easton p. o.) contains 30 houses; Easton (p. v.) 17; South Easton (p. v.) 15; and Crandalls Corners 8. Parts of Union Village and Galesville¹ are in this town. The date of the first settlement is unknown, but it was probably several years after the Saratoga Patent² was issued. In 1709 a fort³ was built on the hill top, 1 mi. s. of Galesville, and a few families settled under its shelter; but the dread of Indian hostilities prevented the settlement from spreading. On the 30th of Nov. 1745, the enemy made a descent upon the place, killed 30 persons, and took 60 prisoners, including a portion of the garrison, who were decoyed from the fort by the Indians feigning to be wounded. The remaining part of the garrison burned the fort and unfinished blockhouses and withdrew, leaving the frontier unprotected. Settlers did not return until 1760.⁴ At Schuylerville is a bridge across the Hudson 800 ft. long. The first religious meeting (Quaker) was held in 1778. A Ref. Prot. D. church was formed in 1805; Rev. Philip Duryea was the first preacher.⁵

FORT ANN—was formed, as "Westfield," March 23, 1786. Hartford was taken off in 1793, and Putnam in 1806. It received its present name, April 6, 1808, from the old fort erected here in 1709. It lies s. of the southern extremity of Lake Champlain, and s. e. of Lake George. Its central and w. parts are occupied by the high and rocky peaks of the Palمرتown⁶ Mts., here divided into three distinct ranges,—Palمرتown Mt., in the w. part, Mt. Putnam, in the center, and Fort Ann Mts., in the e. The extreme e. edge of the town is occupied by uplands belonging to the Cossayuna Range. Diameter Rock and Buck Mt., on the line of Dresden, are the highest peaks, and are 1300 to 2500 ft. above tide. The valleys separating the ranges of the Palمرتown Mts. are known as "Furnace" and "Welchs Hollow." The principal streams are Wood Creek, Halfway Creek, Furnace Hollow Creek, and Podunk Brook. The principal bodies of water are Orebed, Sly, Cope-land, Hadlock, and Trout Ponds. The soil in the mountain region is hard and sterile, scarcely strong enough to support the natural growth of forest trees; but in the valleys it is a gravelly loam alternating with a stiff clay.⁷ Iron⁸ and woolen goods are manufactured to some extent. Fort Ann⁹ (p. v.) has 608 inhabitants; Griswolds Mills (p. v.) about 14 houses. West Fort Ann, (p. o.), South Bay, Canes Falls, and Comstocks Landing (p. o.) are small villages. Fort Ann was one of a chain of military works erected in 1709, to facilitate the extensive operations then in progress against Canada.¹⁰ It stood upon the w. side of Wood Creek, about half a mile from the present village of Fort Ann, the Champlain Canal passing partly across the spot which it enclosed. It was built at the joint expense of England and the Colonies. Artillery Patent, covering the e. part of this town, was granted Oct. 24, 1764, to Jos. Walton and 23 other Provincial officers, in equal shares, irrespective of grade. Settlement was not generally begun until after the Revolution. An engagement occurred here, July 8, 1777, between the rear guard of the retreating American army, under Col. Long, and the advanced guard of the British, under Col. Hill.¹¹ In Oct. 1780, a blockhouse in this town was burned by the enemy. The first church (Bap.) was formed in 1789;¹² Rev. Sherman Babcock was the first pastor.

FORT EDWARD—was formed from Argyle, April 10, 1818. It lies upon the e. bank of the Hudson, near the center of the w. border of the co. A wide intervalle extends along the

² This patent was granted Nov. 4, 1684, and renewed Oct. 9, 1706. The part s. of the Hudson was 12 mi. long and 6 mi. broad.

³ This fort was built of thick posts driven into the ground close to each other, in the manner of palisades, forming a square, "the length of whose sides was within the reach of a musket shot." At each corner were houses for officers; and within the palisades were barracks of timbers.—Kalm's Travels.

⁴ Among the first settlers of about this period were Pet. Becker, Elijah Freeman, Thos. and Mihal Beadle, William Thompson, Nathan Potter, John Swain, and William Coffin. A school was taught near Union Village as early as 1787. Gerrit Lansing kept the first store, in 1794; and John Gale built the first mill, at Galesville, in 1810. The first woolen factory was built in the summer of 1844, by Gale, Rodgers & Reynolds.

⁵ There are 5 churches in town; 2 M. E., 2 Ref. Prot. D., and 1 Friends.

⁸ A blast furnace was built at Mt. Hope in 1826, which makes

5 tons of pig iron daily. A forge was built at West Fort Ann in 1828, for making anchors and chain cables.

⁹ Incorp. March 7, 1820.

river, but toward the s. the surface rises to a height of 200 to 300 ft. and spreads out into a beautifully undulating upland. The Hudson, Moses Kil and Dead Creek are the principal streams. The soil upon the river is a mixture of heavy clay and alluvium, but farther s. it is a sandy or gravelly loam. In town are several extensive manufacturing establishments.¹ Fort Edward² (p. v.) is finely situated on the Hudson. Pop. in 1858, 1,565. The Washington Co. Seminary and Female Collegiate Institute,³ one of the largest academic institutions in the State, is located at this village. Fort Miller (p. v.) is situated on the Hudson, about 7 mi. below Fort Edward. Pop. 225. Fort Edward Center is a p. o., and Durkeetown is a hamlet. The first family that located in the town or co. was that of Col. Lydius, son of Rev. John Lydius, who, having acquired the title to Delliū's discarded patent, built a house, and engaged in trade with the Indians at what is now Fort Edward Village.⁴ His daughter, Catherine, was born here, and was the first white child born in the co. Fort Nicholson was built in 1709, but was soon after abandoned. As a part of the plan of military operations against Canada, about 600 men, under Gen. Lyman, were sent forward, in June, 1755, to build a fort where Fort Nicholson had formerly stood, at the great carrying place to Lake Champlain.⁵ Fort Edward was a very important depôt for arms and rendezvous for armies in the great expeditions against Canada; and it served as a vast hospital for the sick and wounded until 1760, when it was allowed to go to decay. During the Revolution it was again occupied by both British and Americans. Fort Miller is named from the fort built, about 1755, in the bend of the river opposite the village.⁶ After the peace this town settled rapidly. Wm. Duer,⁷ son-in-law to Lord Sterling, was the pioneer of Ft. Miller, where he built a large house and sawmill. There are 6 churches in town.⁸

GRANVILLE—was formed March 23, 1786. It is situated upon the s. border of the co., s. of the center. Its surface is undulating and hilly. The ridges generally slope gradually to their summits, which are elevated 300 to 500 ft. above the valleys. Quarries of excellent roofing slate have been opened in different parts of the town.⁹ Wide intervals of excellent land extend along the course of Mettowiee, or Pawlet,¹⁰ and Indian Rivers. The soil is a slaty and gravelly loam, and is particularly adapted to potatoes, large quantities of which are exported. A limited amount of manufactures¹¹ is carried on in town. Granville¹² (p. v.) contains 450 inhabitants; North Granville (p. v.) a female seminary, and 220 inhabitants; Middle Granville (p. v.) an academy and 800 inhabitants; and South Granville (p. v.) 111. The land in this town is embraced in several grants made to about 30 captains and lieutenants who had served in the French War.¹³ Barnaby Byrnes Patent, of 2000 acres, in the s. e. corner, was sold to Kenneth McKennith, a merchant of New York, who again sold it to Donald Fisher, a tailor of that city. Fisher induced several relatives of his to remove from Scotland and settle upon his tract. In the Revolution he withdrew to Canada, and his lands were confiscated and sold; but, owing to some informality, the ² Incorp. under Gen. Act of 1847.

⁴ His house was burned by the Indians in 1749, and his son taken prisoner.

⁵ It was named Fort Lyman; but a few years after, the name was changed to Ft. Edward, in honor of Edward, Duke of York, grandson of Geo. II., and brother of Geo. III. It stood on the bank of the river, s. of the creek, and within the present village limits. It was 4 sided, with bastions on 3 angles, the fourth being protected by the river. Its ramparts of earth and timber, 16 ft. high and 22 thick, were mounted with 6 cannon and inclosed several large buildings. Storehouses and barracks were built on Monroes Island, opposite. A band of savages attempted to surprise it in Aug. 1759, but were repulsed by Maj. Israel Putnam and his rangers. In the winter following, Putnam saved the fort from destruction by a characteristic exercise of cool intrepidity and daring. The fort accidentally took fire, and the flames spread with great rapidity in the immediate vicinity of the powder magazine. Putnam placed himself in the path of the flames, and fought desperately until the fire was subdued; and when he retired from his post his arms, face, and hands were entirely skinned, and the frail covering of the magazine was completely charred.

The murder of Jane McCrea took place July 27, 1777, near a spring, and beside a venerable pine tree a little s. of the village. This tragedy was at once reported throughout the country, and aided greatly to weaken the influence of the British, while it aroused the patriots to more desperate efforts in resisting the invaders. The old pine tree died in 1849; and in 1853 it was cut down and made into canes and boxes as mementos of the event. The remains of Miss McC. are interred in the Union Cemetery.

State afterward bought off his claim, for $12,000.¹ The first carding machine used in the State was erected at Middle Granville, in 1808.² The first church (Presb.) was formed April 16, 1782; the first pastor, Rev. Oliver Hitchcock, was settled in 1786; and the church was erected in 1795.³

GREENWICH—was formed from Argyle, March 4, 1803. It lies on the w. border of the co., in the n. angle formed by the junction of the Hudson and Batten Kil. Ranges of hills, 200 to 300 ft. above the valleys, extend through the central and eastern parts of the town. Bald Mt., near Batten Kil, is the principal peak. The declivities of the hills are so gradual that the surface appears to be rolling rather than hilly. Upon Batten Kil are two considerable falls, one of which is 75 ft. in height. The other principal streams are the Cossayuna, Rogers, and Stony Creeks and Livingston Brook. Cossayuna Lake extends into the n. e. corner of the town. The soil is a slaty and gravelly loam interspersed with patches of clay. The town is more extensively engaged in manufactures than any other in the co.⁴ Union Village,⁵ (Greenwich p. o.) on the line of Easton, contains an academy and 1,173 inhabitants, 888 of whom are in Greenwich; Bald Mountain⁶ (p. v.) 225 inhabitants; East Greenwich (p. v.) and Center Falls each about 100 houses; and North Greenwich (p. v.) 70. Galesville (p. v.) is a manufacturing village of about 40 houses, on the line of Easton. Battenville, (p. v.) in the s. e. corner, contains about 200 inhabitants. Lakeville (Lake p. o.) is a hamlet. It is supposed that the first settlement was made by the Dutch, previous to the French War, a few families of them remaining at the time of the Revolution.⁷ About 1733 a large number of Scotch emigrants had come over under the promise of grants of land from Government,—which promise was not fulfilled. Jan. 5, 1763, three of these emigrants—Duncan, George, and Jas. Campbell, sons of Laughlin Campbell—petitioned for 100,000 acres; and on the 11th of Nov. following a patent of 10,000 acres was issued to the 3 brothers, their 3 sisters, (Rose Graham, Margaret Eustace, and Lily Murray,) and 4 other persons. This grant embraced about one-third of the town of Greenwich. The first church (Bap.) was organized in 1774; Rev. Leonard Bowers was the first preacher.⁸

HAMPTON—was formed March 3, 1786. It lies upon the e. border of the co., n. of the center. A range of hills, about 500 ft. above the valleys and for the most part covered with forests, extends through the central and eastern parts of the town. Poultney River, separating the town from Vt., is the principal stream. Along its course is a wide interval of fine land. The soil is a gravelly loam interspersed with clay. The interval is alike fertilized and desolated by the frequent overflows of the stream. Hampton Corners (Hampton p. o.) contains 20 houses, and Low Hampton⁹ (p. o.) 5. The greater part of this town was included in patents granted to Provincial officers. The n. part embraces about 2000 acres of Skene's Little Patent.¹⁰ The first settlement was made some little time before the Revolution,¹¹ by Capt. Brooks, Col. Gideon Warren, and — Webster. The first church (Prot. E.) was built at a very early date;¹² Rev. Stephen Jeweth, from N. J., was the first preacher.

HARTFORD—was formed from "Westfield," (now Fort Ann,) March 12, 1793. It lies near the center of the co. The s. e. section is broken and hilly, and the center and n. w. level or gently undulating. The summits of the highest hills are 500 to 700 ft. above the level of the Champlain Canal. The principal streams are East Creek and its branches. Slate and limestone of an excellent quality are found among the hills.¹³ The soil in the s. e. is a rich, slaty loam, and that in the n. w. a heavy clay. There are several chalybeate springs, the principal of which is ¹ Capt. Dan'l Curtie, from New Lebanon, N. Y., came into town about 1780; Capt. Ebenezer Gould, from Killingly, Conn., Nath'l Spring, Asaph Cook, Tim. Allen, F. B. Hodge, Ebenezer Walker, and David Doane, settled before or about the time of the Revolution. Benj. Baker kept an inn at North Granville, about 1790, and Jos. Jenks kept a store as early as 1796. Nath'l Spring erected a gristmill at Granville, about 1787. A school was taught by Jas. Richards, in 1783, at South Granville.

tucket, R. I. In this village are several mills and machine shops and a large carriage factory.

Infantry.¹ Settlement was not commenced until after the Revolution.² The first church (Bap.) was built in 1789.³

HEBRON⁴—was formed March 23, 1786, and named from Hebron, Conn. It lies near the center of the s. border of the co. A broad mountain range extends through the center, occupying nearly one-half of its entire surface, and a series of high hills extends through the s. and w. sections. The summits of the highlands are 300 to 500 ft. above the valleys and are mostly crowned with forests. The ranges of hills are separated by the valleys of Black Creek and its principal w. branch. The soil is a sandy and slaty loam, of a light, porous nature, easy of cultivation, and well adapted to resist the extremes of wet and drouth. In the hilly regions is considerable rocky waste land. In the n. and s. are extensive and valuable quarries of slate. North Hebron⁵ (p. v.) contains the North Hebron Institute and 12 houses; East Hebron (Hebron p. o.) 12 houses; West Hebron (p. v.) the West Hebron Classical School and 40 houses; Belcher⁶ (p. v.) 20 houses; and Slateville (p. o.) 8. This town was embraced in patents granted to officers and privates who had served in the French War,—mostly to Scotch Highlanders belonging to the 77th Regt. of Foot. These grants were made so long after the war that those who were entitled to them never appeared to claim them. The first settlements appear to have been made before the Revolution. There are two academic institutions in town. The first church (Asso. Ref. Presb.) was organized in 1780;⁷ Rev. Dr. Gray was the first pastor.

JACKSON—was formed from Cambridge, April 17, 1815. It lies on the s. border of the co., s. of the center. The n. branch of the Taghkanick Range occupies the s. portion of the town, and several parallel ranges extend through the central and w. portions, rendering the entire surface very hilly. The summits of the hills are 300 to 800 ft. above the valleys and are generally crowned with forests. The declivities are often steep and rocky. The principal streams are Batten Kil and a branch of Owl Creek. In the valley between the hills that border immediately upon Batten Kil and those farther w. are several small lakes, known as Long, Big, Dead, and Little Ponds. These lakes are beautiful sheets of water, surrounded by hills, forests, and fine cultivated farms. The soil is a slaty loam and very productive. Jackson Center (Jackson p. o.) contains 16 houses; Colla, (p. v.), on the line of Cambridge, about 30 houses; and Anaquassacook 12. Portions of this town and White Creek were embraced in the Anaquassacook Patent of 10,000 acres, granted May 11, 1762.⁸ The first settlers were James Irvine, Peter Magill, and John Miller, all of whom located in the s. part of the town.⁹ The only church (Ref. Prot. D.) in town was organized Dec. 31, 1833; Rev. Jas. W. Stewart was the first pastor. Geo. Law, one of the projectors and proprietors of the California line of steamships, was a native of this town.

KINGSBURY—was incorp. by patent May 18, 1762, and recognized as a town by the State Government March 23, 1786. It lies on the w. border of the co., n. of the center. Nearly all of its surface is level or gently undulating. A range of hills, rising about 150 ft. above the valleys, occupies the extreme s. edge of the town. The principal streams are the Hudson, in the s. w. corner; Wood Creek, upon the s. border; Halfway Brook, in the n. w. corner, and Moss Brook. At Bakers Falls,¹⁰ upon the Hudson, the river shoots down a steep descent of ledges, in all 76 ft. in 60 rods, forming a scene of great beauty, and affording an extensive water-power. The soil along the valley of Wood Creek is a hard, stiff clay; in the other parts of the town, a sandy or gravelly loam. There are extensive quarries of limestone in town, furnishing an excellent building material; from these quarries was obtained the stone for the locks on the Champlain & Hudson

² Col. John Buck, Manning Bull, Stephen and Asa Bump, John and Edward Ingalls, and Nathan and Sam'l Taylor were among the first settlers. Aaron and Eber Ingoldsbee, from Boylston, Mass., came in 1782, and Timothy Stocking, Ebenezer Smith, and John Paine in 1784. A school was taught in 1790, at North Hartford, by Thos. Paine, from Conn. A gristmill was built of logs at an early date.

³ The census reports 4 churches in town; M. E. Bap., Cong., and Union.

⁵ Locally known as "Moss Meadows."

⁶ Locally known as "Bell's."

⁸ This patent was granted to Ryer, Jacob, Freeman, and W. M. Schermerhorn, Johannes, Nicholas, and Peter Quackenbush, Thos. and John Smith, and Joseph Jansen, all of Schenectady.

Canal. Manufacturing is carried on to a considerable extent.¹ Sandy Hill (p. v.) has a population of 1,260. Moss Street contains 25 houses; Kingsbury (p. v.) 25; Pattens Mills (p. v.) 20; Dunhams Basin 10; Vaughns Corners 12; Adamsville (p. o.) 12; Langdons Corners 5; and Smiths Basin (p. o.) 8. Kingsbury Patent, containing 26,000 acres, was granted to Jas. Bradshaw and 22 others, from Conn., May 18, 1762. The first settlers were James Bradshaw, Albert Baker, and his sons Albert and Charles, from New York City.² A sawmill was built at Bakers Falls before the Revolution, and a gristmill in 1807. The town was the scene of many an adventure during the French War,⁴ and the settlement was entirely broken up during the Revolution. Traces of a road cut by Burgoyne's army are still visible near Kingsbury. The first minister was Francis Baylor, a Moravian, about 1776. Meetings were held by the Prot. E. and the Bap. in 1795.⁵ Several noted men have been residents of this town.⁶

PUTNAM⁷—was formed from "Westfield," (now Fort Ann,) Feb. 28, 1806. Dresden was set off in 1822. This town lies in the extreme n. end of the co., upon the mountainous peninsula between Lakes George and Champlain. The mountains are divided into two separate ranges by the valleys of Mill and Charter Brooks. The w. range of mountains rises abruptly from the surface of Lake George, and in the s. part of the town attains an elevation of 900 to 1,000 ft. above the surface of the lake. The greater part of the surface is rocky, broken, and unfit for cultivation; but sections of arable land extend along the valleys of the small streams and the borders of Lake Champlain. The soil is generally a hard, gravelly loam. Graphite of a fine quality is found in abundance. A small pond lies among the mountains, on the w. side of the town, 300 feet above Lake George. Putnam Corners, (Putnam p. o.), containing about 10 houses, is the only village. The tillable lands were mostly granted to privates of the N. Y. Provincial regiments, and feeble settlements had probably commenced before the Revolution.⁸ The first church (Asso. Presb.) was built in 1801;⁹ Rev. James Miller, from Scotland, was the first pastor. A private academy at Putnam Corners was established in 1854.

SALEM—was formed by patent Aug. 7, 1764, and was recognized by statute March 23, 1786. It lies on the e. border of the co., s. of the center. Its surface consists of moderately elevated ridges, separated by narrow valleys, all extending in a n. e. and s. w. direction. The hills are usually bordered by gradual slopes and their summits are crowned with forests. There is very little waste land in town. Batten Kil, forming the s. boundary, and Black, White, and Trout Creeks, are the principal streams. Lytles Pond, in the n. part, is a beautiful sheet of water lying in a basin among the hills and surrounded by forests. The soil is a rich, slaty or gravelly loam. Salem, (p. v.), incorp. April 4, 1803, has 832 inhabitants; Shushan (p. v.) has 2 churches, 4 mills, and about 50 houses; and Eagleville, (East Salem p. o.), Clapps Mills, and Fitches Point have each 40 to 50 inhabitants. James Turner and Joshua Conkey, from Pelham, Mass., settled in 1761. They were joined, the next year, by Hamilton McCollister. In 1764 a patent of 25,000 acres was obtained,—one-half owned by a company of New England settlers and the other by Oliver De Lancey and Peter Du Bois, two Government officials.¹⁰ These last sold their share to Rev. Thos. Clark and his company of Irish and Scotch immigrants at a perpetual rent of one shilling per acre.¹¹ The Camden Tract, on the e. part of the town, was granted to captains

¹ The dam at Sandy Hill, across the Hudson, 1,200 ft. long and 10 ft. high, furnishes water-power for several mills and a woolen factory. At Bakers Falls there are a paper mill and 2 gristmills. The lumber business of the town is very extensive and important, the sawmills being supplied with logs floated down from the Upper Hudson. There are also in town establishments for the manufacture of pianos, steam engines, portable sawmills, &c.

² This village has been a half-shire town since 1807. It was incorp. March 9, 1810.

³ Among the other first settlers were Michael Hoffnagle, Solomon King, Oliver Colvin, and Nebemiah Seely.

⁵ The census reports 9 churches; 3 Bap., 3 M. E., Presb., Prot. E., and R. C.

⁶ Gov. Wright received his legal education at the office of Henry C. Martindale, of Sandy Hill. Lieut. Gov. Pittcher, for some time Acting Governor, was a citizen of this town. Hon. Wm. P. Lee, late Chief Justice and Chancellor of the Sandwich Islands, was a native of Sandy Hill.

⁷ Named in honor of Gen. Israel Putnam, who in this vicinity, as major in the colonial service, performed some of his most daring exploits.

⁹ There are 2 churches; Asso. Presb., and F. W. Bap.

and lieutenants in the Provincial army. Rev. Thomas Clark was the first minister.¹ The Salem Washington Academy was incorp. Feb. 15, 1791.²

WHITE CREEK³—was formed from Cambridge, April 17, 1815. It is the s. e. corner town of the co. The surface of the s. portion is gently rolling, and the central and w. portions are occupied by the Taghkanick Mts. The summits of these mountains are rocky and broken and covered with forests, and their sides are bounded by abrupt declivities and perpendicular ledges. The principal streams are Hoosick River, Owl Kil, Pumpkin Hook,⁴ Center, White, and Little White Creeks. The upper course of Owl Kil is through a deep and narrow valley abounding with picturesque views. A small vein of lead has been discovered three-fourths of a mi. e. of Posts Corners. The soil is a fine quality of gravelly loam. More sheep are raised in this town than in any other in the co. Garden seeds and flax are largely cultivated. North White Creek (p. v.) adjoins Cambridge. White Creek, (p. o.), Posts Corners, Center White Creek, (p. o.), Ash Grove, Dorrs Corners, Pumpkin Hook, and Martindale Corners are hamlets. The Walloomsac Patent, lying partly in this town, on the s., was settled by the Dutch. Among the other grants were the Bain, Embury, Grant and Campbell, and Lake and Van Cuyler, Patents. A colony of Irish Methodists settled near Ash Grove about 1770; and here was organized the second M. E. church in America,⁵ by Thos. Ashton (from whom the locality was named) and Rev. Philip Embury. James and Thos. Morrison made the first settlement, near White Creek.⁶

WHITEHALL⁷—was incorp. by patent March 31, 1765, as "Skenesborough."⁸ Its name was changed March 23, 1786. It lies at the s. extremity of Lake Champlain. Its surface is mountainous in the w. and level and undulating in the center and e. Saddle Mt., upon the w. border, is nearly 900 ft. above the surface of the lake. The principal streams are Wood Creek, Mettowee (or Pawlet) and Poultney Rivers. Upon Wood Creek, near its mouth, is a fall which furnishes a valuable water-power. The soil of the greater part of the town is a hard, stiff clay and is best adapted to grazing. Considerable manufacturing is carried on in town.⁹ Whitehall (p. v.) is situated near the mouth of Wood Creek, on Lake Champlain. The s. e., canal, and lake trade give this place commercial importance. The Whitehall Academy is in the e. part of the village. Pop. 3,225. This town was the scene of stirring military events during the French War.¹⁰ The first settler was Maj. Skene, who located here, with 30 families, in 1761. Nominally associating 24 others with himself, he obtained a patent of 25,000 acres, March 31, 1765; and a patent of 9,000 acres in the town of Hampton and Whitehall, July 6, 1771, known as Skene's Little Patent. About 1770 he built a massive stone house and barn, a forge, and one or two sawmills. He also built a sloop upon the lake, and a road, known as "Skenes Road," 30 mi. through the wilderness toward Salem. He appears to have been a man of great energy of character, and he endeavored to secure solid and permanent advantages to the infant settlement.¹¹ Upon the approach of the Revolution, Maj. Skene espoused the royalist cause, and his house was taken by the Americans in May, 1775.¹² In 1776 an American garrison was stationed here, and a small fleet was fitted

² For a great number of years this school was one of the most noted in Eastern New York. Among the distinguished persons who have received a portion of their education here were Hon. Samuel Nelson, of the U. S. Supreme Court, Hon. John Savage, formerly Chief Justice of N. Y., and Rev. Dr. Bethune, of Brooklyn.

⁴ Said to be a corruption of the Indian Pom-pa-nuck, the name of a tribe of Indians who removed hither from Conn.

⁵ Embury preached the first Meth. sermon in N. Y., 3 or 4 years before. The census reports 8 churches in town; 2 Bap., 2 M. E., Friends, Presb., R. C., and Asso. Ref. Presb.

⁶ Among the other early settlers were Buel Beebe, Maj. John Porter, Ephraim, James, and Robt. Cowan, David Sillarow, Sam'l Clark, John McClung, Geo. Duncan, Robt. and George Gilmore, Wm. Eager, Wm. Selfrage, Sam'l Ball, and John Scott. The early settlers in the s. part of the town were Thomas Ashton, Edmund Wells, John and Ebenezer Allen, David Sprague, Seth Chase, John Harroun, Thos. McCool, John Woods, Simeon Fowler, John Young, Josiah Dewey, and John Corey. John Rhodes built the first clothing works, at Pumpkin Hook.

⁸ Named from Maj. Philip Skene, a British half-pay officer, its founder and patentee.

⁹ The manufactures consist of lumber, machinery, vessels, boats, carpets, and sash and blinds. An extensive lumber trade is carried on with Canada and with ports on the Hudson, through Lake Champlain and the Champlain Canal.

¹² He was very popular with the settlers, and hence he was an object of both fear and dislike to the patriots. His place was captured by a party of volunteers under Capt. Herrick, and out in the harbor and put under the command of Benedict Arnold. Upon the approach of Burgoyne's army, in 1777, the fort was blown up and the houses, mills, &c. were all burned.¹ During the War of 1812 this place became an important depot of military stores. The first steamboat on the lake was launched here, in 1809. The Champlain Canal was constructed to this point from Fort Edward in 1819, and finished to Troy in 1824.² In 1806 Gen. Williams made arrangements for building a church, but died before he could carry them into effect. His son (Col. John Williams) and his widow carried out the design, and presented the building to the Asso. Presb. Soc. It was rebuilt in 1826.³

Maj. Skene the younger, 50 tenants, and 12 negroes were taken prisoners. The sloop was sent down the lake to Col. Ethan Allen at Shoreham, Vt. In the cellar of the house was found the body of the wife of the elder Skene, which had been preserved many years to secure to the husband an annuity devised to her "while she remained above ground." The Americans buried the body in the rear of the house.

up or burned, and the Americans retreated in disorder to Fort Ann. Burgoyne stayed in this place 3 weeks, while opening a road to Fort Ann. The remains of a battery and blockhouse built about this period, overlooking the lake, are still visible.

² A company, under the name of the "Northern Island Navigation Company," had previously been formed for the purpose of uniting the waters of Lake Champlain with those of the Hudson. After expending large sums of money, the project was abandoned.

WAYNE COUNTY.

This county¹ was formed from Ontario and Seneca, April 11, 1823. It lies upon Lake Ontario, w. of the center of the State; is centrally distant 171 mi. from Albany, and contains 624 sq. mi. A series of bluffs 25 to 75 ft. high extends along the lake shore; and from their summits the surface rises in gradual slopes to the lake ridge, a distance of 4 to 5 mi. This ridge is 50 to 200 ft. wide on the top, and about 200 ft. above the lake. It declines toward the s., and upon the e. border of the co. it can scarcely be traced. The declivity of the ridge upon the s. is 8 to 20 ft.; and from its foot the surface gradually slopes upward to the surface of the limestone ridge, which extends e. and w. through the co. a little e. of the center and forms the watershed between Lake Ontario and Clyde River. The summit of this ridge is 140 feet above the lake ridge, 340 feet above the lake, and is about 3 mi. wide. It is highest upon the w. border of the co., and gradually declines toward the e.² From its southern edge the surface gradually declines to Clyde River and slopes upward from the river to the s. line of the co. South of the limestone ridge are numerous drift ridges extending e. and s. and from one-fourth to one and a half miles in length. The declivities are usually very steep, and the summits 40 to 100 ft. above the surrounding surface. They usually end in an abrupt declivity toward the e., but gradually decline toward the s. They are composed of clay, sand, and gravel, and seem to be deposits from great currents of water. Considerable marshy land extends along Clyde and Seneca Rivers, and also through the co. e. of the lake ridge.

Ganargwa, or Mud Creek, enters the s. w. corner of the co. from Ontario, flows in an irregular but generally easterly course to Lyons, where it unites with the Canandaigua Outlet and forms Clyde River,³ which continues eastward to the e. bounds of the co., where it discharges its waters into Seneca River. These streams receive from the e. West Red Creek, East Red Creek, and Black Creek, and from the s. numerous small brooks. The streams flowing into Lake Ontario are Bear, Deer, Davis, Salmon, Thomas, Wolcott, and Big and Little Red Creeks; First, Second, and Third Creeks flow into Great Sodus Bay. The principal indentations upon Lake Ontario are Great Sodus, East, Port, and Blind Sodus Bays. Great Sodus Bay forms an excellent harbor. Crusoe Lake, in the s. e. corner, is the only considerable body of water. The streams, in their course through the drift deposits and lake ridge, have usually worn deep ravines.

The lowest rock in the co. is the Medina sandstone,⁴ appearing upon the lake and in the ravines near it. It occupies a strip with an average width of 2 mi., widest at the w. Next above this is the Clinton group of limestone and shales, extending to the foot of the limestone ridge. Next above is the Niagara limestone, forming the summit ridge and occupying a strip about 3 mi. in width. South of this is the Onondaga salt group of red and green shales and gypsum, extending to the s. border and occupying nearly one-half of the co. The rocks are mostly covered by thick deposits of drift, and are only exposed in the ravines of the streams. Shells, marl, and muck are found in large quantities in the marshy regions. Weak brine and sulphur springs are found in various localities in the Medina sandstone and the red shales of the Onondaga salt group.

The soil derived from the drift deposits is generally a sandy or gravelly loam, with an occasional intermixture of clay. The soil along the lake shore, principally derived from the disintegration of Medina sandstone, is a reddish, sandy loam. At the foot of the mountain ridge, both e. and s., is a strip of very productive clay loam. In the valley of Clyde River the soil is principally a gravelly loam and alluvium. The marsh lands, when drained, are covered deep with a rich vegetable mold, which develops into the most fertile soil in the co.

Agriculture forms the leading pursuit. The branches, in the order of importance, are grain raising, stock growing, dairying, and wool growing. Fruit is extensively cultivated, and is rapidly

² This peculiar formation is accounted for by the theory that the low regions through the e. and central parts of the co. were once covered by the waters of the lake, and that the limestone ridge was a long bar or point extending into the lake from the w.

³ Named by Wm. McNab, a Scotchman. At an early day it was navigable as far as Lyons, and was a link in the great chain of Western travel.

⁴ This stone is extensively quarried for building stone. It is soft when first taken from the quarry, but hardens upon exposure to the atmosphere.

becoming one of the most important agricultural products. Few counties in the State surpass this in the quality or quantity of apples and peaches annually produced. A strip of land bordering upon Lake Ontario, and extending from Niagara River to the Oswego, seems peculiarly adapted to the cultivation of apples and peaches, and is rapidly becoming one of the most important fruit-growing regions in the State. In Wayne co. $25,000 worth of dried fruit is annually prepared. Peppermint and tobacco are raised along the valley of Mud Creek.

The county seat is located at the village of Lyons, near the center of the co. The courthouse is a fine cut stone building, fronting Church St. It has an Ionic portico, and is surmounted by a large dome.¹ The jail is a commodious stone building, in the w. part of the village. It contains rooms for the jailer's residence, and is one of the best arranged and conducted establishments of the kind in the State. The county clerk's office is a fireproof building, fronting Pearl St., a little s. of the courthouse. The poorhouse is situated upon a farm of 130 acres 1½ mi. w. of the courthouse. The average number of inmates is 67, supported at a weekly cost of $1.55 each. A school is taught throughout the year. The farm yields a revenue of $1,400. The buildings are insufficient for the accommodation of the inmates; but the institution seems to be well arranged and well kept.

Six weekly newspapers are now published in the co.²

The Erie Canal extends through the s. tier of towns; and along its course are the most populous and thriving villages of the co.³ The direct branch of the N. Y. Central R. R. between Syracuse and Rochester extends, along the course of the canal, through Savannah, Galen, Lyons, ¹ The first courthouse was a brick edifice, erected soon after the organization of the co. It was superseded, in 1854-55, by the present structure, built of Lockport limestone. The building committee of the present courthouse were John Adams, Stephen Marshall, and F. B. Cornwell. The first officers of the co. were John B. Talmadge, First Judge; Hugh Jameson, Sheriff; Wm. H. Adams, District Attorney; Isaiah J. Richardson, Co. Clerk; and John B. Talmadge, Sherrogate.

² The Palmyra Register, the first paper published in the co., was commenced Nov. 23, 1817, by Timothy C. Strong. It was continued under various titles until 1823, when it was published as

The Western Farmer and Canal Advocate, and passed into the hands of Pomeroy Tucker, who changed its name to The Wayne Semitinal, under which title it is now published by Wm. N. Cole.

The Lyons Republican was commenced Aug. 2, 1821, by Geo. Lewis. It was discontinued in Feb. 1822.

The Lyons Advertiser was commenced May 31, 1822, by Hiram T. Day. It underwent various changes in name and publishers. It was published as

The Wayne County Gazette, by Ephraim J. Whitney; as

The Lyons Argus, by E. J. & W. W. Whitney;

The Lyons Gazette, by Barker & Chapman;

The Wayne Co. Patriot, and as

The Western Argus, by Chapman & Chapin and Ashley & Co.; and as

The Western Argus, by Charles Poucher. In 1841 it was changed to

The Lyons Gazette, and was published by — Russell from 1840 to 1853, when it was sold to Wm. Van Camp, and in 1855 or '56 it was merged in The Wayne Democratic Press.

The Palmyra Freeman was commenced March 11, 1823, by D. D. Stephenson. It soon after passed into the hands of J. A. Hadley, who removed the press to Lyons and changed the name to

The Countryman. Myron Holley became connected with it as associate editor. In 1831 it was suspended for a time, and afterward resumed as

The Lyons American, by Myron Holley. In 1835 it was published by Wm. H. Childs. In 1836 it was removed to Clyde and published as

The Clyde Gazette, by Dennis Cord, until 1838.

The Reflector, mo., was commenced at Palmyra in 1823 by O. Dogberry, Jr. It was discontinued in 1830.

The Newark Republican was commenced at Newark in Nov. 1829, by Jeremiah O. Balch. It was discontinued in 1831.

The Clyde Standard was published about 6 mo. in 1830 by E. P. Moon.

The Western Spectator and Wayne Advertiser was commenced at Palmyra Jan. 9, 1830, by Luther Howard and Erastus Shepard. In 1831 its name was changed to

The Spectator and Anti-Masonic Star. It was removed to Rochester the same year and merged in The Anti-Masonic Enquirer.

The Palmyra Whig was commenced in Feb. 1838, by Wm. N. and Sam'l Cole. It was removed to Lyons by Wm. N. Cole, and its name changed to

The Wayne County Whig. In the fall of 1850 it passed into the hands of Williams & Garritt. In the spring of 1852 they sold it to Elias A. Andrews, who continued it a few months and sold it to Wm. Van Marter; and in

Nov. of the same year it passed into the hands of Rodney L. Adams. In Sept. 1855, its name was changed to The Lyons Republican; and April 30, 1859, Mr. Adams sold it to W. T. Tinsley & Co., its present publishers.

The Wayne Standard was commenced at Newark in June, 1836, by David M. Keeler. In Aug. 1839, it was sold to Gen. Barney T. Partridge, J. F. Bartle, and S. Culver, who changed its name to

The New Age, Stephen Culver, editor. In Jan. 1840, it was sold to — Norton, and discontinued in May following. In July following it was revived as

The Wayne Standard, by D. M. Keeler, and published until 1843, when it passed into the hands of H. L. Winants, and in about 1 year was discontinued. It was revived soon after, as

The Newark Courier, by David Fairfield. It was successively published by Wm. K. Orsague and B. F. Jones as

The Newark Journal; and in 1854 by G. D. A. Bridgman, who changed its name to

The Newark Whig. In Sept. 1855, it passed into the hands of C. F. White, who changed its name to

The Newark Weekly Courier, and still continues its publication.

The Palmyra Courier was commenced May 28, 1843, by Frederic Morley. It passed into the hands of J. C. Bennett, who changed its name to

The Palmyra Democrat. It was published again as The Palmyra Courier, by — Benedict, from about 1851 to '54. Mr. Benedict sold it to — Beebe, and in a short time afterward it passed into the hands of A. B. Averill, who changed its name to

The Palmyra American, and subsequently again to The Palmyra Courier, under which name Mr. Averill still continues its publication.

The Clyde Eagle was commenced in 1844 by B. Frases. It was successively published by — Dryer, Stephen Salisbury, and in 1847 by Rev. Chas. G. Acly and William Tompkins, who changed its name to

The Clyde Telegraph. It afterward passed into the hands of Rev. W. W. Storiker, and soon after to Wm. R. Fowle, and in a short time it was discontinued.

The Clyde Industrial Times was commenced in Feb. 1850, by Payn & Smith. It soon passed into the hands of Jos. A. Payn. Its name was changed in 1851 to

The Clyde Weekly Times, under which title it is now published, by Joseph A. Payn.

The Northern Methodist Protestant was published by an association at Clyde in 1849; Rev. W. W. Storiker, editor.

The Wayne Banner was published at Wolcott in 1850 by John McIntyre, and was removed to Clyde, and merged in The Industrial Times on the first issue of the latter paper.

The Furning Mirror was commenced at Lyons in July, 1853, by R. L. Adams & Co., and was published 1 year.

The Wayne Democratic Press was commenced at Palmyra in 1855. It was removed to Lyons the same year, and is now published by Wm. Van Camp.

Arcadia, Palmyra, and Macedon. A ship canal¹ route and a s. e. route² have been surveyed, connecting the Erie Canal and Central R. R. with Lake Ontario.

The western 9 towns in this co. belonged to the Pulteney Estate; the s. part, including Seneca, Galen, and portions of Wolcott and Butler, constituted a portion of the Military Tract. The intermediate portion, except the s. 3 tiers of lots in Rose, were compensation lands granted to the Pulteney Estate for the gore between the old and new pre-emption lines. The earliest white inhabitants were hunters and trappers. The first permanent settlements were made in 1783, at Palmyra, under the auspices of General John Swift, agent of a company of settlers from Conn.; and at Lyons, under Charles Williamson, agent for the Pulteney Estate.³ From 1790 to 1794, colonies came in from R. I., Long Island, and Maryland.⁴ The settlements did not progress with great rapidity for several years, owing to the diseases which prevailed. The fear of Indian hostilities and of British invasion during the War of 1812 greatly retarded settlement. On the return of peace, settlers began to arrive in considerable numbers, principally from New England and Eastern N. Y. The completion of the Erie Canal gave a new impulse to immigration; and in a few years the flourishing villages of Lyons, Clyde, Palmyra, and Newark were built up along its course. The N. Y. Central R. R., built through the co. in 1852-53, greatly benefited the co. and enhanced the value of the lands.

The most notable of the later incidents in the co. have been the rise of Mormonism in Palmyra,⁵ and the commencement of spiritual rappings in Arcadia.⁶

ARCADIA—was formed from Lyons, Feb. 15, 1825. It lies on the s. border of the co., a little w. of the center. Its surface is a rolling region, broken by drift ridges. Mud Creek flows s. through the town, n. of the center, and receives several small streams as tributaries. The soil is a sandy, gravelly loam, mixed with clay on the hills. Gypsum is found in the s. w., and sand in the center. Newark, (p. v.), including Arcadia, (p. v.), in the s. part, on the canal, was incorp. July 21, 1853, as Newark. It contains 7 churches, a bank, flouring mill, tannery, 3 furnaces, and several manufactories. It is a flourishing canal village and a station upon the N. Y. C. & E. R. R. Pop. 2,042. Fairville, (p. v.), about 5 mi. n., contains 1 church, a tannery, a limited amount of manufactories, and 159 inhabitants. Marbletown, near the s. e. corner, contains a church and 10 houses. Jessups Corners and Hydeville are hamlets. Settlement was commenced in 1791, by Joseph Winters and B. Franklin.⁷ The first church (M. E.) was organized in 1805. Roger Benton was the first settled minister, in 1806.⁸ A family named Fox, residing at Hydeville, in Arcadia, first heard the mysterious sounds known as the "rappings" on the night of March 31, 1849. Investigations were made in regard to the origin of the raps, but nothing definite was settled upon. The family soon after removed to Rochester, the "raps" accompanying them; and hence the name "Rochester Rappings." A series of investigations was instituted, and the matter became public, some claiming for it a spiritual origin, but the great majority pronouncing it a humbug or delusion. From this source modern spiritualism originated.

BUTLER—was formed from Wolcott, Feb. 26, 1826. It is the center town on the s. border of the co. Its surface is diversified, level in the s. e. and rising into ridges in the n. w. The highest point is Armstrong Hill. The principal stream is Wolcott Creek, which rises in the n. e. and, flowing in a circuitous course, leaves the town near the n. w. corner. The soil in the valleys is a gravelly loam, and on the hills it is generally clay, with a tenacious subsoil. Lime is manufactured in the n. part to a limited extent. South Butler, (p. v.), on the s. line, contains 5 churches, a classical school, several manufactories, and about 400 inhabitants. West Butler (p. o.) contains 10 houses; Westbury, (p. v.), in the n. e. corner, partly in the town of Victory,

⁴ The Maryland settlers brought with them several slaves; but it was soon found that slave labor was unprofitable.

⁷ Gilbert Howell and Paul Reese came in in 1786; Samuel Goverhill in 1796; Humphrey Sherman, Reuben Starke, and John Miller, from Long Island, in 1800; and Ebenezer Smith soon after. The Lusks came in from Columbia co. in 1805. Jacob, Philip, and Isaac Lusk purchased 1 sq. mi., which is now occupied by the village of Newark. Caleb Tibbitts, Stephen Aldridge, Henry Cronin, and Cooper Culver settled in 1807; and Dr. A. Hyde, in 1810. The first death was that of a child of B. Franklin, in 1792; the first marriage, that of ——— Hees and Amy Tibbitts, in 1798. Stephen Aldridge kept the first inn, and J. P. Bartlett the first store.

⁸ There are 10 churches in town; 2 Meth. Prot., M. E., Presb., Prot. E., Union, Ref. Prot. D., Bap., R. O., and Christian.

(Cayuga co.,) 1 church and 20 houses. Butler Center is a hamlet. The first settlement was commenced in 1802.¹ The first settled minister was — Mills.² Rev. Antoinette L. Brown, the first woman ever regularly ordained in the State, was settled for several years over the Cong. Church at South Butler.

GALEN³—was formed from Junius, (Seneca co.,) Feb. 14, 1812. Savannah was taken off in 1824. It lies on the s. border of the co., n. of the center. Its surface is hilly in the n., but more level in the w. In the s. w. is a large tract of swamp land. Clyde River⁴ flows through the town from w. to e. in a circuitous course. The soil is a rich, sandy and gravelly loam. Clyde,⁵ (p. v.,) near the center, on Clyde River, was incorp. May 2, 1835. The canal passes through the village; it is also a station on the N. Y. C. & R. R. It contains 6 churches, a high school,⁶ 2 banks, a newspaper office, a glass factory, and several other manufactories.⁷ Pop. 1,856. Mariage, (p. v.,) in the s. part, contains a church and 20 houses; Lock Berlin, (p. v.,) in the w. part, on the canal, a church and 30 houses. Angells Corners, in the s. e., and Meadville, in the n., are hamlets. The first settlement was commenced by Loammi Bedell, in 1800.⁸ The first church (Presb.) was organized July 8, 1814.⁹ Borings for salt water in the vicinity of Clyde have been made, but without success. One of the wells emitted inflammable gas: the well was soon filled up.

HURON—was formed from Wolcott, as "Port Bay," Feb. 25, 1826. Its name was changed March 17, 1834. It lies on Lake Ontario, n. of the center of the co. A part of Great Sodus Bay lies in the n. w. corner. East Bay, in the n., and a part of Port Bay, in the n. e., extend into the town. Its surface is rolling, with a general northern inclination. In the w. and n. w., near Great Sodus Bay, are several tracts of swamp lands. The lake shore rises in a series of bluffs, the highest of which—Chimney Bluff—is 175 ft. above the lake, and Bay Bluff 120 ft. Several small streams flow n. through the town, the principal of which is Mudge Creek, which empties into East Bay. The soil is a sandy and gravelly loam, intermixed with clay in the s. North Huron (p. v.) contains 2 churches, a saw and grist mill, and 40 houses; South Huron (Huron p. o.) 1 church, a townhouse, and 20 houses. Port Glasgow (p. o.) is a hamlet, at the head of aloop navigation on Great Sodus Bay. The first settlement was commenced by Peregrine Fitzhugh and Wm. Helms, and some other families from Md., in 1796.¹⁰ The first church (Presb.) was organized in 1813.¹¹

LYONS—was formed from Sodus, March 1, 1811. Arcadia was taken off in 1825. It lies on the s. border of the co., a little n. of the center. Its surface is a moderately rolling region, broken by sand ridges. The Canandaigua Outlet from the s., and Mud Creek from the w., join in the s. part and form Clyde River. The soil is a sandy and gravelly loam, with marl upon the creek bottom lands. Lyons, (p. v.,) on the canal, at the junction of Canandaigua Outlet and Mud Creek, was incorp. April 18, 1854. It contains the co. buildings, 7 churches, 2 banks, 2 newspaper offices, a union school,¹² and several manufactories;¹³ and it is an important n. e. station. Pop. 3,221. Alloway, (p. v.,) in the s. part, on Canandaigua Outlet, contains a church, a grist-mill, and 30 houses. The first settlement was commenced in 1789, by Nicholas and Wm. Stansell and John Featherly.¹⁴ They settled, with their families, (12 persons in all,) a half mile s. of the ¹ John Granby and — Wellman settled near the center, as early as 1803; Erasmus Hubbard and Abijah Moore, in 1806; Capt. Willis, Wm. Hallett, Henry Bunnell, Aaron Hoppin, Mrs. Eunice, and Morris Crow, previous to 1807; and Seth Crow and Roger Olmsted, in 1808. The first birth was that of — Winans; the first death was that of Jedediah Wheeler, in April, 1811. — Viles built the first sawmill, at the center.

² There are 7 churches in town; 3 M. M., 3 Christian, Bap., Cong., and 2d Adv.

⁴ Named by Wm. McNah, agent of the Hornby Estate, Geneva.

⁸ Among the other early settlers were Nicholas King, David Godfrey, and Isaac Mills, with their families, from Orange co., N. Y., on Lot 70, in the s. w. part of the town, in 1801; — Grainger, from Md., Eliza Austin, — Payne, and Capt. John Sherman, in 1804. The first birth was that of Isaac Godfrey, in Feb. 1802; the first death, that of David Godfrey, accidentally killed, Oct. 13, 1801. The first marriage was that of James Reynolds and Polly Mills, in 1806. James B. West kept the first store; Maj. Fred. A. De Zens built the first saw and grist mill, in 1818.

The first settlement was made by John Swift, in 1789 or '90.² In the winter of 1788-89, John Swift and Col. John Jenkins purchased Tp. 12, R. 2, now Palmyra, and commenced the survey of it in March. During the summer, John Swift moved into the town, and erected a log house and storehouse a little n. of the lower end of Main St., Palmyra. Before the close of the year 1789, Webb Harwood and family, Noah Porter, Jonathan Warner, and Bennett Bates, from Mass., came in. Mr. Harwood settled a little w. of the village. David White and family came in in 1790. The first church (Presb.) was formed in 1797; Rev. Eleazar Fairbanks was the first pastor.³ Joseph Smith, the father of the prophet, settled a little s. of Palmyra Village in 1819. The plates of the Mormon Bible were said to have been dug up on a hillside in Manchester, Ontario co., a little s. of the Palmyra line. The Smiths were money diggers, and had previously been digging in this locality for gold. The book was printed at the office of the Wayne Sentinel, Martin Harris, a convert, mortgaging his farm to defray the expense.

ROSE⁴—was formed from Wolcott, Feb. 5, 1826. It lies in the interior of the co., n. of the center. Its surface is mostly undulating or level, with drift ridges in the s. e. Several small tracts of swamp land lie in different parts of the town. The streams are small; Mudge, Sherman, and Thomas Creeks are the principal. The soil is a gravelly loam, intermixed with clay on the elevations and with muck on the lowlands. The highest point is 140 ft. above Lake Ontario. Limestone approaches the surface in the n. part, and has been quarried to some extent for lime and for building purposes. Rose Valley, (Rose p. o.), near the center, contains 3 churches, a steam sawmill, and tannery. Pop. 218. Wayne Center, in the w. part, contains 20 houses; Glenmark Falls,⁵ in the n. part, contains 2 gristmills, 2 sawmills, and 10 dwellings. The first settlement was made in 1805, by Caleb Melvin and Alpheus Harman.⁶ The first church (M. E.) was organized in 1824.⁷

SAVANNAH⁸—was formed from Galen, Nov. 24, 1824. It is the s. e. corner town of the co. Its surface is broken by drift ridges in the n., and is low and marshy in the s.; about one-third of the s. part is a woodland marsh, known as Crusee Island. Seneca River forms the s. part of the n. boundary. Crusee Lake is a small, shallow body of water near the center; its outlet, Crusee Creek, flows into Seneca River. The soil in the n. is a sandy and gravelly loam, and in the s. it is principally composed of muck and shell marl.⁹ A tract of about 1,900 acres in the s. e. part is an open marsh, producing coarse grass. Savannah, (p. v.), near the center, is a station upon the N. Y. C. R. R., and contains 20 houses. The first settlement was made by Elias Converse and Joseph Mozier, in 1812.¹⁰ The first preacher was Rev. — Wiers, (Bap.) There is no church in town.

SODUS¹¹—was formed in Jan. 1789. Williamson was taken off in 1802, and Lyons in 1811. It is the central town on the n. border of the co., and is bounded n. by Lake Ontario. A part of Great Sodus Bay lies in the n. e. corner. Its surface in the n. part is mostly level, with a gentle inclination toward the lake. A ridge 140 to 190 ft. higher than the surface of the lake passes through near the center; and s. of this the surface is broken by several ridges extending n. and s. The lake shore varies in height from a low swamp to bluffs 70 ft. high. Second and Salmon Creeks are the principal streams. The soil in the n. part is a clay and sandy loam, and in the s. gravelly loam. The manufacture of lime is extensively carried on in the s. part; and red sandstone is quarried in the s. w. Red oxid of iron (argillaceous ore) is found 2 mi. w. of Sodus Point. Salt was manufactured in 1831

⁵ There is a fall at this place, on Thomas Creek, of 22 ft.

⁶ Among the other early settlers were Milton Salisbury, — Crafts, John Sherman, Joel Bishop, sr., Lott Stuart, Aaron Shepard, Chas. Thomas, — Pomeroy, and — Bannister. The first birth was that of a child of Mr. Salisbury, in 1812; the first marriage, that of Hosea Gillett and Hannah Burnham, in Jan. 1813; and the first death, a child of Harvey Gillett, in 1812. Sally Bishop taught the first school, in 1813; and Oliver Wetmore built the first sawmill, in 1812.

⁷ There are 3 churches in town; Presb., M. E., and Bap.

⁹ The Galen Salt Works of an early period were in this town.

¹¹ Called by the Indians "Assorodas," meaning "silvery water."

and '22. Sodus (p. v.) contains 3 churches, the Sodus Academy, and about 300 inhabitants. Sodus Point, (p. v.), on the lake, w. of the entrance to the bay, is a U. S. port of entry in the Genesee District. It has a lighthouse, a church, a steam sawmill, and about 200 inhabitants. Sodus Center (p. v.) contains a church, foundry, carding mill, grist and saw mill, and 4 houses; Altom (p. v.) a church and 30 houses; South Sodus (p. v.) a church and 30 houses; and Joy (p. v.) a church, shingle factory, and 30 houses. The first settlement was made in 1794, under the auspices of Charles Williamson, agent of the Pulteney Estate.¹ Mr. Williamson caused a road to be cut through from Palmyra to Sodus Point in the spring of 1794. During the summer the town was surveyed, an extensive city plan laid out between Salmon Creek and the Point, and within two years mills were erected on Salmon Creek. A tavern was built at an expense of $5,000, a pleasure yacht was placed upon the bay; and in roads, surveys, buildings, &c., over $20,000 was expended. Thos. Little and — Moffat were the local agents of Mr. Williamson. Of all those connected with these premature improvements, but few remained after they were completed. Elijah Brown was an early settler, 4 mi. w. of the Point, and Amos Richards, 7 mi. w. Ammi Ellsworth came from Conn. in 1801, and settled near the Point. Dr. Wm. Nixon Lummis settled at the Point. He built mills and a forge. A daughter of his is Mrs. Elizabeth Ellet, author of the "Women of the Revolution," and "Domestic History of the Revolution." Col. Peregrine Fitzhugh came from Md. in 1803, with his family and slaves,—over 40 persons in all. Dr. Thos. G. Lawson, an Englishman, settled 1 mi. from the Point, in 1803. After expending considerable money in attempting to form a settlement, he abandoned the enterprise in 1805. In 1799, besides those already mentioned, there were 25 families in town on roads leading to Palmyra and Lyons. The first church (Bap.) was organized in 1805; Elder Seba Norton was the first settled minister.²

WALWORTH³—was formed from Ontario, April 20, 1829. It is the central town on the v. border of the co. Its surface is a high, rolling upland, the ridges being the most elevated land in the co. The Niagara limestone crops out in the n. part, marking its course by a hard, stony surface some rods in width. It is drained n. by several small streams, and s. e. by tributaries of Red Creek. The soil is a rich, sandy loam. Walworth, (p. v.), near the s. e. corner, contains 3 churches, the Walworth Academy, and 230 inhabitants. In the immediate vicinity is an extensive nursery.⁴ West Walworth, (p. v.), in the s. w. part, contains a church and 115 inhabitants. The first settlement was begun about 1800.⁵ The first church (M. E.) was organized previous to 1809.⁶

WILLIAMSON⁷—was formed from Sodus, Feb. 20, 1802. Ontario was taken off in 1807, and Marion in 1825. It lies on the n. border of the co., w. of the center, Lake Ontario forming its n. boundary. Its surface is level in the n., with a gentle inclination toward the lake. In the s. it rises into low ridges. It is drained by a few small streams that flow n. into Lake Ontario. The soil is a sandy, gravelly loam, mixed with clay near the lake shore. Pulteneyville,⁸ (p. v.), on the lake shore, a U. S. port of entry in the Genesee District, contains a church, gristmills, a steam sawmill, and about 450 inhabitants; Williamson, (p. v.), s. of the center, contains 2 churches, a steam flouring mill, and about 300 inhabitants; East Williamson contains 2 churches and 20 houses. The first settlement was made in 1803, by Wm. Waters.⁹ The census reports 8 churches in town.¹⁰

WOLCOTT¹¹—was formed from Junius, (Seneca co.), March 24, 1807. Butler, Huron, and Rose were taken off in 1826. It is the n. e. corner town of the co., Lake Ontario forming its n.

³ Named from Chancellor Walworth.

⁴ This nursery—established in 1840—occupies 75 acres, and produces annually 300,000 trees, mostly sent to New England, N. J., Md., and Va.

⁵ Among the other early settlers were George Millet, in 1802, Daniel Douglass and George Randolph, at West Walworth, Dr. Hurlbut Crittenden, in 1804, Deacon Gideon Hassett, James and Jonathan Hill, Capt. Gilbert, — Hinckley, and John and Marshall Chamberlain. The first death was that of — Green, killed by the fall of a tree, in 1806. The first store was kept by Thomas F. Kempshall.

⁶ There are 5 churches in town; 2 Bap., M. E., Cong., and F. W. Bap.

⁷ Named from Charles Williamson, the first agent of the Pulteney Estate.

⁹ Capt. Sam'l Throop, Jeremiah Selby, John Holmes, and Alpheus Curtis, came in 1806, Maj. Wm. Rogers in 1807, and Dan'l Poppins, Timothy Smith, — Denning, Andrew Connell, Sam'l Ledyard, and Jacob W. Hallett, soon after. The first child born was H. N. Throop, in Nov. 1807. Major Rogers kept the first inn, in 1807; Jos. Colt, the first store. Capt. Sam'l Throop and Jeremiah Selby built the first saw and grist mill.

¹⁰ 2 Presb., M. E., Wes. Meth., Bap., Cong., Ref. Prot. D., and Union.

¹¹ Named from Gov. Oliver Wolcott, of Conn.

boundary. Its surface is undulating, with a general inclination toward the lake. In several localities are tracts of low marsh land. The streams are Wolcott and Big and Little Red Creeks, and several smaller streams, which flow n. into Lake Ontario. A part of Port Bay, in the n. w., Blind Sodus Bay,¹ in the n. e., and two smaller bays, extend inland from the lake. The soil is a sandy and gravelly loam. Iron ore is found in the n. e. part. Wolcott, (p. v.), near the s. w. corner, was incorp. Feb. 24, 1852. It contains 4 churches, an academy,² 2 flouring mills, 2 sawmills, a furnace and agricultural machine shop, carding machine, and carpet and coverlet factory. Pop. 600. Red Creek, (p. v.), in the s. e. part, is incorp., and contains 3 churches, the Red Creek Union Academy, 2 gristmills, 3 sawmills, a woolen factory, furnace, and tannery. Pop. in 1859, 597. Furnace Village,³ in the w. part, contains a furnace, sawmill, and 12 houses. The first settlement was made by Jonathan Melvin, sen., on Lot 50, in 1805.⁴ The first settled minister was Daniel S. Buttrick.⁵

WESTCHESTER COUNTY.

THIS county, constituting one of the original divisions of the State under the English rule, soon after the first conquest, was organized Nov. 1, 1683, with its present limits. It lies upon the e. bank of the Hudson, in the s. e. part of the State, and is bounded on the e. by Conn. and on the s. by Long Island Sound. It is centrally distant 105 mi. from Albany, and contains 525 sq. mi. The surface consists of several ridges of hills parallel to the river and separated by wide valleys. The hills are in two general ranges, the first extending along the river and the second along the Conn. line. They are subdivided into a great number of minor ridges and hills, all extending n. and s. The highest summits are 600 to 1,000 ft. above tide. The valleys, extending n. and s., are continuous, affording ample opportunity for the construction of roads and railroads; and they are generally bordered by gradually sloping hillsides.¹ In some localities the hills are abrupt and rocky. The principal streams are Peekskill Creek, Furnace Brook, Croton, Pocantico, and Neperhan Rivers, and Tibbetts Brook, tributaries of the Hudson; Bronx River, Westchester and Hutchinsons Creeks, Mamaroneck and Byram Rivers, flowing into Long Island Sound; Mahaness and Stamford Mill Rivers, flowing e. into Conn.; and Muscoot Creek, Plum Brook, and Titicus, Croes, and Kicks Rivers, tributaries of the Croton. The lakes are small bodies of water scattered through the hilly portions. The s. e. portion of the co., along the Sound, is deeply indented with bays and estuaries, which in some places are bordered by extensive marshes. Most of the streams which flow into the Sound afford, by the reflux of the tide, an intermitting hydraulic power, which is employed in several places.

The rocks of the co. consist principally of granite and gneiss, of many dissimilar varieties, and of white crystalline limestone. These rocks crop out upon the declivities and summits of most of the hills, affording an abundance of the best kind of building stone. The marble quarries at Sing Sing and other places are extensively wrought, their products affording one of the most valuable exports of the co. Traces of various kinds of ore have been discovered; but all search for profitable metallic veins has proved unsuccessful. Several mineral springs are found in different sections, the principal of which is the Chappaqua Spring, 3 mi. e. of Sing Sing. It emits sulphuretted hydrogen and is said to possess useful medicinal properties. The soil, derived principally from the disintegration of the primitive rocks, is light, sandy, and, naturally, only moderately productive; but, by a continued process of scientific culture, it has been rendered very fertile. Upon the Hudson and the Sound and in various other localities are drift deposits and alluvium, furnishing a much more productive soil. The people are principally engaged in gardening and fruit raising, fattening cattle, and supplying milk for the New York market. Bricks in immense quantities are manufactured along the Hudson for exportation. Other manufactures are largely carried on in the villages adjacent to New York.

This co. is distinguished for beautiful and picturesque scenery, noticeable in nearly every part. The highlands that border upon the Hudson afford an extended view of that river, the Palisades, and of the hilly country of Rockland and Orange. Along the s. e. border fine views are obtained of the Sound, the numerous green islands along the coast, and the adjacent shores of Long Island. In the interior the landscape is agreeably diversified by hills, dales, and clear, running streams. Many wealthy inhabitants of New York have erected beautiful villas and country residences upon the finest sites; and the hills of the co. are now studded with these splendid specimens of architectural art.

In the vicinity of New York are numerous small villages inhabited by mechanics and working men doing business in the city. These people go back and forth daily on the lines of railroad, or by steamboat, living in the country for the sake of economy. A considerable amount of manufactures is carried on at these suburban villages. A large transient population, mostly from New York, make this co. their residence during the summer months.

The co. is a half-shire, the co. buildings being located respectively at Bedford and White Plains.¹ The courthouse at Bedford is a wooden structure; and attached to it is a jail for the temporary confinement of prisoners. The co. buildings at White Plains are of granite, and are the most commodious and costly buildings of the kind in the State.²

The poorhouse is located upon a farm of 173 acres in Mount Pleasant, 5 mi. n. of White Plains. The average number of inmates is 225, supported at a weekly cost of 68½ cts. each. The farm yields a revenue of $2,500. A school is kept throughout the year. The buildings are of stone; and the whole establishment seems to be well arranged.

The Hudson River R. R. extends along the river banks through Yonkers, Greenburgh, Mount Pleasant, Ossining, and Cortlandt. The Harlem R. R. extends n. through the central part of the co., extending through Morrisania, West Farms, Yonkers, East Chester, Scarsdale, Greenburgh, White Plains, Mount Pleasant, New Castle, Bedford, Lewisboro, and North Salem. The New York & New Haven R. R. extends from the Harlem R. R. at East Chester s. through Pelham, New Rochelle, Mamaroneck, Harrison, and Rye. A branch road extends from the Harlem R. R. at Morrisania s. e. about 2 mi. to Port Morris. The other principal public work in the co. is the Croton dam and the great aqueduct which supplies the city of New York with water. Lines of steamers ply between New York and the various ports along the Hudson and East Rivers, affording cheap and easy means of communication with the great city.

Five newspapers are now published in the co.³

When first known to the whites, this co. was occupied by the Mohegans, who were divided into several bands or clans with distinctive names.⁴ They paid tribute to the Five Nations, and were known in early documents as "River Indians."

¹ At the organization of the co. in 1683, the courts were established at Westchester, and were continued there until 1756. A court of sessions was held at East Chester for some time. By act of Dec. 16, 1758, the justices and supervisors were directed to select a new site for a courthouse, which was located at White Plains; and in that year, 1760, and 1762, £2,000 were voted to erect and finish it. It was used until 1774, when it was burned. By an act of May 1, 1786, £1,800 were appropriated for the erection of a courthouse at White Plains and another at Bedford, under the superintendence of Stephen Ward, Ebenezer Lockwood, Jonathan G. Tompkins, Ebenezer Purdy, Thos. Thomas, Richard Hatfield, and Richard Becket, jr. Prisoners had previously been confined in the New York jail; and courts had for a time been held in the Presbyterian church of Bedford. Both buildings thus erected are still standing, and owned by the co. A clerk's office was built at White Plains, in 1830, adjacent to the courthouse, in the old part of the village. The Provincial Convention held its sessions a few days in July, 1776, at the courthouse in White Plains; and in front of it the Declaration of Independence was publicly read upon its receipt by that body. The building, and what remained of the village, were wantonly burned by a New England major on the night of Nov. 6, 1776.

² An act passed March 30, 1855, authorized the county treasurer to loan $35,000 for the erection of a new courthouse, jail, clerk's office, and surrogate's office, upon a site in White Plains, to be selected by the supervisors, and under a committee to be appointed by them. The present buildings were erected in 1856-57, under the superintendence of Abraham Hatfield, States Barton, Wm. Marshall, jr., David Hunt, and Geo. C. Finch, at a cost of $120,000. They are built of granite quarried near the village, and form 3 buildings connected by corridors. The front part is devoted to the records of the clerk and surrogate, is fire-proof throughout, and its spacious rooms are furnished with iron cases for books and papers. The records have been recently bound, and put in complete order for preservation. The middle portion is devoted to court and jury rooms, sheriff's office and residence; and the rear building is the jail, connected with the court room only by a verandah. Prisoners may be brought into court without liability to rescue by a crowd. The cells, 36 in number, are built in 2 tiers in a central block.

By an act of April 16, 1856, the office of Register of Deeds was created, to be filled by election triennially. The act took effect Jan. 1, 1859.

³ The Farmers Museum was published by Milton F. Cushing in 1810.

The Westchester Gazette was published at Peekskill by Robert Crombie about 1810. It was afterward changed to The Westchester and Putnam Gazette. Several changes of proprietors and perhaps of name, occurred when in 1832 it became

The Westchester and Putnam Sentinel, and was published a short time by Dr. Brewer. It was afterward published about 2 years by Samuel Heustis, as The Sentinel. It then passed into the hands of Samuel Marks, who continued it as

The Westchester and Putnam Republican. In 1844 it was sold to Wm. Richards, who changed its name to

The Peekskill Republican. In 1862 Joseph J. Chambers became proprietor, and in 1867 the paper was removed to Sing Sing, where it is now published as

The Republican, by J. H. Platt; J. J. Chambers, editor. The Westchester Patriot was published at West Farms a short time in 1812 by — Lopes.

The Westchester Herald and Putnam Gazette was published at Sing Sing in 1817. It was subsequently published as The Westchester Herald, by Caleb Roscoe. The office was burned in 1850, and the publication has not been resumed.

The Westchester Spy was commenced at White Plains in 1832 by — Harpounding. It was continued by William B. Lamphar, S. G. Arnold, John W. Bell, and others, until 1848, when it was discontinued.

The Hudson River Chronicle was commenced at Sing Sing in 1837 by A. H. Wells. It is now published by Wm. O. Howe.

The Protector, a campaign paper, was published in 1844.

The Port Chester Banner was pub. by Wm. A. McMillan in 1845.

The Eastern State Journal was commenced at White Plains in 1845 by Edmund G. Southerland, its present publisher.

The Westchester and Putnam Democrat was commenced at Peekskill in 18— by Bailey & Marks. It was continued by Samuel Marks, and was for a time discontinued. It was revived by G. K. Lyman, and soon after it passed into the hands of J. Arnold, who continued it until 1861, when Ezra J. Horton became proprietor, and changed its name to

The Highland Eagle. In 1855, J. W. Spaight became the publisher, and in 1858 the paper passed into the hands of Dr. Fenelon Hasbrouck, who changed its name to

The Highland Democrat, and still publishes it.

The Westchester Gazette was commenced at Morrisania in 1840. Stephen Angel was for some time editor. It was discontinued about 1856.

The Westchester County Journal was commenced at Morrisania in 1856 by James Stillman, its present publisher.

The Plain Dealer was removed from Roslyn, and afterward to Glen Cove.

The Westchester Gazetteer was commenced at West Farms in 1840, by H. Coggeshall; it was removed to Mott Haven July 14, 1851, and discontinued in 1852.

The Yonkers Herald was commenced in 1862 by Thos. Smith, its present publisher.

The Westchester News was commenced at New Rochelle in 1858 by Thos. Townsend. It was removed to Yonkers in 1864, and published until Jan. 1866, when it was purchased by M. F. Rowe; and in Feb. following a new paper was issued in its place, called

The Yonkers Examiner, which is still published by M. F. Rowe.

The Mount Vernon Gazette was commenced in 1854 by Egbert A. S. Manning. It was discontinued in 1857.

Settlement began under the Dutch authority, in the southern part, and before the Revolution nearly every part of the co. had been occupied. A large part was embraced by the Cortlandt, Philipsburgh, Pelham, Scarsdale, and Fordham Manors.¹ Of these the first sent a representative to the General Assembly, and the second was forfeited by the attainder of its proprietor in the Revolution. The borough of Westchester, including the present towns of Westchester, West Farms, and Morrisania, was also represented by a member, and had a mayor's court. This was the scene of many events of great importance in the Revolution, and, from its occupying the middle ground between the opposing armies, was alternately overrun and pillaged by the refugees of both.² The southern part was taxed £2,000, May 6, 1784, to repay Revolutionary expenses.

BEDFORD³—was first formed under Connecticut, in May, 1697. Its rights were confirmed by New York in April, 1704; and it was fully organized as a town March 7, 1788. It is an interior town, lying N. E. of the center of the co. Its surface is elevated and broken by small hills and valleys, and is almost entirely available for agricultural purposes. Croton River forms part of the N. boundary; Mahaness River flows through a small portion of the S. part; and Cross River flows through the N. E. corner. Byram Lake lies on the S. border. The soil is generally a good quality of sandy and gravelly loam, but stony on the hills. Bedford, (p. v.), S. E. of the center, is surrounded by hills, one of which on the N. retains its Indian name of "Aspetong." The village is a half-shire, and contains a courthouse,⁴ 2 churches, the Bedford Academy, a Female Institute, and 30 houses. Bedford Station, (p. e.), on the Harlem R. R., contains 10 houses. Katonah, (p. v.), on Cross River, near its junction with the Croton, contains 30 houses. Mount Kisko, (p. v.), a station on the Harlem R. R., on the W. border of the town, contains 200 inhabitants. Whitlockville is a station on the Harlem R. R. near the N. border. The town was mostly included in a purchase made July 1, 1640, by Nathan Turner, for New Haven, and sold the same year by the latter to Andrew Ward, Robert Coe, and 20 others, for £33. Other Indian purchases were made, the last of which was July 24, 1703.⁵ There are 8 churches in town.⁶

CORTLANDT⁷—was formed March 7, 1788. It lies upon the Hudson, in the N. W. corner of the co. Its surface is broken and hilly. The ranges of hills generally extend N. and S. and are separated by narrow valleys. The declivities are often steep and nearly precipitous. Anthony's Nose,⁸ on the N. line, 1,228 ft. above the river, is the highest land in the co. Although very broken, the surface generally is susceptible of cultivation. The principal streams are Croton River, flowing across the S. part, Furnace Brook, Peekskill Hollow Creek, and Gregory's Brook. The soil is generally a sandy and gravelly loam, with a strip of clay along the river. Among the mountains are found a variety of interesting minerals.⁹ Brick is extensively manufactured.¹⁰

Cortlandt Patent was granted June 17, 1697, to Stephanus Van Cortlandt, with an annual quitrent of 40 shillings. It included the present towns of Cortlandt, Yorktown, Somers, and North Salem.

Philipsburgh Patent was granted June 12, 1703, to Frederick Phillips, at an annual quitrent of £4 12s. It included the present towns of Greenburgh, Mount Pleasant, and Ossining.

Pelham Patent was granted Oct. 25, 1687, to John Pell, and included the present town of Pelham and a part of New Rochelle.

Fordham Patent was granted in 1671 to John Archer, and included 1,263 acres in the present town of West Farms.

Scarsdale Patent was granted March 21, 1701, to Caleb Heathcote, subject to an annual quitrent of £5. It included the present towns of Scarsdale, New Castle, North Castle, and a part of White Plains.

² Two classes of brigands, equally destitute of principle, but professing attachment to opposite interests, infested the co., committing atrocious crimes without punishment, and often preying upon their nominal friends with as little mercy as upon their avowed enemies. Of these, the "Cowboys" professed tory sentiments, while the "Skinners" were ostensibly attached to the American cause. The two parties often operated in concert, the Cowboys bringing contraband goods from New York to exchange for the property plundered by the Skinners; and, when a pretext was necessary, a skirmish would occur, and the goods from the enemy would be openly borne away, as if lawfully captured.—Bolton's Westchester, I, p. 211.

of 1683 and '84, by which Bedford and Rye were included in New York; and in April, 1704, a patent with town privileges was granted by that colony. In 1690 there were 21 proprietors residing in town.

⁴ County courts are held alternately here and at White Plains. The village was burned in the Revolution by a party of British light horse, on their route to Fairfield, Conn. By an act passed April 11, 1786, courts were ordered to be held in the Presb. church until the courthouse should be rebuilt, or till the further order of the Legislature.

⁵ The title to 5,115 acres of land in this town became vested in Jacobus Van Cortlandt at an early period. This estate was divided in 1743, Frederick Van Cortlandt receiving 1,624, Abram De Payster 1,110, John Chambers 1,282, and Peter Jay 1,399 acres. Gov. John Jay, a son of Peter Jay, became invested with a large portion of the last mentioned allotment. The estate is still owned by his descendants. On a tract known as "the Hop Grounds" are still living many families of the same name as the first purchasers. Among these are families named Green, Miller, Holme, Roberts, Ambler, Clark, Ayers, Westcott, Simpkin, Mead, Webb, Clason, and Higgins. Tradition locates in this town the scene of a bloody engagement fought in Feb. 1644, between the Dutch and Indians, in which 500 of the latter perished.

¹⁰ There were in Aug. 1856, 34 establishments worked as separate yards, 11 of which used steam power and 9 made pressed brick. This business began here about 1812-14, and was most thriving from 1847 to 1864. Large quantities of these bricks were used on the Croton Aqueduct. The business gives employ-

Peekskill,¹ (p. v.) upon Peekskill Bay, in the n. w. part of the town, was incorp. April 17, 1816. It is situated in an elevated valley surrounded by heights which afford extensive views of the river. It contains 10 churches, the Peekskill Academy, 4 boarding schools, a bank, newspaper office, and several manufactories.² It is connected by a steam ferry with Caldwells Landing, and by a daily steamer and line of sloops with New York. It is a station upon the H. R. R. R. Pop. 3,538. Verplancks Point, (Verplanck p. o.), upon the Hudson, near the center of the w. border of the town, was laid out in 1836. It contains a church, steamboat landing, several important brick manufactories, and 1,456 inhabitants.³ Croton⁴ (Croton Landing p. o.) is a n. e. station, in the s. part of the town. It contains 4 churches, a rolling mill, wire mill, and several brick-yards. Pop. 400. Crugers⁵ (Boscobel p. o.) is a landing and n. e. station, 4 mi. s. of Peekskill. Anneville, a small village on Peekskill Creek, contains a church and wire mill.⁶ Cortlandville, near the Van Cortlandt mansion, contains a church, a planing mill, and about 20 houses. Oregon, on the line of Putnam co., contains a rolling mill and a wire mill. Mount Airy, n. of Croton, is a hamlet. Croton Point⁷ is a peninsula in the s. part of the town, devoted chiefly to vineyards. Montroses Point is a peninsula s. of Verplancks and separated from it by Meanagh Creek. Daniel Birdsall, Nathaniel Brown, Joseph Travis, and Capt. Isaac Conklin settled at Peekskill, in 1764.⁸ There are 18 churches in town.⁹

EAST CHESTER¹⁰—was recognized as a town March 7, 1788. It is an interior town, lying in the s. part of the co. Its surface is broken by ridges extending n. and s. and separated by narrow valleys. Bronx River,¹¹ forming the n. boundary, and Hutchinsons or East Chester Creek,¹² forming a portion of the s. boundary, are the principal streams. The soil is a sandy and gravelly loam, with some alluvium along the river intervals. Marble is extensively quarried along the w. border.¹³ The Harlem R. R. extends along the valley of the Bronx, and the N. Y. & N. H. R. R. crosses the s. part of the town at nearly right angles to the hills, requiring heavy cuttings and embankments. A portion of the territory of the town is public land, under the management of 3 trustees. East Chester, (p. v.) at the head of sloop navigation on Hutchinson Creek, contains 2 churches and 551 inhabitants. Mount Vernon, (p. v.) a station at the junction of the Harlem and N. H. R. R.s, was incorp. Dec. 13, 1853. It contains 4 churches, several private schools, and 1,161 inhabitants. West Mount Vernon contains 630 inhabitants; East Mount Vernon 275 inhabitants; and Waverly and Washingtonville are suburban villages, inhabited principally by mechanics and men doing business in New York. Bronxville, (p. v.) on the line of Yonkers, is a n. e. station, and contains a manufactory of carriage axles. Tuckahoe (p. v.) is a n. e. station, near the marble quarries. Burpos Corners is a small settlement on the n. border. Fleetwood and Jacksonville are places projected ment to 1,360 men, and turns out 80,000,000 to 90,000,000 of bricks annually. The pressed brick made here are known in market as "Croton fronts," and sell at from $5 to $9 per M. There is a small firebrick manufactory at Peekskill, using clay from N. J.

² Among the manufactories are 6 iron foundries, chiefly engaged in the manufacture of stoves and plows, and giving employment to 300 men; 2 machine shops, 2 tobacco factories, a pistol and gun factory, tannery, and gin distillery.

³ Named from the family of Verplancks, former owners. This point lies opposite Stony Point; and upon it Fort La Fayette was erected during the Revolution. King's Ferry, a part of an important military route, was between the two points. The fort was captured by the enemy, under Sir Henry Clinton in person, June 1, 1779, but was abandoned Oct. 21 of that year. Col. Livingston held command of this place in 1780, at the time of Arnold's treason; and the headquarters of Gen. Washington were located here for some time. This locality was called by the Indians "Meanagh," and was sold to Stephanus Van Cortlandt in 1683, with the lands s. called "Appamaghogh." A small creek n. was called "Tammoesa." The purchase was confirmed by patent, with a quitrent of 2 bushels of wheat. About 1734 it was held by John Lent, at an annual rent of one pepper-corn.—Bolton's Hist., I, 94. The population mentioned in the text is much less in winter.

⁷ By the Indians called Senesqua Neck, and long known as "Tallers Point," from Wm. Teller and Sarah his wife, first owners. The ship Vulture anchored opposite this point Sept. 21, 1780, with André's mission.

⁸ The first store was built by Daniel Birdsall, in the vicinity of the Middle Dock. Capt. Swin is said to have sailed the first sloop from Pemat's Dock, in 1773.—Bolton's Westchester, I, 62. Many stirring events of the Revolution occurred in this vicinity, and the country suffered much from the enemy's incursions. In March, 1777, Col. Bird landed with 500 men, and the few Americans stationed here fired the storehouses and retired. In Sept. 1777, the whole village was sacked and burned. Edmund Palmer, a tory spy, was hanged on Gallows Hill, 3 mi. n. of the village; and Daniel Strang, another spy from the enemy, was executed on a pear tree near the present academy. John Paulding, one of the captors of André, was a native of this village, and received from the State a farm in this town. His remains repose in the Episcopal graveyard, 2 mi. n. of the village, where a neat monument was erected, at the expense of the corporation of New York, in 1827; and the work was completed with imposing ceremonies Nov. 22 of that year. Gen. Pierre Van Cortlandt formerly resided 2 mi. n. of Peekskill; and at this place Gen. McDougal posted his advanced guard when the enemy took possession of Peekskill in March, 1777. East of the Van Cortlandt mansion stands St. Peter's Church, an old, dilapidated building, erected in 1767. The united parishes of St. Peter's and St. Philip's were endowed by Col. Beverly Robinson, and the title was confirmed Mar. 27, 1794. The property has been sold by order of the court of Chancery, and the avails equally divided between the two churches.

¹³ The marble is of the variety called dolomite. The N. Y. Custom House and the City Hall at Brooklyn were built of this material. The Custom House at New Orleans is being constructed of stone from these quarries.

by building associations. This town appears to have been a favorite residence of the natives; and when first settled by the whites it contained traces of former occupation. The Indian title was acquired in 1654 and confirmed in 1654, 1666, and 1700. Thos. Pell, the purchaser, granted it to James Eustis and Philip Pinkney, of Fairfield, Conn., and their associates. In 1665, 26 persons signed a covenant for the security of their mutual rights.¹ The settlers were incorp. by patent, March 9, 1666,² and for many years were engaged in a controversy with Westchester concerning the bounds of their grant. A house was fortified in Oct. 1675, as a place of refuge from Indians. The first schoolhouse was agreed upon in 1683; and the site has ever since been occupied for this purpose. A townhouse was voted in 1685. East Chester was celebrated for the interest it took in behalf of Leisler.³ The Cong. church of this town was formed in 1665; and a place of worship was built about 1700.⁴ The town suffered greatly in the Revolution, from its being the middle ground between the opposing armies. A farm of 252½ acres was granted in this town to David Williams, one of the captors of André, June 16, 1783. He afterward removed to Schoharie co., where he died.

GREENBURGH⁵—was formed March 7, 1788. It lies on the w. border of the co., s. of the center. Its surface is much broken by hills parallel to the Hudson, and separated by narrow valleys, through which flow several streams, the principal of which is Neperhan or Sawmill Creek. Hudson River forms the w. boundary, and Bronx River the e. The soil is clay and sandy loam. Several marble quarries are worked near the Hudson. Hastings, (Hastings upon Hudson p. o.) near the s. w. corner, a station on the H. R. R. R. and a steamboat landing, contains 2 churches, steam marble works, limekilns, and a limited number of manufactories. Pop. 1,135. Dobbs Ferry,⁶ (p. v.), a station on the H. R. R. R. and a landing on the river, contains 3 churches and 1,040 inhabitants. Irvington,⁷ (p. v.), a station on the H. R. R. R. and a landing on the river, contains 2 churches and 599 inhabitants. Tarrytown,⁸ (p. v.), on the n. border, a steamboat landing and a station on the H. R. R. R., contains 4 churches, the Paulding Institute, and about 3,000 inhabitants. Harts Corners, (Moringville p. o.) a station on the Harlem R. R., is a hamlet; Middletown is a settlement below Tarrytown; Halls Corners,⁹ a neighborhood in the n. part; Ashford, a settlement 3 mi. below; Abbotsford, a locality near Dobbs Ferry; and Greenville, a neighborhood in the s. part. The first Indian purchase was made in 1649. In 1662 Connecticut bought all the Indian lands w. to the North River, and in 1681-82-84 Frederick Philipse bought the lands now included in this and other towns which, by Patent of 1693, were formed into the Philipsburgh Manor. In 1779 they were forfeited by the attainder of Col. F. Philipse and sold for small sums to the former tenants,¹⁰ under a pre-emption clause in the general act of May 12, 1784, for the sale of confiscated estates. The census reports 6 churches in town.¹¹

HARRISON¹²—was formed March 7, 1788. It is an interior town, near the e. border, s. of the center of the co., its n. e. corner touching the line of Conn. Its surface is generally level. Blind

² Philip Pinkney, James Eustis, and Wm. Haldon were named in this patent; and these persons resigned their trust to the inhabitants soon after.

⁵ In the Dutch "Greinburgh," literally "Grain town." In some early deeds it is called "Lawrence's Plantation;" and by the Indians, Weckquasack, Weckquasqueck, Wiequoshook,—in pure Algonquin, Weck-quos-guck, the place of the bark kettle.—Bolton's Hist. Westchester Co., I, p. 168. This town was inhabited by a powerful tribe of Indians known as the Wick-quos-quicks, called by the English Wickers Creeks; and until the middle of the last century the natives were numerous. A cold blooded murder of an Indian was avenged 30 years afterward by his nephew, in Sept. 1691. The Dutch attempted to retaliate, but without success. In Feb. 1641, the Mohawks made a descent upon these Indians, who fled to the Dutch for protection. The soldiers of the fort by night crossed to New Jersey, where the Indians had assembled, and wantonly butchered nearly 100; and 30 were murdered at Cortland Hook. This barbarity aroused 11 tribes to vindictive war, in which the Dutch settlements around Fort Amsterdam were laid waste. A peace was agreed upon April 23, 1643, but was not fully established for many years.

¹⁰ Among these were families named Van Tassel, Van Wart, Odell, Lawrence, Post, Archer, Hart, Anker, Dyckman, and Requa.

Brook¹ forms a part of the n. boundary, and Mamaroneck Creek a part of the w. Rye Pond² lies on the n. border, and St. Mary's Pond on the w. The soil is a fertile, gravelly loam. Purchase, in the n., is a hamlet, containing 2 Friends' meeting houses. Harrison is a p. o. The first settlement commenced at an early period. The census reports 2 Friends' meeting houses³ in town.

LEWISBORO⁴—was formed March 7, 1788, as "Salem." Its name was changed to "South Salem" April 6, 1806, and to its present name Feb. 13, 1840. A part of North Salem was annexed April 26, 1844. It lies on the n. border, near the n. e. corner, and forms the eastern angle of the co. Its surface is much broken and in places mountainous. Croton River forms its w. boundary. Cross River flows through a small portion of the central southern part. Waccaback Lake⁵ and North and South Ponds are in the n. part, and Cross Pond is on the line of Poundridge. The soil is a clayey and sandy loam. South Salem, (p. v.,) in the n. part, is a scattered village, containing a church and 15 houses. Cross River, (p. v.,) in the s. corner, contains 2 churches, several manufactories, and 20 houses. Goldens Bridge (p. o.) is a station on the Harlem R. R. Vista, (p. o.,) in the s. e. corner, is a small settlement. Lewisboro (p. o.) is in the s. part. Settlement was commenced under the authority of Connecticut, at an early period. This region was the scene of several Revolutionary incidents.⁶ There are 7 churches in town.⁷

MAMARONECK⁸—was recognized as a town March 7, 1788. It lies upon L. I. Sound, in the s. e. part of the co. Its surface is broken by low ridges of gneiss, generally extending n. and s. Mamaroneck Creek, forming the e. boundary, and its tributary, Sheldrake Creek, are the principal streams. The coast is deeply indented by several bays, which divide it into numerous peninsulas and headlands. Mamaroneck, (p. v.,) near the head of Mamaroneck Bay, is partly in Rye. It contains 2 churches, (Prot. E. and M. E.,) and several manufactories not at present in operation. Oriente,⁹ Washingtonville, Chatsworth,¹⁰ and Hickory Grove are village plats and prospective villages. Kelloggsville, on the line of New Rochelle, has an extensive tide mill. The Indian title was obtained in 1640 and in 1662. John Richbell received a ground brief from the Dutch, and letters patent from Gov. Lovelace, Oct. 16, 1668, to three necks of land, at a quitrent of 8 bushels of winter wheat. In 1700 Caleb Heathcote acquired title to most of the eastern neck, with other lands, which was confirmed March 21, 1701. A portion descended in marriage to James De Lancey, afterward Governor of the colony, and ancestor of the present Episcopal Bishop of the Diocese of Western New York. Settlement began about 1660; and the village of Mamaroneck is one of the most ancient in the co. The town records date back to 1697; they were suspended from April, 1776, to April, 1785. During this period numerous events of historical interest occurred in this town. The day before the battle of White Plains, Col. Smallwood surprised and cut off a large body of the enemy under Major Rogers, stationed upon Nelson Hill. Col. White, of the Continental army, was overtaken near this place by Lieut. Hickford, and some thirty stragglers, who had taken refuge upon the ice, were killed.

MORRISANIA¹¹—was formed from West Farms, Dec. 7, 1855. It is the s. w. corner town of the co., lying upon Harlem River, contiguous to New York. Its surface is broken by several low ridges which extend n. and s. Most of its surface is occupied by village plats laid out since the extension of railways, and is inhabited by persons doing business in New York. Morrisania, (p. v.,) a R. R. station, in the n. e. corner, contains the St. Joseph's Ursuline Convent, an academy and free school, and 2,587 inhabitants. Mott Haven, (p. v.,)¹² opposite Harlem, contains 2

² This pond covers 210 acres, and abounds in pickerel. It discharges into Bronx River; and it was at one time proposed to take this water to supply New York City.

³ One of these was built before the Revolution, and was used by the Americans during the war as a hospital.

⁸ Pronounced both Mam-a-ro-neck and Mam-ar-o-neck. The latter is more generally used, and is often contracted to "Morneck" or "Mar-neck," in common speech. It has been variously written Momoronack, Mamarinck, Merinack, and Momoronuck. It has been by some supposed to signify "the place of rolling stones."—Bolton's Westchester, I, 282. There was an Indian chief of this name, who resided upon the Croton.

churches, an extensive iron foundry, and 843 inhabitants. Port Morris is a harbor of 60 ft. depth; and it is proposed to land vessels here that do not go to New York Harbor. A branch of the Harlem R. R. 2½ mi. long connects Wilton, Old Morrisania, East Morrisania, West Morrisania, East Melrose, Eltona, Woodstock, Claremont, and Port Morris are suburban village plats. A tract known as Broncks Land,² granted to Richard Morris in 1668; and on May 9, 1697, leased for the township or Manor of Morrisania, with a quitrent of 6 shilling; it formed one of the precincts of Westchester parish. Early in the Revolutionary war an army was stationed here; but after the disasters of Long Island it retreated, and the troops were posted there, but not without annoyance from partisan companies. In 1777 the barracks and the courthouse at White Plains were burned the same day as was the courthouse at White Plains.

MOUNT PLEASANT—was formed March 7, 1788. Ossining lies upon the Hudson, near the center of the w. border of the co. Its principal ridges, the principal of which are Buttermilk and Chappaqua Hills. The boundary; and Neperhan and Pocantico Rivers flow obliquely across the town, the soil is clayey and sandy loam, well adapted to cultivation. There are several churches. Pleasantville,⁴ (p. v.), near the n. line, contains 2 churches and a school. Neperhan (p. o.), a station upon the Harlem R. R. contains a school. Mantown, on Pocantico River, in the s. w. part of the town, is a station and contains 5 churches, the Irving and Tarrytown Institutes, and about 1,000 inhabitants. Hollow,⁵ Upper Cross Roads, and Lower Cross Roads were included in the Manor of Philipsburgh, granted to Frederick Philipse Dec. 9, 1702, he granted to his son Adolph the portion of the manor now comprising this town. The title descended to his son Frederick, and was forfeited to the latter of the same name in 1779. One of the principal grants was made to Gerard G. Beeckman. Many Revolutionary associations are connected with this town. The census reports 6 churches.

NEW CASTLE¹—was formed from North Castle, March 18, 1788, and annexed May 12, 1846. It is an interior town, lying n. of the center of the co. much broken by hills having a general course a little e. of n., the principal ridges are the Prospect and the Chappaqua Hills, terminating in Mount Kisko. The Neperhan and Pocantico Rivers rise in this town. Upon the borders are Chappaqua, W. Croton, and Croton Lake. Chappaqua Sulphur Springs, 4 mi. n. e. from Sing Sing, is famous for its mineral water. The soil is a gravelly clay and sandy loam. Mount Kisko is a station, on the line of Bedford. New Castle (p. o.) is a station upon Kirby Pond, near the line of Bedford. Chappaqua⁸ (p. o.) is a station on the s. line. Sarlesville is a hamlet, near the center of the town; and generally transacted. This town was included within Richbell's purchase, was sold to Caleb Heathcote, and was patented to him and 10 associates. It was afterward known as the "West Patent of Northcastle," or simply as the "West Patent." The settlement began about 1720, or a little earlier. At the time of the Revolutionary war the precincts of Rye parish. It was greatly annoyed by sudden incursions of the British. St. George's church was for a long time occupied as a guardhouse and barracks. The census reports 5 churches in town.¹¹

NEW ROCHELLE—was recognized as a town March 7, 1788. It lies upon the s. part of the co., and extends northward in a long, narrow strip.

The bridge at Harlem leading to Mott Haven is now free, the charter of its former owners having expired in 1868. The bridge was formerly known as Macomb's Bridge is removed, and is about being rebuilt.

⁴ Formerly called "Clark's Corners."

⁵ Sleepy Hollow is noted for being the scene of one of Irving's celebrated legends. The Dutch church at this place was formed in 1697, and the edifice erected in 1699. The communion table and service plate, originally given by the first lord of the manor, are still preserved.

⁶ 2 Ref. Prot. D. M. E. F. ⁷ Called by the Indians "Shá-pa-quá."

¹⁰ These patentees were Hens Depeyster, Caleb Heathcote, Richard Slater, Lancelot Cosens. It was settled by Hyatt, Underhill, Haight, Van Tassel, Griffen, Tompkins, and Merritt.

uneven and in some parts stony. Davenports Neck,¹ a peninsula containing 200 acres, and several fine islands in the Sound, belong to this town.² Crystal Lake, n. of the village, is chiefly celebrated for its ice, large quantities of which are annually "harvested." The soil is fertile and peculiarly adapted to fruit raising.³ New Rochelle, (p. v.) upon an estuary from the Sound, in the n. part of the town, was incorp. Oct. 5, 1857. It contains 6 churches, several private schools, and about 2,000 inhabitants. A portion of the village and the lands surrounding it are occupied by elegant villas and country residences of persons doing business in New York. The steamboat landing is a half mile s. w. of the village, on a small island connected with the main land by a stone causeway. The village is a station on the N. Y. & N. H. R. R. Beechwood Cemetery, incorp. Jan. 30, 1854, lies a mile w. of the village. West New Rochelle, Petersville,⁴ and Upper New Rochelle are scattered villages, mostly inhabited by Germans. This town was embraced in the Manor of Pelham, and was sold by John Pell, Sept. 20, 1689, to Jacob Leisler, for the settlement of a company of French Huguenots. These people are said to have been brought over in one of the king's ships, and to have landed on the n. n. part of Davenports Neck, then called "Bauffets" or "Bouffoys Point."⁵ They mostly purchased under Leisler in 1690. There were 23 freeholders in town in 1708. The town records commence Nov. 1, 1699, and until 1735 were kept partly in French. They were suspended from April 2, 1776, to June 24, 1783. A French church was organized in 1689, and in 1709 most of the members conformed to the Episcopal faith; and this denomination are now owners of property given by Pell. The Presbyterians also claim succession from the first French church, a part of the members of which did not conform.⁶

NORTH CASTLE⁷—was formed March 7, 1788. New Castle was taken off in 1791. It occupies a long, narrow strip on the n. border of the co., adjoining Stamford and Greenwich, Conn. Its surface is much broken by hills,⁸ particularly in the w. part. It is drained by Maharness, Byram, and Bronx Rivers and their branches. Rye Pond lies on the s. border; Byram Pond on the line of Bedford; and Wampus Pond on the line of New Castle. Cobamong Pond, a mile n. of Byram Pond, has no inlet and is very deep. The soil is clay and sandy loam. North Castle (p. v.) contains a church and a few houses. Armonk,⁹ (p. v.) near the center, contains 3 churches, a woolen factory, and 20 houses. Kensico,¹⁰ (p. v.) in the s. part, contains several manufactories and 103 inhabitants. Quarter Station is on the N. H. R. R., in the extreme s. part. The first settlements commenced at a very early period.¹¹ The census reports 7 churches in town.¹²

NORTH SALEM¹³—was formed March 7, 1788. A part was annexed to Lewisboro in 1844. It is the n. n. corner town of the co. Its surface is hilly, the summits rising 100 to 300 ft. above the valleys. Croton River forms the w. boundary. Titicus¹⁴ River, a principal branch of the Croton, flows w. from Conn. through near the center. The valley of this stream varies in width from $\frac{1}{2}$ mi. to $1\frac{1}{2}$ mi., and is bordered by steep hills. Peach Pond, on the n. border, covers 400 acres.

² Davids or Hewletts Island. Named from Thaddeus Davids, the owner. It contains about 100 acres, and is fitted up for picnic and pleasure parties. Steamboat excursions are occasionally made thither from the city. Goat, Marketta, Whortleberry, Locust, and Van Cleeve Islands also belong to this town. Burdens Point, on Davenport Neck, is also a place of resort.

³ From 12 to 20 acres are devoted to raising blackberries, —chiefly the variety known as the "New Rochelle or Lawton blackberry," originally a seedling from the fields, which has proved of much value. There are also extensive nurseries in town.

⁴ Formerly called "New Jerusalem."

⁶ There are now 8 churches in town; 3 M. E., Prot. E., Presb., Bap., Af. Meth., and R. C.

⁹ Formerly "NYN Square," and still often called by that name.

¹⁰ Formerly "Robbins Mills."

¹¹ The Indian title to this town was obtained by Caleb Heath cote and others between 1600 and 1706, and confirmed by several patents. Of these the "Middle Patent," embracing 1,600 acres, was granted Feb. 17, 1701-02, and the w. portion was confirmed to Anne Bridges and her associates Sept. 26, 1708. A partition of the Middle and West Patents took place June 23, 1706. The allotments were balloted for and sold to numerous persons, of whom many named Brundage, Griffin, Lockland, Sillick, Roofield, Clapp, and others are descendants.—Bolton's Westchester, I, p. 466.

Major André immediately after his arrest was sent to Col. Jameson, stationed in this town; and from here he was allowed, through the inadvertence of that officer, to notify Arnold of his arrest.

¹² 3 M. E., 3 Prot. E., and Friends.

¹⁴ Otherwise called Muttighooms. The name in the text perhaps has been changed from this, and is said to have been derived from an Indian chief.

Beaver Pond is a small sheet of water near the n. line. The soil is better adapted to grazing than to grain raising. Turkey Hill lies in the s. w. part. North Salem,¹ (p. v.) in the n. part contains 2 churches, a paper mill, and 30 houses. Salem Center,² (p. o.), a hamlet, is the seat of the North Salem Academy.³ Purdys Station, (p. o.), on the Harlem R. R., on the w. border, contains 2 churches and a small woolen factory. Croton Falls, (p. o.), in the n. w. corner, is a station on the Harlem R. R. The first settlement commenced at a very early period, mostly by immigrants from Conn. The census reports 7 churches in town.⁴

OSSINING⁵—was formed from Mount Pleasant, May 2, 1845. It lies upon the Hudson, n. of the center of the co. Its surface is mostly a hilly upland, the ridges extending parallel to the river. Prospect Hill is a commanding eminence on the s. line of the town. Pocantico River forms its n. boundary. Marble is extensively quarried, and traces of several metals have been found.⁶ The soil is a productive, gravelly and clayey loam. Sing Sing, (p. v.) upon the Hudson, near the center of the w. border of the town, was incorp. April 2, 1813. It is beautifully situated upon ground gradually rising from the river to the height of 180 ft., and at most points affording fine views of Tappan Bay and the opposite shore of the Hudson. It contains 4 churches, the Mount Pleasant Academy,⁷ a female seminary, and several other popular female schools. Pop. about 3,500. This village is chiefly noted for being the seat of one of the N. Y. State prisons. The prison was erected at this place in 1825, with a view of employing the convict labor upon the marble quarries. It receives convicts from certain southern and eastern counties, as specified by statute.⁸ Prospect Hill⁹ is a scattered settlement along the s. border. Spring Valley, n. of Sing Sing, and Sparta, s. of Sing Sing, are hamlets. This town was included in the Manor of Philipsburgh, and was settled by the Dutch previous to the commencement of the last century. The lands were forfeited by the attainder of Frederick Philipse during the Revolution.¹⁰ The first church was organized at a very early period, but the exact date is lost.¹¹ The Dale Cemetery, containing 47 acres, $\frac{1}{2}$ mi. n. of Sing Sing, was incorporated January 14, 1851.

PELHAM¹²—was formed March 7, 1788. It lies on Long Island Sound, in the s. part of the co., on the n. border, and it embraces several islands in Long Island Sound.¹³ Pelham Neck¹⁴ is a peninsula extending into the Sound; upon it are several elegant country seats. Its surface is undulating, the valleys ranging n. and s. Hutchinsons Creek¹⁵ forms the w. boundary. The soil is mostly of an excellent quality of sandy and gravelly loam. Pelhamville, near the n. angle

The Hudson River R. R. crosses the prison grounds under two broad arches with an intervening walled space. The male prison is 484 by 44 ft. and 5 stories high, and has 1,000 cells. The w. yard is inclosed by 2 buildings 40 ft. wide, 2 stories high, extending from the main prison to the river, and occupied by kitchens, hospital, chapel, and shops. The yard thus formed is 492 by 412 ft. and has a range of shops 40 ft. wide, parallel to the main prison. There are also workshops on the n. The female prison, upon the same premises, but under separate management, is built of rough marble taken from the State quarries. It stands on an elevated site, n. of the n. n., with a colonnade of the Ionic order across the end fronting the river. It was built in 1835-40, and receives female convicts sentenced to State prison from every co. in the State: it contains 116 cells. By an act of April 18, 1860, the Inspectors of State Prisons were directed to sell such of the premises at this place as are not required for prison purposes, at a price not less than $250 per acre, and to appropriate the moneys thus received to building and repairing such works at the prison as they may deem proper. Several large file factories are located at Sing Sing.

⁹ Families named Ward, Orser, Crank, Baselle, Ackert, Parry, Merritt, McCord, Bishop, Balyas, Storm, Jones, Millet, and Ryder, purchased under the Commissioners of Forfeiture.

¹⁰ There are 6 churches in town; 3 Prot. E., Bap., M. E., and Presb.

Harts Island, or "Spectacle Island," has an area of 85 acres. Hunters Island, belonging to the estate of E. Desbrosses Hunter, has an area of 280 acres, and was formerly connected with the mainland by a stone causeway and bridge. High Island lies near the s. point of Pelham Neck.

of the town, is a new.y surveyed village and station on the N. Y. & N. H. R. R. Pelham is a p. o. on the e. border. Prospect Hill is a locality near the center. Pelham Priory¹ is the seat of a young ladies' seminary, established by the late Rev. Robert Bolton and conducted by his daughters. A settlement was made in this town in 1642,² by Mrs. Anne Hutchinson, who was driven from Massachusetts on account of her religious belief. There is 1 church (Prot. E.) in town.

POUNDRIDGE³—was formed March 7, 1788. It lies in the e. part of the co., its s. line bordering on Stamford and New Canaan, Conn. Its surface is hilly and much broken. The Stony Hills occupy the n. part and extend 3 or 4 mi. in a n. e. direction, with steep, craggy sides and rocky summits. Cross River flows through the extreme n. corner, Stamford Mill River flows s. through the e. part, and Maharness River forms a part of the s. w. boundary. Cross Pond is on the e. line. The soil is a gravelly loam. Poundridge, (p. o.) near the center, is a small settlement with 2 churches. Boutontown is a hamlet, in the n. corner. The first settlement commenced near the center of the town, in 1744, by Capt. Joseph Lockwood and associates, from Stamford, Conn. There are 3 churches in town; M. E., Prot. Meth., and Presb.

RYE⁴—was formed March 7, 1788. It lies on the e. border of the s. part of the co. It is a narrow, irregular strip, bordering on the Sound and Greenwich, Conn. Its surface is broken and rocky. Byram River⁵ forms a small part of the e. boundary, and Blind Brook a part of the w. The soil is chiefly clay. There are quarries of hard, blue granite in town. Along the coast are several small islands.⁶ The mirage is frequently seen upon the coast, bringing to view the shore of Long Island with great distinctness. Rye, (p. v.) a station on the N. Y. & N. H. R. R., contains 3 churches, a private seminary, and 300 inhabitants. Milton, in the s. part, is a hamlet, with 1 church. Ryebeach is a place of resort during the hot season. Port Chester, (p. v.) a station on the N. Y. & N. H. R. R., contains 5 churches, several private seminaries, extensive manufactories,⁷ and 1,695 inhabitants. Kingstreet is a fine agricultural district, extending nearly 7 miles n. of Port Chester. The first settlement was commenced on Manursing Island.⁸ The census reports 9 churches in town.⁹

SCARSDALE¹⁰—was formed March 7, 1788. It lies in the interior of the s. part of the co. Its surface is broken by ridges and hills. Bronx River forms the w. boundary, and the e. angle borders on the Mamaroneck. Hutchinson and Sheldrake Creeks rise in this town. The soil is a clayey and sandy loam. It has no villages, and is the least populous town in the co. Scarsdale, (p. o.) in the w. part, contains a church and a few houses. Scarsdale Station, on the Harlem R. R., is on the w. border of the town. In the s. corner of the town is a Friends meeting house, on a site used for that purpose long before the Revolution. Gov. Tompkins was a native of this town; and Chief Justice Morris and Maj. Wm. Popham—for many years clerk of the Court of Exchequer—resided here. The census reports 2 churches in town; Prot. E. and Friends.

SOMERS¹¹—was formed March 7, 1788, as "Stephentown." Its name was changed April 6, 1808. A part was annexed to New Castle in 1846. It lies on the n. border of the co., near the ³ Named from the ancient Indian pound, or deer trap, which formerly stood at the foot of a high ridge s. of the present village.—Bolton's Westchester, II, p. 1. This town was embraced in Turner's Purchase of 1640, and once formed part of Stamford, Conn. The Patent of Stamford, granted May 26, 1685, included a portion of this town. In the settlement of boundaries in 1731, four miles were taken from Conn. A grant was made March 2, 1701, to Robert Walters, John Cholwell, Leigh Atwood, Cornelius De Peyster, Richard Slater, Barne Cozens, Lancaster Symes, Matthew Clarkson, Robert Lurting, Peter Matthews, and Caleb Heathcote. This grant was subsequently known as the "East Patent." It was sold Aug. 7, 1766, under "an act for the more effectual collecting of his Majesty's quitrents." Families named Lockwood, Ambler, Forster, Bishop, Ferris, Hoyt, Holley, Brown, Sillick, and Scofield were purchasers under this sale. Until 1775 the town formed one of the precincts of Rye. In 1821, 900 acres were sold to satisfy the State claim to quitrents in the East Patent.

⁶ Manursing, called by the Indians "Minnewies," or Pine, Hawthaw, Great, Middle, and Little Captains Islands.

⁷ These consist of a foundry, edge tool, bolt, screw, and rod factory, tide gristmill, and a last and shoe factory.

center. Its surface is broken by ridges in the s.; in other parts it spreads out into level plain. Croton River forms the s. e. boundary. Muscoot River¹ and Plum Brook flow s. through the town into Croton River. Croton Lake, the fountain head of the Croton Water Works, lies in the s. w. corner, extending into Yorktown. The soil is a sandy and gravelly loam. Somers, (p. v.) in the n. e. part, contains 2 churches, a bank, and 20 houses. Croton Falls, (p. v.) in the n. e. corner, on the line of North Salem, is a small village and station on the Harlem R. R. It has a good water-power. West Somers (p. o.) is a hamlet. This town, in the allotment of the manor in 1734, fell to the share of Mrs. Margaret Bayard, Philip and Stephen Van Cortlandt, Andrew Johnston, — Miller, Stephen De Lancey, and Mrs. Susannah Warren. The census reports 5 churches in town.²

WESTCHESTER³—was organized as a town, Nov. 7, 1788. West Farms was taken off in 1846. It lies on the Sound, in the extreme s. part of the co. It is bounded on the w. by Bronx River, and on the s. and e. by the Sound. Its surface is generally low and flat along the coast and rolling further inland. Several bays and estuaries extend far inland and divide the land into several peninsulas and necks. The principal of the latter are Classons Point,⁴ between Bronx and Westchester Rivers; Zeregers Point, next e.; and Throggs Neck,⁵ a long and narrow promontory extending s. e. into the Sound. About 2,500 acres along Westchester River is a salt meadow, a portion of which is held as public property and managed by 3 trustees. The people are principally engaged in gardening and fruit growing. Westchester, (p. v.) at the head of navigation on Westchester Creek, is a scattered village of about 1,000 inhabitants. Bronxdale, on the line of West Farms, has an extensive tape factory, a dye and bleach works, and about 400 inhabitants. Schuylerville, upon Throggs Neck, is a scattered village of 300 inhabitants. Integrity, near Bronxdale, has a tape factory. Connersville, Wakeneld, Centerville, and Unionport are modern villages. Fort Schuyler, upon the extremity of Throggs Neck, was begun in 1838; and in 1851 $848,013 had been expended upon it. The estimated cost of the construction and repairs was then $873,013.⁷ The first settlement on Throggs Neck was made in 1833; and in 1851 $848,013 had been expended upon it. The estimated cost of the construction and repairs was then $873,013.⁷ The first settlement on Throggs Neck was made in 1642, by John Throckmorton and 35 associates, from New England, with the consent of the Dutch. The Indian title to the land was extinguished in 1643, by the Dutch, and a land brief was granted in that year, and another in 1652. The English began a settlement at Westchester⁸ in 1642; but the Dutch, considering them intruders, arrested several of them, and in 1656 they surrendered themselves to the Dutch Government. The settlement was claimed by Conn. in 1663; but the next year it came under the government of the Duke of York. A patent was granted by Gov. Nicoll, Feb. 13, 1667, and by Gov. Dongan, Jan. 6, 1686. A market was established at Westchester, May 11, 1693, to be held weekly; and the same year an annual fair was established, to meet alternately at this place and Rye. It was made a borough town April 16, 1696, with mayor, aldermen, and common council, "according to the form of the best governed towns and corporations of the realm of England," and the right of holding a mayor's court, and a representation by one delegate in General Assembly. The De Lancey family, prominent officials under the Colonial Government, and loyalists of the Revolution, resided in this town. The first church (Cong.) was formed soon after the arrival of the first settlers.⁹

WEST FARMS—was formed from Westchester, May 13, 1846. Morrisania was taken off in 1855. It lies upon the Sound and along Harlem River, in the s. part of the co. The surface is rolling, the ridges extending n. and s. Bronx River forms its e. boundary, and Sawmill Brook flows through the center. Its soil is a gravelly and sandy loam, rendered very productive by scientific farming. West Farms, (p. v.) a large village at the head of navigation on Bronx River, ¹ This river is said to discharge 3,628,800 gallons of water per day.

² Hachaliah Bailey, of Somers, about 1815 imported the first elephant brought into the United States. "Old Bet" with other animals soon after imported formed the first traveling menagerie in the country, with which Van Amburgh, the Lion Tamer, was afterward associated. Thaddeus and Gerard Crane, Lewis Titus, and John June, familiar to the public as enterprising showmen, were from this town and North Salem.

⁵ Formerly "Cornhills Neck," and granted to Thos. Cornhill, or Cornell, in 1646.

⁸ The settlers at "Vreedlandt" at this time were Lieut. Thos. Wheeler, Thos. U. Newman, Robert Bassett, John Closs, Sherwood Davies, Wm. H. Fenfall, Richard C. Meares, Samuel Havelt, Isaac Holbert, Robert Ross, Jas. Bill, John S. Gennet, Richard Osborn, and Wm. Ward. The Dutch released Capt. E. Ponton, Wm. Eliet Black, John Gray, and Roger Wheeler, who had been arrested for taking up arms at "Vreedlandt."—Bacon's Westchester, II, p. 160. In 1663 they were allowed to nominate their own magistrates and hold their own courts; "but in dark and dubious matters—especially in witchcraft—the party aggrieved might appeal to the Governor and Council."

⁹ There are 7 churches in town; 2 Friends, Cong., Prot. E. M. E., Presb., and A. L. Meth.

3 mi. from the Sound, contains 4 churches, a carpet factory, molding mill, and gristmill. Fordham, (p. v.) on the r. r., in the n. part of the town, contains 4 churches and is the seat of St. John's College.¹ Tremont,² Central Morrisania,³ Williams Bridge, (p. o.), and Fairmount are modern villages. The last named is a station upon the Harlem R. R. Claremont is a small village on the line of Morrisania. The eastern part of the present town, originally known as "The West Farms," was patented April 25, 1666, to Edward Jessup and John Richardson, Indian purchasers.⁴ Fordham was bought by the Dutch in 1639, and in 1646 it was owned by Adrien Van der Donck. In 1671 John Archer, owner of 1,253 acres, obtained a patent under the title of the "Manor of Fordham." It passed to Cornelius Steenwyck, and was conveyed by his widow in 1694 to the Dutch church in New York, in whose possession it remained 60 years.⁵ The High Bridge of the Croton Aqueduct connects the s. w. corner of this town with N. Y. City and Mocomb's Bridge, in the n. w. corner. Fort No. 8 was built upon the eminence n. w. of the Archer homestead in the Revolution; and its guns assisted in the capture of Fort Washington in 1776. It was demolished by the enemy Oct. 20, 1782. Fort Independence, on Tetards Hill, was dismantled in 1833. Prince Charles Redoubt and the Negro Fort of the Revolution were on the s. side of Valentines Hill. There are 9 churches in town.⁶

WHITE PLAINS—was formed March 7, 1788. It is an interior town, lying s. of the center of the co. The surface is rolling and hilly. Mamaroneck River forms its e. boundary, and Bronx River its w. St. Marys Lake lies along its e. border. The soil is a clayey and gravelly loam. White Plains (p. v.) is situated near the w. line of the town. It contains the old and new co. buildings, 3 churches, and several private seminaries. It is a station upon the Harlem R. R., and contains about 1,000 inhabitants. This town was purchased Nov. 22, 1683, by the inhabitants of Rye, and was settled soon after. In 1720 it was divided among 41 proprietors;⁷ and a charter was granted March 13, 1721, with a quitrent of 2 shillings 6 pence to every 100 acres. It embraced 4,435 acres. Many important historical events occurred in this town during the Revolution. The village was wantonly burned Nov. 5, 1776, by a New England major. The battle of White Plains was fought on Chatterton Hill, in Greenburgh, opposite, and within view of the village. There are 6 churches in town.⁸

YONKERS⁹—was formed as a town March 7, 1788. It is the most southerly town in the co. upon the Hudson. The surface is rugged and broken by several ridges extending n. and s. Valentines Hill,¹⁰ the highest point, is 400 ft. above tide. Tuckahoe Hill, in the e. part, and Thirty Deer Ridge, extending into Greenburgh, are prominent points. The principal streams are Bronx River, forming the e. boundary, Spayten Duyvil Creek, forming the s. boundary, Neperhan River, flowing through the center, and Sprain River and Tibbetts Brook.¹¹ The soil is a clayey and gravelly loam. The people are largely engaged in manufactures.¹² The heights along the river are studded with elegant country residences. Many of the inhabitants are engaged in busi-

⁴ This patent was bounded e. by Bronx River, and w. by a little brook called by the natives Sachwrahung,—including a neck of land called Quinnahung. The s. part of the town, or "Planting Neck," was called by the Indians Quinnahung. The w. side of this neck was called the "Debatable Ground," because it was in dispute between the patentees of West Farms and Morrisania from 1666 to 1740.

² The steamer Henry Clay was burned not far from this place, on her down trip, July 28, 1852. Of 500 persons on board, nearly 100 perished, among whom was A. J. Downing, the editor and author.

⁴ Hodgman's Rubber Goods Manufactory, located at this place, employs about 75 hands.

⁶ Van der Donck subsequently took an active part in representing in Holland the interests of the colonists against the alleged tyranny of the West India Company and its servants, and finally succeeded in his efforts, notwithstanding the enmity of Gov. Stuyvesant and the influence he was able to bring to oppose him. He died in 1655, and his estate was afterward sold in detached portions by his widow. His settlement was laid waste by the Indians, Sept. 15, 1655, and probably remained unoccupied until after the English conquest. In 1672 Frederick Flypsen or Philipse, with Thos. Delaval and Thos. Lewis, bought 8,000 acres of Colen Donck, nearly all in the present town of Yonkers; and subsequently the former became sole owner to Kings Bridge. For one of these thirds he paid £530. These possessions were extended, by further purchase, to Croton and Bronx Rivers; and in June, 1693, the Lordship or Manor of Philipsburgh was erected, with all the rights, honors, or privileges enjoyed by the most favored, excepting that of representation in the General Assembly. He established a drawbridge at Spuyten Duyvil Creek, built a church, still standing, in Sleepy Hollow, and made other improvements. His descendants occupied a prominent position in the colonial government; but, siding with the royal cause, he lost every thing in the Revolution. Col. F. Philipse, the last proprietor of this estate, was paid £62,075 by the British Government, as an equivalent for this

WYOMING COUNTY.

THIS county was formed from Genesee, May 14, 1841. Egan Pike, and a part of Portage were annexed from Allegany co. in 1846. It is an interior county, in the s. w. part of the State, separated from Lake Erie by Erie co., and from the Penn. line by Cattaraugus and Allegany. It is centrally distant 228 miles from Albany, and contains 590 sq. mi. Its surface is a broad, rolling upland, divided into ridges and broken by ravines worn by the streams. It has a slight inclination toward the n. The summits of the highest ridges are 1,200 to 1,500 ft. above Lake Erie and 1,700 to 2,000 ft. above tide. Several of the ravines in the n. are 1,000 ft. below the summits of the adjacent ridges. In the interior the ridges are broken, and the country begins to assume the hilly character which is more fully developed further s. Genesee River, which forms a portion of the s. boundary, is bordered by steep bluffs 200 to 400 ft. high. Near Portageville the river descends from the plateau, in a series of three falls, to a depth of more than 300 ft. within a distance of $\frac{3}{4}$ mi. The water has worn a deep and irregular ravine in the shelving rocks, and the nearly perpendicular banks at the foot of the lower falls are 380 ft. high. The deep gorge, with the rapids and falls, form one of the wildest and most picturesque scenes in Western New York.¹

The other principal streams are Cayuga, Tonawanda, Little Tonawanda, Oatka, East Oy, Wecoy, Cattaraugus, and Buffalo Creeks. The valley of Oatka Creek, from near the s. border of Warsaw to the n. line of the co., is bordered by steep hills 400 to 1,000 ft. high. Silver Lake, in Castile, (the principal body of water,) is 3 mi. long and about $\frac{1}{2}$ mi. wide. The rocks of this co. consist principally of the shales and sandstones of the Portage group. The summits of the southern hills are covered with the rocks belonging to the Chemung group. Thin layers of compact Portage sandstone are found in many parts of the co. and are extensively quarried for flagging. Upon the ridges little rounded eminences are frequently seen, appearing like drift hills; but upon examination they are found to be shale rock covered with a thin soil. Marl and muck are found in considerable quantities in the swamps. The waters of Silver Lake and of several of the streams are constantly depositing lime in the form of marl. The drift deposits in the co. are very extensive, and the soil in some parts is derived from disintegration. Upon the hills it is mostly a clay loam underlaid by hardpan, and in the valleys it is a fertile, gravelly loam and alluvium. The people are principally engaged in stock and wool growing and in dairying, for which the soil upon the hills is admirably adapted. Wheat, barley, corn, and fruits are largely cultivated in the valleys. Very little attention is paid to manufactures except such as are strictly necessary to an agricultural community.

The county seat is located at Warsaw.² The courthouse is a commodious brick edifice, situated in the n. part of the village. The co. clerk's office is a fireproof building, adjacent to the courthouse. The jail is a wood building, arranged so as to enable the keeper to classify the prisoners rocks. An isolated mass of rocks, 15 ft. in diameter and 100 ft. high, known as "Sugar Loaf," rises from the river bed at the bend of the stream and receives nearly the whole force of the rushing water. It is bordered on one side by the present bed of the stream, and on the other by a deep chasm which separates it from the s. bank of the river. Within the memory of people now living, the river flowed over the precipice on the level of the rock which now forms its w. bank, and Sugar Loaf was an island. These falls are accessible only from the w. The perpendicular bank on the w. side of the river at one point is 280 ft. high.

² The commissioners named in the act to select the location were Peter R. Reed, of Onondaga, Davis Hurd, of Niagara, and John Thompson, of Steuben. The building commissioners were John A. McElwaine, Paul Richards, and Jonathan Perry. Trumbull Cary, Esq., of Batavia, gave to the co. an ample public square upon which to erect the public buildings. The first courts were held at a public house at East Orangetown, in June, 1841, and the first meeting of the Board of Supervisors was at the same place. The first co. officers were Paul Richards, First Judge; James Sprague, Peter Patterson, Jos. Johnson, Associate Judges; W. Riley Smith, District Attorney; N. Wolcott, Ch. Clerk; W. E. Grogan, Sheriff; and Harvey Putnam, Surrogate.

according to law.¹ The poorhouse is situated on a farm of 97 acres near the w. border of Orangeville, 9 mi. w. of Warsaw. The average number of inmates is 73, supported at a cost of 75 cts. per week each. The farm yields a revenue of about $300.²

The Buffalo, New York & Erie R. R. extends s. e. through Attica, Middlebury, Warsaw, Gainesville, Castile, and Genesee Falls, crossing the Portage Falls and connecting with the N. Y. & E. R. R. at Hornellsville. A s. e. route has been surveyed, and a road-bed graded, from Attica s. w. to the Allegany River.³

There are 5 weekly newspapers published in the co.⁴

The eastern tier of towns in this co., with the exception of a portion of Castile, belonged to the Ogden, Silver Lake, and Cotringer tracts of the Morris Reservation, and the remaining parts of the co. to the Holland Land Purchase. The Gardeau Tract, containing 17,927 acres on both sides of the Genesee, was reserved for Mary Jemison (the "old white woman") by the Seneca Nation in their treaty with Robert Morris in 1797.⁵ About one-half of this tract lies in the present town of Castile. Upon this tract Mary Jemison and her descendants continued to reside until 1816, when she sold all but 2 sq. mi. on the w. side of the river to Micah Brooks and Jellis Clute. The remaining 2 mi. she sold in 1831 to Henry B. Gibson and Jellis Clute, and removed to the Cattaraugus Reservation. The first white man that lived within the limits of the co. was a tory, named Ebenezer Allen, who in consequence of his crimes fled from Penn. and joined the Indians about 1780. He located upon the Genesee, and for a time lived upon the lands of Mary Jemison. He afterward built a saw and grist mill on the present site of Rochester, removed thence to Oatka Creek,⁶ and thence to Canada.⁷ The first permanent white settlers were John Tolles, Jacob Wright, Nathaniel Sprout, and Stephen Crow, in 1802. The settlements increased rapidly, and in a few years most of the best lands of the co. were taken up. Most of the early settlers were from New England; but the later immigrants have principally been Germans.

ATTICA—was formed from Sheldon, April 4, 1811. Orangeville was taken off in 1816. It

¹ The courthouse, jail, and clerk's office were erected in 1842, at a cost of $12,000.

² The poorhouse contains 22 rooms, and the inmates are provided with good, substantial food; but the house does not admit of proper accommodations for the paupers, or for classification of the insane, of which there are always a number.

³ The Allegany Valley Railroad.

The Warsaw Sentinel was commenced by Andrew W. Young in May, 1830, and continued until Dec. 1831, when it was merged in the Republican Advocate at Batavia.

The Attica Republican was commenced by David Scott in 1832-34. It was soon after changed to

The Attica Republican and Genesee Advertiser. E. A. Cooley became its publisher, and changed it to

The Attica Democrat, and continued it until 1846.

The Genesee Recorder was commenced at Perry by Geo. M. Shipper in 1834, and continued about 2 years.

The American Citizen was commenced at Warsaw in 1836 by J. A. Hadley. After 1 year, it was removed to Perry and published by Mitchell & Warren. Mr. Mitchell continued the publication until Jan. 1841, when it was removed to Rochester.

The Pile Whig was commenced by Thos. Carrier in 1838. Soon after, its name was changed to

The Pile Gazette, and it was continued for about a year.

The Watchtower, a Sep. paper, was issued in 1839 from the office of The American Citizen. It was published 1 year by Ansel Warren.

The Register, a campaign paper, was published at Perry in 1840 by Isaac N. Stoddard and John H. Badley.

The Perry Democrat was commenced in 1841 by Pet. Lawrence. In 1848 it passed to C. C. Britt, who continued it until 1853.

The Western New Yorker was commenced at Perry in Jan. 1841, by John H. Badley. In the summer of the same year it passed into the hands of Barlow & Woodward, who removed it to Warsaw. It was successively published by Barlow & Blanchard, Mr. Blanchard, and H. A. Dudley until April 1, 1846, when it passed into the hands of Elijah W. Andrews, and afterward to Andrews & Harrington, by whom it is still published.

The Countryman was commenced at Perry by N. S. Woodward in 1843. It soon passed to Dan'l S. Curtis, who changed its name to

The Free Citizen, and continued it until Aug. 1847.

The Wyoming Republican was commenced at Warsaw by R. L. Fuller in 1844; it was published until March, 1847.

The Attica Telegraph was commenced by Abraham Dismore in Oct. 1846, and was published about 2 years.

The Old Eighth Whig was commenced at Attica, April 1, 1848, by R. W. Dibble and W. H. Civer. After about 6 mos. Mr. Dibble retired and Mr. Civer continued the paper, as

The Spirit of the Old Eighth, until 1850.

The Attica Atlas was commenced Jan. 1, 1841, by Elias Folsom, by whom it is still published.

The Christian Investigator was published at the office of the Free Citizen for 1 year. Edited by Wm. Gooddell.

The Wyoming Co. Advertiser was commenced Dec. 22, 1853, and was published 1 year by Horace Wilcox.

The Wyoming Times was commenced at Perry by T. S. Gillet in May, 1855. It was destroyed by fire in 1856, and resuscitated soon after. It is still pub. by Mr. Gillet.

The Wyoming Co. Mirror was commenced at Warsaw in 1846 by A. Holley. In 1856 it passed into the hands of Babbitt & Lewis. In 1858 to Lewis & Merrill, and in 1859 to H. A. Dudley, by whom it is still published.

The Arcade Enterprise was started March 31, 1846, by J. H. Gibson, and is still published.

⁵ The parents of Mary Jemison emigrated from Ireland in 1743, and Mary was born during the voyage across the ocean. The family settled upon the western frontier of Penn., where they remained in peace until the breaking out of the French War in 1764. In 1766 a party of Indians visited the settlement and took the family prisoners, and on their retreat murdered all but Mary, then a girl of 12 or 13 years. She was carried captive to an Indian settlement on the Ohio, and adopted by two women who had lost a brother in the war. She grew to womanhood among the Indians, adopted their habits and customs, was twice married, and had 6 children,—3 sons and 3 daughters. After the Revolution she had an opportunity to return to her white friends; but she preferred to remain with her husband and children. She was greatly beloved by the Indians, and highly respected by the whites who became acquainted with her. She retained her knowledge of the English language, and to the last remembered the early instructions of her mother, and the last counsel which that mother gave when they were taken captive and the designs of the Indians to murder the father and mother became manifest. She died at the Cattaraugus Reservation, Sept. 19, 1833, aged 90 or 91 years.

⁶ This creek is still locally known as Allens Creek.

lies upon the n. border of the co., w. of the center. Its surface is a rolling upland, broken by the ravines of the streams. In the s. part are several considerable hills with long gradual slopes. Tonawanda Creek, the principal stream, flows through the n. w. corner, and receives numerous branches from the s., the largest of which is Crow Creek. The soil is a clay and gravelly loam. Attica, (p. v.), upon Tonawanda Creek, in the n. w. part of the town, was incorp. May 2, 1837. It contains a flourishing union school, a bank, a newspaper office, a flouring mill, and 3 churches. Pop. 1,184. Attica Center (p. o.) and Vernal are hamlets. The first settlement was made in 1802, by Zera Phelps.¹ The first religious services were held Sept. 21, 1809, by Rev. Royal Phelps, at which time the first church (Cong.) was formed, with 5 members.²

BENNINGTON—was formed from Sheldon, March 6, 1818. It is the n. w. corner town of the co. Its surface is a rolling upland, broken by the ravines of small streams. Cayuga Creek and its branches drain the central, and Murder Creek the n. part of the town. Tonawanda Creek flows through the s. e. corner. The soil is a clayey, gravelly and sandy loam. Bennington Center (Bennington p. o.) contains 3 churches and 30 dwellings; and Cowlesville, (p. v.) in the n. w. part of the town, 2 churches and 206 inhabitants. Folsomdale (p. o.) is a hamlet, on Cayuga Creek, and has a valuable water-power. The first settlement was made near the center of the town, in 1802, by John Tolles, Jacob Wright, and William Barber, from Vt.³ The first religious services were conducted by Rev. Peter B. Root, in 1805. The first church (M. E.) was formed in 1807.⁴

CASTILE (Cas-tile)—was formed from Perry, Feb. 27, 1821. It is the central town upon the s. border of the co. Its surface is a rolling and terraced upland, broken by the deep valleys of the streams. Genesee River, forming a portion of the s. boundary, is bordered by steep banks 300 to 350 ft. above the water. In some places the faces of the bluffs are perpendicular ledges 200 ft. high. Numerous small tributaries of the river have worn deep lateral channels in these bluffs. The valley of Silver Lake occupies a wide and shallow basin in the n. part of the town.⁵ Its outlet is toward the n. Wolf Creek rises in a swamp near the head of the lake and flows s. A wide, level valley, bordered by low terraces, extends from the s. shore of the lake and opens into the valley of Wolf Creek at Castile Village. The soil is a clay and gravelly loam. Castile (p. v.) lies on Wolf Creek, in the s. w. part of the town. It is a station on the R. & N. Y. City R. R. Pop. 682. St. Helena, (p. v.), on Genesee River, in the s. e. corner of the town, contains 20 dwellings. The first settlement was made in 1808, by Robert Whalley, from R. I., 1 mi. s. of Castile Village.⁶ The first religious services (Bap.) were held near the s. end of Silver Lake, in 1816, by Elder Benj. Luther.⁷

CHINA—was formed from Sheldon, March 6, 1818. Java was taken off in 1832. It is the s. w. corner town of the co. Its surface is a rolling or hilly upland, broken by valleys. Cattaraugus Creek flows s. w. through near the center of the town, and receives several tributaries, the principal of which is Clear Creek, from the s. From the valleys the town spreads out into a rolling region, with long gradual slopes arable to their summits. The highest point is the ridge in the n. e., which is 1,100 ft. above Lake Erie, as determined by actual survey. The soil of the upland is a clayey and in the valleys a gravelly loam. Arcade (China p. o.) is situated at the junction of Cattaraugus and Clear Creeks, in the s. w. part of the town. It has a fine

² The census reports 6 churches; Cong., Presb., F. W. Bap., Bap., M. E., and R. C.

³ Among the other early settlers were Chauncey, Justin, and George Loomis, Peletiah Case, Joseph Farnham, George Hoskins, David Tolles, Aaron Clapp, and Ezra Ludden. The first marriage was that of Aaron Whitney and Rachel Truesdale, in 1807; and the first death in town, that of a child of Wm. Barber, in 1808. The first school was taught by Rachel Truesdale, in 1807; the first inn was kept by Joseph Farnham, in 1817. Chauncey Loomis erected the first sawmill, in 1808; he also kept the first store. Quarles Clapp built the first gristmill, at Cowlesville. A son of David Tolles, 8 or 9 years old, was lost in the woods in 1806 and was never found.

in the alders at the foot of this lake while Gen. Sullivan was laying waste the Indian villages upon the Genesee. In the summer of 1855 it was reported that an immense serpent, 100 ft. long, had been seen in this lake. So well was the story apparently authenticated that thousands of visitors came from all parts of the country to obtain a sight of his snakehead. A burlesque account of the capture of the serpent, which appeared in the Buffalo Republic, raised the excitement to the highest pitch; and immediately afterward the whole humbug collapsed.

water power, and contains a woolen factory, flouring mill, and 3 churches. Pop. 637. East China is a p. o. The first settlement was made in 1808, on Lot 28, by Silas Meech, from New England.¹ The first religious services were conducted by Rev. John Spencer, at Arcade, in 1812. The first church (Cong.) was formed at Arcade, by Jno. Spencer, July 24, 1813.²

COVINGTON—named from Gen. Leonard Covington—was formed from Le Roy (Genesee co.) and Perry, Jan. 31, 1817. A part was annexed to York (Livingston co.) in 1823. Pavilion (Genesee co.) was taken off in 1841. It is the n. e. corner town of the co. The surface is a moderately hilly upland, broken by the deep ravines of the streams. Oatka Creek flows through the n. w. corner, and receives as tributary Pearl Creek, which flows n. w. through near the center. Wide, fertile alluvial flats extend along Oatka Creek. The soil of the uplands is generally a gravelly loam. Covington Center, (Covington p. o.), in the n. part, contains 20 dwellings; Pearl Creek, (p. v.), in the n. w., contains 15 dwellings; La Grange, (p. v.), near the s. line, a church and 20 dwellings; and Peoria, (p. v.), near the s. line, 15 dwellings. The first settlement was made in 1807, in the w. part, by Jairus Cruttenden, William Miller, and John and William Sprague, all from New England.³ The first religious services were held at the house of David Norris, in 1814, by Rev. Mark Norris, from Vt.⁴

EAGLE—was formed from Pike, Jan. 21, 1823. It occupies a central position on the s. border of the co. Its surface is a hilly upland, broken by the deep ravines of the streams. Nearly the whole drainage is through Wiscoy Creek and its branches. Cold Creek takes its rise in the s. e. part of the town. The hills bordering upon the streams are very steep, and their summits are 400 to 700 ft. above the valleys. Eagle Lake, a small body of water in the s. w. part, has no visible outlet. The soil is a clayey and gravelly loam. Eagle Village, (p. v.), in the s. w. part of the town, contains a church and 20 dwellings. Eagle, (p. o.), in the n. e. part, is a hamlet. The first settlement was made in town in 1808, on Lot 8, by Silas and Wm. Hodges, from Cayuga co.⁵ There are 3 churches in town; M. E., F. W. Bap., and Christian.

GAINESVILLE—named from Gen. E. P. Gaines—was formed from Warsaw, as "Hebe," Feb. 25, 1814. Its name was changed April 17, 1816. It is an interior town, lying s. e. of the center of the co. The surface is an upland, slightly undulating and broken by the valleys of the streams. Oatka Creek flows through the n. e. part, and East Coy Creek through the s. w. The soil on the hills is a thin, dark loam underlaid by hardpan, and in the valleys a fertile, gravelly loam. A good quality of building stone is quarried in the n. part of the town. Gainesville Creek, (Gainesville p. o.), on East Coy Creek, near the center of the town, contains a female seminary,⁶ 3 churches, and about 300 inhabitants. East Gainesville, (p. v.), a station on the B. & N. Y. City R. R., contains 20 houses. Gainesville Center and Newburgh are hamlets. The first settlements were made at Gainesville Creek in 1805, by Wm., Richard, and Chas. Bristol, from Columbia co., and Elnathan George, from Vt.⁷ The first religious meeting was held in 1809. The first church (Presb.) was formed in 1815.⁸

GENESEE FALLS—was formed from Pike and Portage, (Livingston co.), April 1, 1846. It lies on Genesee River, in the s. e. corner of the co. A nearly perpendicular rocky bluff, 100 to 300 ft. high, borders upon the river, and from its summit the country spreads out into an undulating upland. The celebrated Portage Falls, in the Genesee River, are opposite this place.⁹ The soil is a sandy and clayey loam. Portageville, (p. v.), on Genesee River, contains 5 churches and several mills. Pop. 561. The B. & N. Y. City R. R. crosses the Genesee, near the village, by a bridge 800 ft. long and 234 ft. above the bed of the river. This bridge was built at a cost of

$175,000, and is the largest wooden x. n. bridge in the world. The Genesee Valley Canal also crosses the river at this point by an aqueduct built upon stone abutments 40 ft. high; the structure cost $70,000. The first settlements were made on the river, above Portageville, in 1804, by John, Samuel, and Seth Fields.¹ The first religious meeting was held by Rev. John Griffith, (M. E.,) in 1809; and the first church (Bap.) was formed by Rev. Joseph Case, at "Bigelow's Corners," in 1818.²

JAVA—was formed from China, April 20, 1832. It lies on the w. border of the co., s. of the center. Its surface is an elevated region, broken by hills and the deep valleys of the stream. The highest summits are 400 to 600 ft. above the valleys and 1,000 to 1,200 ft. above Lake Erie. Buffalo Creek flows through the w. part, and receives a large number of tributaries. Cattaraugus Creek takes its rise in the x. part. Cattaraugus Lake is a small sheet of water in the s. s. part, nearly surrounded by steep hills. It forms one of the sources of Cattaraugus Creek. The soil upon the hills is a thin, dark loam underlaid by hardpan; in the valleys it is principally a gravelly loam. About 1 mi. x. of Java Village is a quarry of fine building stone. Java Village (p. v.) lies upon Buffalo Creek, in the n. w. part of the town. Pop. about 200. North Java, (p. v.,) in the n. x. corner of the town, contains a church and about 100 inhabitants. Java Center, (p. o.,) East Java, (p. o.,) in the s. x. part of the town, Carriers Corner, (Java p. o.,) in the s. w., and Williamsville, near the x. border, are hamlets. The first settlement was made on Lot 32, in the n. w. part of the town, in 1810, by Wm. Richardson and Timothy Kirby, from Lowell, Mass.³ The first church (R. C.) was formed in 1838.⁴

MIDDLEBURY—was formed from Warsaw, March 20, 1812. It lies on the n. border of the co., x. of the center. Its surface is a rolling upland, broken by the deep valleys of the stream. Oatka Creek flows through the s. x. corner, and Little Tonawanda Creek through the w. part. A deep ravine extends x. and w. through near the center of the town, forming a natural pass between the valleys of these two streams. The hills that border upon Oatka Creek are steep and 400 to 600 ft. high. The soil is a gravelly and clayey loam. Wyoming, (p. v.,) on Oatka Creek, near the x. border of the town, contains the Middlebury Academy,⁵ 3 churches, and 378 inhabitants. West Middlebury, (Dale p. o.,) a station on the B. & N. Y. City R. R., contains 20 dwellings. The first settlement was made by Jonas Sellick, (from Rutland co., Vt.,) in 1802, near Wrights Corners.⁶ There are 5 churches in town.⁷

ORANGEVILLE—was formed from Attica, Feb. 14, 1816. Wethersfield was taken off in 1823. It is an interior town, lying n. w. of the center of the co. Its surface is a rolling upland, broken by deep ravines. The streams are Tonawanda Creek and its branches, draining the w., and small branches of Oatka and East Coy Creeks, draining the x. parts of the town. The summits of the highest hills are 400 to 700 ft. above the valleys. The soil is a gravelly and clayey loam underlaid by hardpan. Orangeville Center (Orangeville p. o.) contains 15 houses; Johnsonsburgh, (p. v.,) on Tonawanda Creek, lies partly in Sheldon. Pop. about 100. Halls Corners (East Orangeville p. o.) is a hamlet. The first settlement was made in 1805, by John Duncan, on Lot 13, and Elisha Doty, from Cayuga co., on Lot 12.⁸ The first church (Presb.) was organized by Rev. John Alexander, July 11, 1812.⁹

Corners; the first gristmill was built by Silas Newell, in 1822, near Wyoming Village; the first sawmill, by A. Worden, in 1806, at West Middlebury; Amos Wright kept the first inn at Wrights Corners, in 1806. In May, 1817, Artemus Shattuck, a citizen of this town, went into the woods, a distance from home to chop. While cutting off a log that had been partially split open, his foot was caught in the crack, and he hung for a long time suspended by his foot and partially supported by one hand. Despairing of receiving aid, and entirely unable to extricate himself, he finally unjointed his ankle with his pocket knife, made a crutch of a crooked stick, and started for the house. He was found about dark and carried to the house, where his leg was amputated by a surgeon. He recovered, became a Baptist minister, and lived many years.

⁷ 2 Bap., and 1 each F. W. Bap., Presb., and M. E.

⁸ Lemuel Chase and James Sayer settled about the same time, and Seth and Adial Sherwood, Silas Merrifield, and Amos Ward in 1806; Truman Lewis and a number of other families in 1807. The first child born was a son of Seth Sherwood in 1807; the first marriage was that of Adial Sherwood and Mrs. Wood, in 1809; and the first death, that of Mrs. James Sayer, Corinna Lewis and Mary McKnight commenced the first school, May 1, 1811; Isaac Moore kept the first inn, in 1811, at the Center; and Silas Hubbard the first store, in 1814, at the same place. Robert Hopkins erected the first sawmill, in 1810, and Levi Johnson the first gristmill, in 1817.

³ In the same year, Wm. Webster, Shubael Morris, Amos Kinney, Elijah Cutting, and Joseph Palmer settled in the s. part of the town, and Josiah Hovey in the n. part. The first settlers were mostly from New England. The first child born was Eliza Webster, in 1804; the first marriage was that of Elias C. Fargo and Catharine Whiting; and the first death, that of an infant son of Sterling Stearns, in 1804. The first death of an adult was that of Dwight Noble, in 1808. The first school was taught by Samuel McWhorter, in 1807. Elizur Webster kept the first inn, Dan'l Shaw, the first store, and built the first gristmill, in 1803.

YATES COUNTY.

THIS county was formed from Ontario, Feb. 5, 1823, and named from Joseph C. Yates, then governor. Barrington and Starkey were added from Steuben, April 6, 1824. It is centrally distant 172 mi. from Albany, and contains an area of 370 sq. mi. Its surface consists of a series of ridges extending from Steuben co. in a northerly direction, and gradually declining from a height of about 1,700 ft. above tide, upon the s. border, to a level of the undulating region near the foot of Seneca Lake. The first or most eastern of these ridges lies between Seneca and Crooked Lakes, and occupies the towns of Barrington, Starkey, Milo, Torrey, and a part of Benton. The highest summit is about 900 ft. above Crooked Lake and 1,200 above Seneca. The slopes are generally gradual and the inclination uniform. The second ridge occupies the high peninsula between the two branches of Crooked Lake, and extends n. through Jerusalem, finally losing itself in the rolling upland of Benton. The s. part of this ridge is known as "Bluff Point," from its abrupt termination. It is about 400 ft. above the lake. The third range lies between the w. branch of Crooked Lake and Flint Creek, and occupies the w. part of Jerusalem, the s. part of Italy, and the s. e. part of Potter. The highest summits in the s. are about 700 ft. above the lake. A fourth ridge lies between the valleys of Flint Creek and West River, and extends n. through the w. part of Potter. A fifth range occupies that portion of Middlesex lying between West River Hollow and Canandaigua Lake. The declivities of the last two ranges are mostly very steep; and their summits are 800 to 1,000 ft. above the valleys. The uplands, except in the extreme w. part, are smooth and arable to their summits. The valleys between them are wide and exceedingly fertile, and the n. part of the co. is a fine rolling region.

The lowest rocks in the co. are the upper series of the Hamilton shales, cropping out on the lower course of the Crooked Lake Outlet. Next above these, upon the same stream, appear the Tully limestone, Genesee slate, and Portage groups. The first of the three, furnishing lime, is the most valuable mineral in the co. The Portage group near Penn Yan furnishes a good quality of flagging stone, and is extensively quarried for that purpose. The shales and sandstone of the Chemung group occupy the summits in the s. part of the co.; calcareous tufa is found upon Crooked Lake Outlet, and marl in the swamps near the foot of the lake. Iron pyrites have been found in considerable quantities at Bluff Point. The soil for the most part consists of a fine quality of gravelly loam, intermixed with clay and the disintegrated shales of the Portage group. It is well adapted to either tillage or pasturage.

The principal streams in the co. are Crooked Lake Outlet, Keshong Creek, Big Stream, Rock Stream, Flint Creek, and West River. Seneca Lake, forming the s. boundary of the co., is 447 ft. above tide, and Canandaigua Lake, forming a part of the w. boundary, 668 ft. Crooked Lake,¹ near the center, two-thirds of it lying within the co., is 718 ft. above tide and is 18 mi. in length. Its n. part is divided by Bluff Point into two branches, each of which is from one to two mi. wide. Owing to the depredations of the midge winter wheat is less grown than formerly, while spring grains, root crops, stock, wool, and fruit are much more extensively and profitably produced. The outlet of Crooked Lake affords large water power for manufacturing purposes,—as yet but slightly improved.

The county seat is located at the village of Penn Yan,² on the line of Milo and Benton.³ The first courthouse⁴ and jail combined was erected in 1824; and in 1834 it was burned. In 1835 a new brick courthouse was built, on a public square, at a cost of $12,000. A jail, detached, was erected the same season. The latter was destroyed by fire in Feb. 1857, and was rebuilt the same year, at a cost of $10,200. A clerk's office was erected some years previous, upon the public square

² The commissioners who located the co. seat, were John Sutton, of Tompkins co., George H. Foster, of Herkimer co., and Joseph B. Walton, of Otsego co.

H. Bennett, Co. Clerk; James P. Robinson, Sheriff; and Abraham P. Vosburgh, Sheriff's Deputy.

⁴ John Sutton, of Tompkins, Geo. H. Foster, of Herkimer, and Joseph B. Walton, of Otsego cos., were appointed commissioners to locate the co. buildings, and Wm. Shattuck, of Benton, Geo. Sherman and Samuel Stewart, of Milo, to erect them. The courts were to be held at the house of Asa Cole until the courthouse was finished.

with the other public buildings, near the center of the village. The co. poorhouse is located on a farm of 123 acres in the town of Jerusalem, about 5 mi. s. w. of Penn Yan.¹ The average number of inmates is 86, and they are supported at a weekly cost of $1 40 each. A school is taught in the house during a portion of the year, and religious services are held occasionally. The Crooked Lake Canal extends along the outlet of Crooked Lake, and enters Seneca Lake at Dresden. It opens a direct water communication with Yates co. and the w. portion of Steuben, and affords an easy and cheap means of transportation. The Elmira, Jefferson & Canandaigua R. R. extends through the co., e. of the center, connecting with the N. Y. C. & E. R. R. at the s. terminus and with the N. Y. & E. R. R. at the s. These two works of internal improvement furnish market facilities equal to those generally enjoyed by the interior com. of the State.

Three newspapers are published in the co.²

The early history of this co. is intimately associated with the history of the "Friends," a religious sect founded by Jemima Wilkinson.³ This singular woman took the name of the "Universal Friend," and was regarded as a prophet by her followers, among whom were persons of respectability, wealth, and influence. At a general meeting of the sect, in Conn., in 1786, it was resolved to emigrate to some unsettled region and found a colony where they might live in peace and in the undisturbed enjoyment of their religious opinions. Three of their number were delegated to seek out a proper location.⁴ They proceeded to Penn., went up the Susquehanna River, and followed the route of Gen. Sullivan to Seneca Lake, where they finally determined to locate. In June, 1787, 25 "Friends" set out for the land of promise by the way of the Mohawk Valley. They settled about 1 mi. s. of the present village of Dresden, the location being fixed upon from its close proximity to the fine waterfalls upon Crooked Lake Outlet.⁵ During the fall they prepared the land, and in the following season sowed it with winter wheat, which they harvested in 1789; and this was the first wheat crop raised in Western N. Y. In 1789, Wm. Potter and Thos. Hathaway, two of their number, purchased of the State 14,000 acres of land lying between Seneca Lake and the Pre-emption Line, and subsequently Thos. Hathaway and Benedict Robinson purchased the town Jerusalem of Phelps and Gorham.⁶ In 1789, Jemima and a large number of her followers

¹ This building, erected 25 years ago, is 100 ft. by 50, and 3 stories high, including basement. The farm yields a revenue of $1,000.

² The Penn Yan Herald was established at Penn Yan in May, 1818, by Abraham H. Bennett. In 1820 it appeared as The Penn Yan Democrat. In 1835 it was pub. by Bennett & Reed, in 1842 by Reed & Bennett, and in 1847 by Alfred Reed. In 1850 Darins A. Ogden became proprietor, in 1853 Reuben Spicer, and in 1857 Geo. D. A. Bridgman, its present publisher.

The Yates County Republican was started Dec. 16, 1824, by E. J. Fowle, and continued 10 years. He then sold it to John Remmick, who published it as

The Penn Yan Enquirer about 2 years, when it was discontinued. The Western Star was pub. at Penn Yan in 1833 by H. Gilbert.

The Miscellany was pub. at Penn Yan in 1833 by Thos. H. Bassett.

The Democratic Whig was commenced in 1837 by Wm. Child. About 2 years after it passed into the hands of Nicholas D. Suydam, who changed its name to

The Yates County Whig. In 1845 it passed into the hands of Rodney L. Adams. In 1852 Mr. Adams sold it to Cleveland & Look. Mr. Look soon retired, and in 1856 its name was changed to

The Yates County Chronicle. It is now published by Stafford C. Cleveland.

The Democratic Organ was commenced in 1844 at Penn Yan by Harvey L. Winants, and published about 2 years.

The Penn Yan Telegraph, &c., was issued from the office of The Whig, for 6 mos. in 1846.

The Dundee Record was commenced at Dundee, Jan. 26, 1844, by Gifford J. Booth. Edward Hoagland succeeded to its editorship in 1847, John J. Dieffendorf in 1853, and D. S. Bruner, its present publisher, in 1857.

³ Jemima Wilkinson was the daughter of Jeremiah Wilkinson, a R. I. farmer. She was one of a family of 12 children and had little or no advantages of education. In her 20th year she had a severe attack of fever; and for some time her life was despaired of. Upon her recovery she claimed that she had been raised from the dead,—that her carnal existence was ended and henceforth her life was to be spiritual and divine,—and that she was endowed with the power of prophecy. She soon commenced traveling and exhorting, and succeeded in converting many persons, among whom were several substantial New England farmers. The following description of her person is copied from "The New Haven Gazette and Connecticut Magazine," dated March, 1787. "She is about the middle size of woman, not genteel in her person, rather awkward in her carriage; her complexion good, her eyes remarkably black and brilliant, her hair black and waving with beautiful ringlets upon her neck and shoulders. Her features are regular, and the whole of her face is thought by many to be perfectly beautiful. As she is not to be supposed of either sex, so this neutrality is manifest in her personal appearance. She wears no cap, letting her hair hang down as has been described. She wears her neckcloth like a man; her chemise is buttoned around the neck and wrists. Her outside garment is a robe, under which it is said she wears an expensive dress, the fashion of which is made to correspond neither with that of man nor woman. Her understanding is not deficient, except touching her religious notions. She is very illiterate, yet her memory is very great; artful in discovering many circumstances which fall out among her disciples. On all occasions she requires the most extraordinary attentions that can be bestowed upon her: one or more of her disciples usually attend upon her and perform the most menial services. Her pronunciation is after the peculiar dialect of the most illiterate of the countrypeople of New England. Her preaching has very little connection, and is very lengthy,—at times cold and languid, but occasionally lively, zealous, and animated." When she first arose from her bed of sickness, she assumed that there was once such a person as Jemima Wilkinson, but that she died and went to heaven, after which the Divine Spirit reanimated that same body and it arose from the dead; now, this divine inhabitant is Christ Jesus our Lord, the Friend to all mankind, and gives his name to the body to which he is united, and therefore body and spirit conjointly is the "Universal Friend." She assumed to have two "Witnesses," corresponding in all respects to those prophesied in Rev. chap. xi. from 3d to 13th verses. These were James Parker and Sarah Richards. During her whole life she never yielded the pretensions which she at first made; and her whole career had the merit of consistency. Among the principal peculiar tenets of the sect was the strict enforcement of the Shaker doctrine of celibacy as indispensable to a pure life. The meetings were conducted after the manner of the Quakers, the whole congregation often sitting in perfect silence for an hour or more.—See Turner's Hist. of The Phelps and Gorham Purchase.

This extraordinary woman exerted a strong influence over her followers, who gratuitously planted and hoed her corn, sowed and reaped her wheat, and cut and gathered her hay, always having care to be of no trouble or expense to the Friend upon these occasions. On one occasion she addressed, through an interpreter, a band of Oneidas who had encamped near her settlement on their way to a treaty, endeavoring to convince them that she was Christ. They listened with apparent attention, and, when she had finished, one of the chiefs arose and delivered a short address to his countrymen. She requested to have it interpreted to her,—when the savage contemptuously replied, in broken English, that if she were the character she assumed to be, she would have understood the poor Indian as well as any one. She died July 1, 1813, and her sect has long since been broken up.—Bassett's Life of Jemima Wilkinson.

came in. The first framed house in the co. was erected for her, on a farm of 1000 acres set apart for her especial use. For a time the colony flourished; but soon neighbors began to arrive, and jealousies were engendered, and a series of persecutions commenced, which seriously retarded the progress of the colony and embittered the last days of the "Friend."¹

BARRINGTON—was formed from Wayne, (Steuben co.,) April 6, 1822. It lies upon the s. bank of Crooked Lake, in the s. part of the co. Its surface consists principally of a high ridge, sloping gradually upward from Crooked Lake to a height of 600 to 800 ft. Big Stream flows through the s. w. corner, in a deep ravine bordered by steep declivities. From Crooked Lake the ascent is nearly uniform for 2 miles; and the summit of the ridge is rolling. The soil is a slaty gravel mixed with clay, and is generally productive. Barrington,² (p. v.,) near the center, contains 1 church and 25 houses. The first settlement was made in 1800, by Jacob Teeples.³ The Rev. Jas. Osgood (Bap.) was the first preacher. There are two churches in town; Bap. and M. E.

BENTON⁴—was formed from Jerusalem, Feb. 12, 1803, as "Vernon." Its name was changed to "Snell" April 6, 1808, and to Benton April 2, 1810. Milo was taken off in 1818, and a part of Torrey in 1851. It is the s. w. corner town of the co. Its surface is rolling and gradually descending toward the s. and s. w. From Seneca Lake the land slopes upward for a mile, and to a height of about 300 ft., where it spreads out in a beautiful undulating region. The valley of Crooked Lake, 200 ft. below the summits of the table land, extends about 1 mi. into the s. part of the town. Keshong Creek passes through the s. w. corner. The soil is clay along the lake, but upon the hills it is a deep, rich, clayey and gravelly loam, well adapted to almost every branch of agriculture. Bellona, (Benton p. o.,) situated on Keshong Creek, in the s. w. part, contains 2 churches, (pop. 205;) and Benton Center (p. v.) 2 churches and 28 dwellings. Fergusons Corners (p. o.) is a hamlet. The village of Penn Yan lies partly within this town. The first settlement was made in the spring of 1789, by Levi Benton, from Catskill, Greene co.⁵ The first religious meetings were held in the barn of Levi Benton, in 1792, and were conducted by Ezra Cole. There are now 4 churches in town.⁶

ITALY—was formed from Naples, Feb. 15, 1815. It is the s. w. corner town of the co. Its surface consists of three distinct ridges, each attaining an elevation of about 1000 ft. above Canandaigua Lake. These ridges are divided by the valley of Flint Creek—known as Italy Hollow—and West River Hollow. The valleys are generally narrow and bordered by steep and often precipitous sides. The summits of the ridges are broken uplands. The soil is a slaty and gravelly loam and is best adapted to pasturage. Italy Hill (p. v.) is situated in the s. w. corner; and Italy Hollow (p. o.) on Flint Creek, s. of the center. The first settlement in the town was made by John Mower, at West Hollow, in 1793.⁷ There are 4 churches in town.⁸

JERUSALEM—was organized Jan. 1789, and Benton was taken off in 1803. A small part of Steuben co., in the forks of the lake, was annexed Feb. 25, 1814. It lies on the w. bank of Crooked Lake and is the central town in the co. Its surface is divided into two distinct ridges by the w. branch of the lake and its inlet. The s. ridge terminates on the s. in Bluff Point, a promontory, 8 mi. in extent, lying between the two branches of Crooked Lake; and it extends on the s. into the town of Benton. It is about 400 ft. high and 1½ to 2 mi. wide, and is bordered by steep declivities. The continuity of this ridge is broken by a remarkable depression extending Gerham, in selling a picked township, to require the purchaser to draw for another township at the same price. Robinson and Hathaway, after purchasing Jerusalem, drew what is now the town of Genesee, Livingston co. The Friend objected to her people "trading and buying property at a distance," and, fearing her displeasure, they prevailed upon Mr. Phelps to release them from the bargain, which he was quite willing to do, as he had ascertained the value of the township."—Turner's Hist.

³ The next settlers were Thomas Bronson, from Conn.; Wm. Coolbaugh, from N. J.; Jonathan Davis, William Oremshire, Oliver Parker, Matthew Knapp, Joseph Fenton, John Kline, and Henry Sperry. The first school was taught by A. C. West, in 1810. Jacob Teeples kept the first tavern, in 1804, on the Bath Road; and Elijah Townsend, the first store. John Carr erected the first gristmill, and Wm. Cummins the first sawmill.

⁵ T. Spencer settled at Bellona in 1790; George Wheeler, Robert Chilton, Jas. Scofield, Otis Barden, and Daniel Brown in 1791; and Ezra Cole, Eliphalet Hull, and Samuel and Cyrus Buell, with their families, in 1792. The first birth was that of Matilda Buell, in Sept. 1793; the first marriage, that of Thos. Berden and Olive Benton, in 1791; and the first deaths, those of Ephraim and Samuel Wheeler, who both died in the fall of 1792. The first sawmill was built by Dr. Caleb Benton, in 1790, at Bellona. The first store was kept by Luther Benton and James Stoddard, in 1799, and the first inn by Ezra Cole, in 1800. John Coates taught the first school, at Benton Center, in the winter of 1794. The first town meeting was held at the house of Daniel Brown.

⁶ Two M. E., Bap., and Presb.

⁷ Josiah Bradish, Seth Sprague, Fisher and Isaac Whitney, William Dunton, Edward Low, William Clark, Archibald Armstrong, Cord Knowles, John Armstrong, Morris and Hastings, settled in 1794 and '98, and Nathan Scott and Andrew Robson in 1809. The first birth was that of Polly Mower, in Oct. 1796; and a child of Mr. Mower was the first that died. The first marriage was that of Jabes Metcalf and Nancy Torrey. Nancy Torrey taught the first school, in 1803, at West Hollow. Elias Lee kept the first tavern, at the same place, in 1806; Abraham Maxfield the first store, at Italy Hollow; Asahel Stone, Jr., erected the first saw and grist mill, at the same place, at an early date.

⁸ Two Bap., M. E., and Presb.

from the head of the w. branch of Crooked Lake n. to the n. branch. The highest point in this valley is about 70 ft. above the lake. The ridge on the w. rises gradually for 3 or 4 mi. and attains a height of about 700 ft. above the lake, where the surface spreads out into a rolling upland. The soil is a gravelly and slaty loam, and is well adapted to both pasturage and tillage. Branchport, (p. v.), situated at the head of the w. branch of Crooked Lake, contains 3 churches and about 55 houses. Kimneys Corners (Bluff Point p. o.) is situated in the n. part of the town; Shermans Hollow and Yatesville are p. offices. The first settlement was made by Jemima Wilkinson, in 1789.¹ In that year crops of wheat were harvested in the town, and a mill was erected that made flour the same season. The first, and for a long time the only, religious services in town were conducted by Jemima, at her own house. There are 4 churches in town.²

MIDDLESEX—was formed in 1789, as "Augusta." Its name was changed April 6, 1808. Potter was taken off in 1832, and a part was annexed to Potter in 1856. It is the n. w. corner town, lying upon the n. bank of Canandaigua Lake. Its surface consists chiefly of high ridges separated by narrow valleys. The summits are 500 to 600 ft. above the lake. The valley of West River divides the ridges, and the valley of a small stream known as Boat Brook divides the v. ridge into two peaks, the n. of which is known as "Bare Hill." The soil is clayey on the summits of the hills, and gradually changes to a deep gravelly loam in the valleys. Near Federal Hollow, a mile from Rushville, is an inflammable spring.³ Middlesex Center (Middlesex p. o.) contains 3 churches and 20 dwellings. Overackers Corners is a hamlet. The first settlement was made in 1789. Judge Potter, one of the surveyors of Phelps and Gorham's purchase, was the original purchaser of the town, and took an active part in its first settlement.⁴ Many of the first settlers were adherents of Jemima Wilkinson; and for a considerable time there was no other religious association in the town. There are now 4 churches.⁵

MILO—was formed from Benton, March 6, 1818. A part of Torrey was taken off in 1851. It lies on the n. border of the co., between Seneca and Crooked Lakes. Its surface rises from Seneca Lake in a gentle and gradual slope for 2 mi., where it attains an elevation of about 400 to 500 ft. From this summit the land spreads out into an undulating region, gradually declining on the w. to the valley of Crooked Lake. The soil is principally a gravelly loam, with some clay in the vicinity of Penn Yan and on the shore of Seneca Lake. Penn Yan,⁶ (p. v.), the county seat, was incorp. April 27, 1833. It is situated at the foot of Crooked Lake, and is an important station on the Elmira, Jefferson & Canandaigua R. R. A daily steamer connects it with Hammondsport, at the head of Crooked Lake. It contains 6 churches, a high school,⁷ 2 newspaper establishments, and a bank. Pop. 2,277,—2,114 in Milo, 163 in Benton. Milo Center (p. v.) contains 150 inhabitants; and Himrods Corners (Milo p. v.) 78. The first settlement was commenced in the n. part, by the followers of Jemima Wilkinson, from R. I., in 1787.⁸ The first religious services were conducted by Jemima Wilkinson. There are now 10 churches in town.⁹

POTTER¹⁰—was formed from Middlesex, April 26, 1832, and part of Middlesex was annexed Dec. 18, 1856. It lies near the center of the n. border of the co. Its surface is hilly in the s. w., and rolling in the center and n. Flint Creek, the principal stream, flows northerly through near the center of the town. A swamp of 1 to 1½ mi. wide extends along its course for 8 mi. n. of Potter Center. The soil is a slaty loam in the s. w., and a gravelly and sandy loam, with an intermixture of clay, in the remaining parts. Rushville (p. v.) is partly in Gorham, Ontario co., but principally in the n. w. part of this town. Pop. 583,—408 in Potter, 175 in Gorham. Potter Center (Potter p. o.) contains 20 houses. Voak is a p. o. on the line of Benton. Settlement was begun in 1788, by the followers of Jemima Wilkinson. The most prominent among them were William

² Bap., M. E., Presb., Univ. ³ Beck's Mineralogy N. Y., p. 166. ⁴ Among the first settlers were Michael Pierce, John Walford, James French, John Blair, James Lewis, and John McNear, all from R. I. William Bassett taught the first school, in 1790; Jesse Gilbert kept the first tavern, near Rushville, and Nelson Wilder the first store. John Walford, Jr., built the first sawmill. The first death was that of Mrs. Lucy Walford, in 1791.

⁵ Two M. E., Bap., and Free Will Bap.

⁷ The Penn Yan High School was incorporated as an academy in 1857. The building is now in process of erection.

⁸ The first settlers were Abraham Dayton, Richard Smith, Jas. Parker, John Lawrence, Stephen Card, Samuel Hartwell, Heskiah Townsend, David and Feleg Briggs, John Supplee, Elijah and Micajah Brown, David Wagener, and Adam Hunt and his sons, Abel and Silas. The first death was that of Mrs. Jedediah Holman, in 1788. As Jemima Wilkinson's creed was the dominant religion of the town at that period and for some time after, there were no marriages, and of course no known births. It was an era in which people died and none were legitimately born. Heskiah Townsend kept the first inn, a little n. of Penn Yan, and James Hill the first store.

⁹ 3 Bap., 2 M. E., Cong., Wes. Meth., Presb., Prot. E., and R. C. ¹⁰ Named from Arnold Potter, an original proprietor and the first settler in town.

Potter and his sons William, Arnold, Simeon, and Edward, who had purchased the whole township.¹ Rev. Mr. Haskill was the first settled preacher, in 1796. There are 11 churches in town.²

STARKEY³—was formed from Reading, (Schuyler co.,) April 6, 1824. It is the s. e. corner town of the co. Its surface is a gradual slope from the bluffs which border upon Seneca Lake to the w. border of the town, where it attains an elevation of about 700 ft. The bluffs upon the lake in the s. half of the town are 100 to 200 ft. high and nearly perpendicular. In the s. part, a ridge breaks the uniformity of the slope near the center. Big Stream and Rock Stream flow into Seneca Lake, falling several hundred ft. in their course. The soil is clay along the lake, a sandy loam in the s. part, and a gravelly loam in the n. Dundee, (p. v.,) incorp. June 26, 1848, situated on Big Stream, in the w. part, contains 4 churches, the Dundee Academy, a bank, and a newspaper office. Pop. 732. Eddytown (p. v.) contains a church and the Starkey Seminary.⁴ Pop. 123. Rock Stream (p. v.) contains 25 houses, and Starkey Corners (Starkey p. o.) 20. Big Stream Point (p. o.) and Shannons Corners are hamlets. Settlement began in 1800.⁵ Rev. Mr. Clark conducted the first religious services, in 1808. There are 8 churches in town.⁶

TORREY⁷—was formed from Benton and Milo, Nov. 14, 1851. It lies upon the s. border of the co., on the shore of Seneca Lake. Its surface consists of a slope rising from the lake to the w. border, to an elevation of 400 to 500 ft. Crooked Lake Outlet flows through a deep, narrow, and rocky valley. Its whole fall from Crooked to Seneca Lake is 271 ft. The soil on the lake shore is clayey, and in the center and w. a sandy and gravelly loam. West Dresden⁸ (p. v.) is located on Seneca Lake, at the terminus of Crooked Lake Canal. It is a landing for the Seneca Lake steamers. Pop. 365. The town was settled by the followers of Jemima Wilkinson, mostly from New England, in 1787.⁹ Jemima was the first preacher. There are now 2 churches in town; Presb. and M. E.

¹ Rouse Perry, and Benj., Jesse and Joshua Brown came with the Potters and settled in the s. part of the town. They were followed by Elias Gilbert, James French, Abram, Isaac, and Jacob Lane, Francis and Peleg Briggs, Jr., Edward Craft, Amariah Keyes, M. Sheffield, David Southerland, Nathan and Calvin Loomis, Abiel Thomas, and George Green. The first birth was that of Joshua Briggs; the first marriage, that of Amariah Keyes and a daughter of Major C. Craft, in 1796; and the first death, that of James Lewis, in 1796. Arnold Potter built the first saw and grist mill, in 1792. The first public house was opened in 1792, by Elias Gilbert, and the first store in 1801, by John Griffin.

⁵ William Eddy, Archibald Ellis, — Jacobs, Matthew Royce, — Gustin, Abner Hurd, and his son Gen. Timothy Hurd were among the first settlers. Andrew Harrison kept the first inn, at Eddytown, in 1806; and Hervey Smith the first store, at the same place, in 1809. The first sawmill was built by Timothy Hurd, in 1807. Rhoda Royce taught the first school, in 1809.

⁶ 3 Presb., 2 M. E., Bap., and 3 Christian.

⁷ Named from Henry Torrey.

⁸ Usually called "Dresden."

⁹ The first settlers were Asahel Stone, Abel Knathan and Jonathan Botsford, Benedict Robinson, Thos. Hathaway, Jedediah Holmes, Eliza Luther, David Fish, James Brown, Robert Buckley, and Eliphalet Norris. The first marriage was that of Benedict Robinson and Susannah Brown, Sept. 1, 1792; and the first death, that of Mrs. Jedediah Holmes, in 1788. Thomas Hathaway kept the first inn, in 1790; and Eliphalet Norris the first store, in 1792. The first mills were built by Charles Williamson, in 1793.

TROY UNIVERSITY.

This Institution was opened for the admission of students September 9, 1858, and the collegiate department is now fully organized, with the following members of the Faculty of Arts:

REV. JOHN MCCLINTOCK, D.D., LL.D.,
President, and Professor of Moral Science.
MARVIN R. VINCENT, A.M.,
Professor of the Latin Language and Literature.
CHARLTON T. LEWIS, A.M.,
Professor of Pure Mathematics.

JAMES STRONG, S.T.D.,
Vice-President, and Professor of Biblical Literature.
OGDEN N. ROOD, A.M.,
Professor of Chemistry.
ALEXANDER MAO WHORTER, A.M.,
Professor of Philosophy.

HENRY H. HADLEY, A.M.,
Professor of the Indo-European Languages and Literature.

THE COLLEGE GROUNDS

Comprise a plat of thirty-six acres, of rare beauty and healthfulness of position; and the building is one of the most imposing and well arranged of the kind in the country, affording accommodations for about one hundred and fifty students, including chapel, recitation-rooms, dormitories, boarding hall, and professors' apartments.

THE PLAN OF INSTRUCTION

Embraces the most approved features of the American College system, with all the essential advantages of the English and German Universities, giving an opportunity for the most thorough and general literary culture.

THE UNIVERSITY DEPARTMENT PROPER

Will be inaugurated by appropriate courses of lectures on the higher branches of science, art, and literature, as soon as there shall be graduates prepared to enter upon it. The design of the founders of the institution is to make it a sound Christian (but not sectarian) school of the highest class, both in scholarship and practical efficiency. The course of study includes

A SCIENTIFIC DEPARTMENT,

ROCHESTER COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE,

N. W. BENEDICT and L. R. SATTERLEE, Principals.

CORNER OF ATWATER AND OREGON STS., ROCHESTER, MONROE COUNTY, N. Y.

To those desirous of being well prepared to enter

COLLEGE,

Or to take a high position in professional or commercial life, affords a complete course of systematic study, based upon the most thorough discipline of the intellectual and moral powers.

THIS INSTITUTION

The superiority of its Classical instruction is widely known.

ITS MATHEMATICAL AND OTHER DEPARTMENTS

Are equally efficient, being each conducted by professional teachers of the highest order.

The Female Department,

In charge of an experienced and highly accomplished preceptress, offers superior advantages to young ladies, to whom

DIPLOMAS

Are awarded on the completion of the prescribed course of study.

Students from Abroad:

Are provided with the best accommodations in a boarding department, under the supervision of the Principals.

Circulars containing more particular information may be obtained by application to the principals, Rochester, Monroe county, N. Y.

TROY FEMALE SEMINARY.

This Institution offers the accumulated advantages of nearly fifty years of successful operation. Every facility is provided for a thorough course of useful and ornamental education, under the direction of a corps of more than twenty professors and teachers. The members of the Institution have the benefit of Lectures of the highest order, on SCIENCE, HISTORY, LITERATURE, ART, &C. &C.

And the use of a valuable library, an extensive Philosophical Apparatus, a well selected Cabinet of Minerals, and Shells, Maps, Charts, and Models.

Superior Music Teachers are constantly employed in the Seminary. Great Attention is given to the French Language.

THE CLASSES IN DRAWING AND PAINTING, IN OIL AND WATER COLORS,

Are under the direction of instructors of long experience and tried ability. A large and choice collection of Pictures is constantly before them for study and for pattern.

The pupils are received into the family of the principals, in which every arrangement is made for their physical education and the improvement of their manners and morals. They occupy private rooms, two in each, the rooms of the female teachers and that of an experienced nurse being among those of the young ladies.

Mr. or Mrs. JOHN H. WILLARD, Troy, N. Y.

AT FORT EDWARD, WASHINGTON CO., N. Y., ON THE RAILROAD.

REV. JOSEPH E. KING, A.M., PRINCIPAL.

This Institution was opened December, 1854, since which time the Regents' Annual Reports show it to have been the BEST SUSTAINED BOARDING SEMINARY IN THE STATE.

Nearly every county in the State, and two-thirds of the States of the Union, have been its patrons. The following are some of the grounds of its claim to the popular favor:—

Its substantial brick buildings, well guarded against fire, and which, by the central position of its common Dining Hall, Chapel, and an ample suit of class rooms, accessible respectively to the two separate departments by distinct entrances, are most admirably adapted to the safe and successful co-education of ladies and gentlemen, the two departments being at all hours absolutely under the control of the Faculty. Also its noble Library and Apparatus.

ITS LIBERAL PROVISION FOR THE ABLEST INSTRUCTION

In each branch and department of study; three professors and teachers being devoted exclusively to the common English studies, two each to the Mathematics and Classics, one respectively to Commercial Instruction, to Natural Science, to Modern Languages, and to Painting, while no less than four have in charge the department of Music. Rare facilities are thus afforded to prepare for teaching; while desirable situations are procured for young ladies who graduate in the prescribed Course of Studies.

It is a part of the well established system of this Christian Institute, to conserve and promote the health, manners, and morals of its pupils. The Principal wishes it distinctly understood that he becomes personally responsible to parents for the moral and social well being of their daughters while in attendance at this Institute.

It provides good, spacious rooms, plainly but suitably furnished; and wholesome and sufficient Board, of a quality and variety satisfactory to its patrons.

ITS REMARKABLY MODERATE RATES.

To many families the difference in the cost of maintaining a son or daughter at home or at this Institute, would be scarcely appreciable. One hundred and three dollars per year, pays for Board, furnished room, fuel, washing and tuition in common English. Extra branches at corresponding rates. A student may enter for a single term, or at any time in the term and pay for the residue only.

There are three terms of fourteen weeks each. Winter Term opens December 1st, 1859; Spring Term opens March 23d, 1860; Fall Term opens August 16th, 1860. For circulars, or for rooms, apply to the Principal.

Turn to the chapter in the Gazetteer descriptive of Fort Edward, also to chapter of statistics of Academies, and notice the Washington Co. Seminary.

TESTIMONIALS OF EXAMINING COMMITTEES.

REV. WM. SCOTT, of Montreal, Secretary, 1855. The Committee found the buildings, in their construction and specific arrangements, better adapted to their purpose than any other ever visited by them.

REV. S. WASHBURN, of Troy, Secretary, November, 1856. We were highly gratified with the good order and decorum apparent in every department of the Institute.

REV. M. BATES, of Schenectady, Secretary, March, 1857. There is, we think, no Institution, not wholly devoted to this object, where equal facilities are afforded for acquiring, at trifling expense, a thorough business education.

PROF. JOHN NEWMAN, A.M., of Union College, Secretary, Nov. 18, 1857. The Committee have found the most satisfactory evidence in its able Board of Instruction and Government, its skillful financial management, as well as in the extent and sterling character of its patronage, that the Fort Edward Institute is a signal success.

While the Institution is in all departments worthy of entire confidence, the Committee feel called upon to mention the department of Music and that of Painting, as decidedly superior to any thing we have ever heard of or seen in any similar Institution.

REV. J. K. CHERMAN, of Schenectady, Secretary, July, 1857.

The gastronomic department, under the care of Mr. A. K. HASTON, the Steward, is finely managed. An abundant supply of well cooked food is provided.

REV. R. H. ROBINSON, Secretary, Saratoga Springs, Nov. 25, 1858. The peculiar energy of the Principal pervades every department of instruction, embracing eighteen teachers, a number sufficient to permit a subdivision of classes, so that none need be neglected. Many students have consecrated their young hearts on the altar of Christianity, and will go forth with great power, rightly directed, to bless the church and the world.

PROF. C. T. LEWIS, A.M., Troy University, March, 1859. The practical drill was admirable. Attention had been given to the powers of ready and neat expression, but the basis lay in a clear comprehension of facts and principles, for which good language was made an ornament, not a substitute. Perhaps no feature of the exercises was more charming than their entire fairness, which was at once transparent and unobtrusive.

REV. B. HAWLEY, A.M., Chairman, West Troy, June 23, 1860. In the circle of our large Academies, furnishing the highest advantages at the lowest charges, I know of no one sustaining a better reputation than FORT EDWARD INSTITUTE. 9 *

This institution, in its plan and arrangements, has regard to the physical as well as the moral and intellectual training of its members.

THE COURSE OF INSTRUCTION

Is liberal and thorough, such as experience has proved to be most effectual for this purpose. By it, students are prepared for any class in college, for the scientific schools, or for commercial life. The

ANCIENT LANGUAGES

are taught critically and with a view to sound scholarship and not to mere superficial acquaintance. The

is extensive. The preparation of pupils who have passed through it, and their success elsewhere, gives the best evidence of faithfulness and skill in this very essential department of instruction. Very many are the unsolicited testimonials received on this point. Special attention is given to the

MODERN LANGUAGES:

French, Spanish, and German form an important part of the course of study, and are taught as spoken languages by well qualified masters. The

also, in its elements, as well as in its higher departments, receives more than ordinary notice, and is not made subordinate to any other study.

MORAL AND RELIGIOUS TRAINING

is carefully regarded, as in every well ordered household; but no interference is attempted with the peculiar tenets of any faith. Seats are provided for the pupils in both the Episcopal and Presbyterian Churches.

PHYSICAL EDUCATION.

The complete arrangements made for this generally neglected object, and the success that has attended them, deserve to be specially noticed. Under their influence, we have seen the delicate and almost puny boy become the robust and enduring youth, able to sustain continued application and to perform in after life an amount of intellectual labor that only a sound and vigorous development could make possible. In connection with the

GYMNASIUM AND THE RIDING SCHOOL

AND THE MILITARY EXERCISES.

The infantry and artillery drills; and, while these receive a minuteness of attention not often given to them, and are so used as to produce physically a permanent effect, they have no tendency to create a desire, as experience has shown, for a military life. The system, as here arranged, has been chosen for the great benefits that result from it. But, although a military school, the institution, it must be distinctly understood, is not for the training of those who are vicious or unmanageable under any other system. Should any of this class, by accident or misrepresentation, ever be received, they will, on the manifestation of such character, be at once returned to their parents. The feelings of the principals, not less than their intimate relations with their pupils, look to other associations and other results. Confidence, patience, and kindness on their part, truthfulness, honor, and generous sentiment on the pupil's, are the basis and the bond of union between them. No boy who is insensible to considerations of this kind is desired in the school, nor can he long remain connected with it.

Pupils are received whenever a vacancy occurs; but, as the number is limited and places are usually filled in advance, applications, to prevent disappointment, should be made as early as possible.

Further information may be obtained from the gentlemen named as references, or by addressing the principals.

PACKER COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE, BROOKLYN.
A. CRUTTENDEN, A.M., PRINCIPAL.

GARDEN FRONT, LIVINGSTON STREET.

PACKER COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE, BROOKLYN HEIGHTS, L. I.

This Institution claims to give to females all the advantages for thorough and complete education that are enjoyed by the other sex in our best appointed Colleges.

It is liberally endowed, and is under the patronage of the State.

Its location, in the city of Brooklyn, opposite New York, enables it to command all the educational resources of the metropolis; while no country village is more quiet, beautiful, or healthy.

THE COURSE OF INSTRUCTION

Is under the direction of A. Crittenden, A.M., who has devoted his whole life to female education. He is assisted by twenty-four professors and teachers; and the course of instruction embraces the modern languages, with Latin, the various branches of Literature, History, Mathematics, Chemistry, Natural, Moral, and Intellectual Philosophy, Music, Drawing, Painting, &c. &c.

THE LABORATORY

Is a model of its kind, and furnished with every necessary article of apparatus.

THE OBSERVATORY

Has an excellent achromatic telescope of six inches object glass. It is equatorially mounted, moved by clockwork, &c.

THE CABINETS

Are amply provided with minerals, shells, &c. One or two articles of apparatus particularly arrest the attention of the observer,—one of Ross's Compound Microscopes, which magnifies 1800 diameters, also Barlow's large Planetarium, eleven feet in diameter.

The accommodations for pupils from abroad are intended to afford all the comforts of home, and to secure for them social, intellectual, and moral culture.

CHICAGO MERCANTILE COLLEGE

DESIGN.

The object of this chain of Colleges is to prepare young men in an essential manner for the duties of a business life, in giving them a thorough knowledge of the sciences which secure that end.

POUGHKEEPSIE COLLEGIATE SCHOOL.

A BOARDING SCHOOL FOR BOYS OF ALL AGES.

This school was established in 1836. From that time to this there has been but one change in the principalship,—which occurred after the death of the late principal, Charles Bartlett. It has always enjoyed a liberal patronage, drawn from all sections. During the past year pupils have been in attendance from twelve States.

The students prepare their lessons in one large room, where one of the Principals presides.

FRENCH, SPANISH, AND GERMAN

Are each taught by a native teacher.

The principals and their families, the teachers and pupils, all reside in one building and eat at the same table. The pupils are not allowed to leave the premises without permission. The building is lighted with gas, and heated with hot air furnaces. No expense has been spared to attain thorough ventilation. The pupils' rooms are furnished with a carpet, clothes-press, single bed, wash-stand with bowl and pitcher to each pupil.

In short, no effort has been omitted to make this in every respect

A FIRST CLASS SCHOOL.

The annual expense is two hundred and fifty dollars. Spanish and German, Music and Drawing, are the only extras.

We refer to the following gentlemen, most of whom have been patrons of the school:—

PUBLISHERS OF THE NATIONAL SERIES OF STANDARD SCHOOL BOOKS.

THE National School Series is prepared by the best educators in the country, and designed with special reference to the thorough Education of the Youth of our land. Great care has been taken to exclude sectional or sectarian matter, so that the series is regarded as truly the NATIONAL SCHOOL SERIES. The favor which these books have received from all parts of the United States warrants the Publishers in calling upon their friends to examine each of the works comprising this series, (provided they have not already done so,) with a view of making them their STANDARD TEXT-BOOKS. The following is a part of the series:—

The National Series of Arithmetics and Mathematics. By Professor CHARLES DAVIES, LL.D., formerly of the United States Military Academy, and now of Columbia College. (The standard of New York, Baltimore, New Orleans, Buffalo, Rochester, Milwaukee, and other large cities.) The higher course of Mathematics are used in most of the Colleges and Academies throughout the Union.

The National Series of Geographies. By JAMES MONTEITH and FRANCIS McNALLY. (The standard of New Orleans, New York, Buffalo, Milwaukee, Newark, Brooklyn, and other cities.)

The National Series of School Histories. By EMMA WILLARD and JAMES MONTEITH. (Daniel Webster said of Mrs. Willard's History of the United States, "I keep it near me as a valuable book of reference, accurate in facts and dates." It was also highly recommended by Henry Clay, and many other of our most illustrious Statesmen and Educators.)

The National Series of School Readers and Spellers. By RICHARD G. PARKER and JAMES M. WATSON. Recommended, wherever they are known, as the most beautiful and the most practical Readers and Spellers ever published.

The National Series of English Grammar, Illustrated with Diagrams. By S. W. CLARK. Clark's method of teaching this hitherto dry subject makes it one of the most interesting studies in the language.

High School Literature. By MONMONT & MCJILTON, of Baltimore.

Brookfield's First Book in Composition. For Beginners. 40c.

W. W. Smith's Orthographical Books. 4 Nos.
